submit, for the information of His Excellency the Commander-in-ting that took place at Malakand between the dates of 26th July and

'd by telegram of the events of each day, but I have been prevented
r before by the incessant nature of the fighting.

The 26th, I was informed by Major H. A. Deane, Political Agent, who possible trouble, that matters had assumed a very disquieting aspect, of the entire failure of the residents of the Swat Valley to stop the akir, who had gained immense influence on the superstitious and religious nd that he thought that the Guides should be called up, and arrangements turn out. The Guides were consequently wired for at once, and all Regiments and Adjutants were ordered to meet me immediately.

hese officers and gave them instructions to be prepared to turn out at any tions had hardly been given when Major Deane joined me, and informed me in that the Fakir was moving towards Aladand, and that in his would turn out at once and prevent his seizing the Amandara Pass. Orders ued by me for the Officer Commanding, 45th Sikhs, with 2 guns of No. 8 attery, 2 companies, 31st Punjab Infantry, and the Squadron, XIth Bengal at midnight and seize the Amandara Pass. The remainder of the column to der my own command.

Depu rs were recalled from leave and orders given that all regimental baggage was Birbhuf der guards in their own camps, there being no time to strike tents and carry them Judge rt.

45 P.M. a telegram was received from the Officer Commanding, Chakdarra, saying Jud ces of Pathans were marching towards Chakdarra from the east along both banks of ab and at 10 P.M. Major Deane arrived at the Brigade Office with the news that a Levy had just ar A.B, giving information that the Fakir had passed Khar and was advancing kand, and t neither levies nor people would act against him, and that the hills to the east camp were covered with Pathans. It was at once seen that a night-attack on the camp intended, and the "alarm" was immediately sounded, the troops moving at once to their osts.

7. This had just been completed when the first shots were fired and a general attack was made on the camp by the Buddhist and Graded Roads. At the same time firing from the direction of the North Camp, and the glow of star shells showed that the North Camp was also threatened.

8. In the first rush the enemy succeeded in over-powering the picquet on the Graded Road, and penetrated into the camp behind the one in which were the camps of the Sappers and Miners and Field Engineer Park.

9. On the extreme flank the Buddhist Road had been secured by the 45th Rattray's Sikhs under Lieutenant-Colonel McRae, who had, on the first alarm being sounded, despatched Major Taylor with a party to secure the gorge where the road reaches the top of the pass. Lieutenant-Colonel McRae, followed immediately with 30 men, caught up Major Taylor, and they together advanced to the gorge, and almost immediately encountered the head of the enemy's column, numbering several hundred men who were creeping silently up the Buddhist Road. They opened a very heavy fire on them and the enemy at once broke into yells and screams and tried to rush them.

10. The small party held on to their position manfully till the enemy clambered up on to the rocks that overlooked the gorge on both sides, and from this position rolled down rocks and fired on them. Lieutenant Barff and some more men of the 45th Sikhs had by this time arrived and been sent by Lieutenant-Colonel McRae to protect his right flank round which the enemy were trying to make a way. The remainder of the regiment now came up, and Lieutenant-Colonel McRae retired to a more defensible position about 50 yards in rear in which he remained and defied the enemy all night. Just before he retired Major Taylor was mortally wounded.

11. There is no doubt that the gallant resistance made by this small body in the gorge, against vastly superior numbers, till the arrival of the rest of the regiment, saved the camp from being rushed on that side, and I cannot speak too highly of the behaviour of Lieutenant-Colonel McRae and Major Taylor on this occasion.

12. On the left, on the alarm being sounded, the picquets supplied by the 24th Punjab Infantry had been doubled, one company of the same regiment under Lieutenant Costello was sent to line the walls of the enclosure facing the gorge through which the road to the North Camp passes, and another company under Lieutenant Climo was sent to line the wall of the Bazaar facing the gorge up which the Graded Road passes. The remainder of the regiment being held in readiness to support any part of the line that required it.

15. The enemy having over-powered the picquet on the Abbott (Graded) high ground in rear of the position from which they kept up a heavy fire a charging with great determination right up to the Abattis which was lined Miners. Twice they penetrated, once capturing the Quarter Guard, in wh[ich] a portion of the company. The fighting lasted till 4-30 A.M., the enemy withdrew.

18. At daylight it was discovered that the North Camp had not been seriously attacked and that all was [illegible] Consequently orders were sent to the 31st Punjab Infantry, with the Squadron, XIth Bengal Lancers, and [illegible] guns, supported by a wing of the 24th Punjab Infantry to pursue the enemy, the majority of whom had withdrawn in the direction of Kuar and Barkhelyla.

19. They pursued for a short distance up the valley when they came across a very large gathering of the enemy, and as it was evident that this attempt on our camp had been the signal for a large tribal gathering, I ordered Major Gillon, who was in charge of the pursuit, to retire and bring in the stores, ammunition and treasure of the troops in North Camp to the Kotal, and encamp there, as it was now late in the day.

20. The Squadron, XIth Bengal Lancers, under Captain Wright, which had covered the advance of Major Gillon's force had pushed right on to Chakmarra, being fired on the whole way, and Captain Wright was only determined to stop at that place, where his party has proved a useful reinforcement to the two companies, 45th Sikhs, under Lieutenant Raitray and Lieutenant Wheatley, forming the garrison of the post.

21. The rest of the force retired to their respective camps. The manner in which Lieutenant Climo, on whom the command of the 24th Punjab Infantry devolved when Lieutenant-Colonel Lamb and Captain Sheridan were wounded, carried out this retirement is most praiseworthy, and I shall have occasion to draw attention to the good work done by this officer on subsequent occasions.

22. The withdrawal of all baggage and stores, from North Camp to the Kotal, was commenced at once, but not to be carried out, however, to bring up the E. P. tents, all the camels being at Dargai, the camel equipage was left by my order, and was burnt by the enemy in the night. Almost every tent had been struck by Major Gillon's force, but there was no time to do more. All day large bodies of the enemy were seen coming from different directions in the valley, and joining the enemy who were visible all over the hill tops, and it was certain that last night's fight was not merely an attempt to do as much harm as possible and then clear off, but the beginning of an important movement to try and turn us out of the valley and regain possession of the Pass, and that we must prepare for another attack in the night.

23. They did not wait till night, however, for, while the stores, etc., from North Camp were being sent up to the Kotal, the troops in North Camp were threatened by the enemy on the hills to the west, and the retirement was completed under cover of fire from the 24th Punjab Infantry and the Guides Cavalry, who had arrived in camp at 8-30 A.M. that morning.

24. At about 6-45 P.M., as the 31st Punjab Infantry were arriving in the Kotal Camp, a body of the enemy about 8000 strong made a sudden attack down from the hills on the west, and driving in No. 2 Picquet of the 24th Punjab Infantry tried to rush the camp. Lieutenant Climo

t 8-30 P.M. the enemy attacked with their whole force all along the line, but were verywhere. The force in the Kotal this night was composed of—

24th Punjab Infantry,
6 Companies, 45th Sikhs,
Guides Infantry,
Guides Cavalry,
No. 5 Company, Queen's Own Sappers and Miners,
No. 8 Bengal Mountain Battery, and was disposed as follows:

On the Right Flank.—Holding a position about 50 yards in a rear of that which they finally held on the night of the 20th were the 45th Sikhs, with 2 guns, and supported by 100 of the Guides Infantry under Lieutenant McCaskill.

2 guns.

On the Left.—Holding the hill to the north of camp and overlooking the short road to North Camp were the 24th Punjab Infantry and 2 guns.

28. The 31st Punjab Infantry being short of officers, Lieutenant Maclean was sent from the Guides to assist Major Gibbs. The position on the right and the centre enclosure were hardly pressed the whole night.

29. About 100 yards in advance of the north-east corner of the central enclosure was a fortified serai, and, in order to check the advance of the enemy along the Graded Road, a party of 25 men, 31st Punjab Infantry, under Subadar Syed Ahmed Shah was sent to occupy it with orders to block up the only entrance to the Serai. The enemy made a most determined attack on this Serai, but the garrison defended it gallantly from the commencement till 3 A.M. when the enemy succeeded in setting fire to it, and broke through one wall through which opening they rushed. The garrison now could hold on no longer, and with the aid of a ladder let themselves down over the wall nearest the camp, and retired to the enclosure, bringing their wounded with them. Nine of their number, I regret to say, were killed and ten wounded.

30. Subadar Syed Ahmed Shah was himself wounded. He was promoted to a commission on the recommendation of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief for a previous act of bravery, and I would like to call His Excellency's attention to his gallant conduct on this occasion also.

31. The darkness and the noise of firing all round prevented their condition being appreciated by the troops behind the breast-work, otherwise assistance would most surely have been sent them. Nothing could have been finer than the way these few men stuck to their post till it was made absolutely untenable.

32. The 24th Punjab Infantry were also hotly engaged all enemy began to press close upon them from the heights on the advanced up the spur to meet them with 2 companies, covered by his position and 1 other company. The enemy stuck determinedly many Martinis with them and kept up a heavy fire on Lieutenant C rolling stones down on them. Lieutenant Climo, however advanced, him from position to position, and pursuing them for some two miles. He estim loss at 40. 34. 29th July.—On the morning of the 29th July signalling communication was re-established with Chakdarra, and it was learned that the fort had been attacked on the night of the 26th by a force, 1,000 strong, who had been repulsed without any loss to the garrison, and that they had since been attacked twice by day and twice by night.

35. At 4 P.M. this day (29th) one squadron, 11th Bengal Lancers, 88 strong, marched into Malakand under command of Major Beatson. In the evening the 38th Dogras and 35th Sikhs and details of the Guides arrived at Dargai under Colonel Reid. The heat on the road had been intense and 21 men of the 35th Sikhs died of heat apoplexy. I ordered Colonel Reid to halt at Dargai the next day in order to give these regiments a rest. During the day the Bazaar and Serai were levelled, trees were cleared away, abattis and breast-works strengthened, and in the evening large bonfires were lighted up in front of the central position, so that the enemy advancing by the Graded Road to the attack should be obliged to cross a line of light. The result was that the central position did not have such a severe time of it this night. It was known that the enemy had been largely reinforced during the day, and a vigorous attack was anticipated.

36. It commenced at 9-30 and was perhaps more vigorously and more fiercely pushed than on any previous night. It was principally delivered on the two flanks. At 2 A.M. a tremendous assault was made and at 2-30 A.M. suddenly ceased, and the enemy withdrew having been repulsed everywhere. The loss inflicted on them must have been very great, and as day broke they could be seen dragging away the bodies of their dead over the hills.

Sir Bindon Blood arrived at noon and took over command of the force.

42. Such is the narrative of the events which took place here between the 26th July and the 1st August. Of the behaviour of the troops of all ranks, I cannot speak too highly. The courage with which they have faced overwhelming odds night after night, the endurance with which they have stood and fought with next to no sleep for 5 days and 5 nights has been beyond all praise. The trial has been a very severe one, and I trust that His Excellency will agree that they have come out of it honourably.

43. All have done well, but I should like to bring before His Excellency for favourable consideration the following names of officers and men:

24th Punjab Infantry.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. Lamb, who on the first alarm being sounded on the night of the 26th July had taken prompt action in reinforcing the outpost line held by his regiment, and later was of great assistance in directing the defence of the central enclosure till he was severely wounded.

Captain H. F. Holland showed great courage in assisting to drive a number of the enemy out of the central enclosure and was severely wounded in doing so.

I would specially wish to mention Lieutenant S. H. Climo, who commanded the 24th Punjab Infantry after Lieutenant-Colonel Lamb and Captain Holland had been wounded. This officer has shown soldierly qualities and ability of the highest order. He has commanded the regiment with dash and enterprise and shown a spirit and exam[illegible]dia, all ranks. I trust His Excellency will be pleased to favourably [illegible] proved himself an officer who will do well in any position and is w[illegible]

Lieutenant A. K. Rawlins has behaved well all through. H[illegible] Excellency for the plucky way in which he went to the fort on the night o[illegible] down reinforcements, and again for the dash he showed in leading his men o[illegible] of which Lieutenant Climo speaks most highly.

Lieutenant E. W. Costello, 22nd Punjab Infantry, temporarily attached t[illegible] Infantry has behaved exceedingly well and is the subject of a separate recommen[illegible]

31st Punjab Infantry.

Major M. I. Gibbs, who commanded the regiment in the absence of [illegible] skill and in every way to my satisfaction.

Lieutenant H. B. Ford, Acting Adjutant, 31st Punjab Infantry, rendered [illegible] helping to bring in a wounded sepoy during the withdrawal from Nor[illegible] behaved with courage in resisting an attack of the enemy on the night of the 2[illegible] severely wounded.

Nature of [illegible]

Surgeon-Lieutenant J. Hugo, attached to 31st Punjab Infantry, rendered valuable [illegible] the night of the 28th in saving Lieutenant H. B Ford from bleeding to death. Lieutena[illegible] was wounded and a branch of an artery was cut. There were no means of securing the [illegible] and Surgeon-Lieutenant Hugo for two hours stopped the bleeding by compressing the arte[illegible] his fingers. Had he not had the strength to do so, Lieutenant Ford must have died. [illegible] the morning thinking that the enemy had effected an entrance into Camp, Surgeon-Lie[illegible] J. Hugo picked up Lieutenant Ford with one arm, and, still holding the artery with the fin[illegible] the other hand, carried him to a place of safety.

45th Rattray's Sikhs.

Colonel H. A. Sawyer was away on leave when hostilities broke out, but he returned on th[illegible] 29th and took over command of the Regiment from Lieutenant-Colonel McRae, and from tha[illegible] time rendered me every assistance.

I would specially bring to notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief the name of Lieutenant-Colonel H. N. McRae, who commanded the regiment on the 26th, 27th and 28th. His prompt action in seizing the gorge at the top of the Buddhist Road on the night of the 29th and the gallant way in which he held it undoubtedly saved the camp from being rushed on that side. For this, and for the able way in which he commanded the regiment during the first three days of the fighting, I would commend him to His Excellency's favourable consideration.

Also Lieutenant R. M. Barff, Officiating Adjutant of the Regiment, who, Lieutenant-Colonel McRae reports, behaved with great courage and rendered him valuable assistance.

The Guides.

I also wish to bring the name of Lieutenant-Colonel R. B. Adams of the Guides to His Excellency's notice. The prompt way in which the corps mobilised and their grand march reflect great credit on him and the corps. Since arrival at the Malakand on the 27th July and till the morning of the 1st August, Lieutenant-Colonel Adams was in command of the Lower Camp, i.e., that occupied by central and left position, and in the execution of this command, and the arrangements he made for improving the defences, he gave me every satisfaction. I have also to express my appreciation of the way in which he conducted the cavalry reconnaissance on the 1st August on which occasion his horse was shot under him.

Great credit is due to Lieutenant P. C. Eliott-Lockhart, who was in command of the Guides Infantry, for bringing up the regiment from Mardan to Malakand in such good condition after their trying march.

Captain G. M. Baldwin, D.S.O., behaved with great courage and coolness during the reconnaissance of the 1st August, and though severely wounded by a sword cut on the head, he remained on the ground and continued to lead his men.

Lieutenant H. L. S. Maclean also behaved with courage, and displayed an excellent example on the night of the 28th July when he was severely wounded.

XIth Bengal Lancers.

Major S. B. Beatson commanded the Squadron, 11th Bengal Lancers, which arrived at Malakand on the 29th and led them with great skill and dash on the occasion of the reconnaissance on the 1st August.

No. 8, Bengal Mountain Battery.

Lieutenant F. A. Wynter was the only officer with No. 8 Bengal Mountain Battery from the 26th till the 30th July, and he commanded it during that time when all the severest of the fighting

...E Field has proved himself a good soldier. I should like especially to ... consideration. The Battery did excellent work all through.

He performed his duties with great credit, and afterwards ...ice, by his zeal and his exertions, to Lieutenant Winsloe.

Medical Staff.

Carr* has worked night and day in the hospitals in trying to ...te the sufferings of the wounded, and has most ably and efficiently aided Surgeon-Major Hassan.

Brigade Staff.

Major L. Herbert, my Deputy Assistant Adjutant and Quarter Master General, was of the greatest assistance to me by the zeal and energy with which he performed his duties from the moment the news of the approach of the enemy was received till he was severely wounded while standing next to me in the enclosure of the Sappers and Miners Camp on the night of the 26th. Since being wounded, he has carried on all his office duties on his bed. I would wish to commend his gallant conduct for the favourable consideration of the Commander-in-Chief.

Although Major H. A. Deane is in no way under my authority, I feel I am under a great obligation to him for the valuable assistance he rendered me with his advice and for volunteering to put himself at my disposal with the object of carrying on the active duties of Deputy Assistant Adjutant General when Major Herbert was wounded. He was indefatigable in assisting me in every way he could, and I am anxious to put on record my grateful appreciation of the services he rendered me.

44. The above list of names may appear to be somewhat long; but I would point out that the fighting was almost constant for a week, and was of such a close nature as to demand incessant exertion from every officer in the force, and to elicit constant acts of courage and gallant example which cannot be overlooked.

45. I would not like to close this despatch without paying a tribute to the memory of a fine soldier and charming companion whose death the whole force deplores.

Major W. W. Taylor had behaved with the greatest gallantry and dash in meeting the enemy's first charge with Lieutenant-Colonel McRae, and, had he lived, he would undoubtedly have distinguished himself in his career. His loss is a heavy one to his regiment and to the Service, and there is no one in the Brigade who does not mourn him as a friend.

I have also to deplore the death of Honorary Lieutenant L. Manley, as my Commissariat Officer, had rendered me great assistance and who died fighting manfully. His loss is a very serious one to the Brigade.

46. I attach separately for favourable consideration a list of native officers, non-commissioned officers and men who have done especially good service, some of whom I have therein recommended for the order of merit.

I trust these recommendations will meet with the favourable consideration of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

No. 2, dated Camp Mingaora, 23rd August 1897.

Endorsed by the General Officer Commanding, Malakand Field Force.

Forwarded to the Adjutant-General in India.

I fully concur in Brigadier-General Meiklejohn's favourable opinion of the troops under his command, and with his recommendation of individuals for favourable consideration.

No. 728-F., "Field Operations—Malakand," dated Simla, 15th September 1897.

From—Major-General G. deC. Morton, C.B., Adjutant-General in India,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department.

In continuation of my letter No. 727-F., dated 15th September 1897, I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to forward herewith despatches from Major-General Sir B. Blood, K.C.B., describing the operations at the Malakand and in the Swat Valley from the 1st to 3rd August 1897, including the defence and relief of Chakdarra.

2. In submitting these reports His Excellency desires to express his approbation of Sir B. Blood's energy, of the sound dispositions made by him, and of the able way in which he was supported by Brigadier-General Meiklejohn, Colonel Reid, and all ranks, under his command.

3. The advance from the Malakand to the relief of Chakdarra was carried out with skill and judgment. The troops in spite of the exertions and hardships they had undergone during the past week, advanced with great energy and drove the enemy disheartened and panic-stricken in all directions into the plain, where they were pursued by the Cavalry and still further dispersed.

4. The separate report on the defence of Chakdarra speaks for itself, but Sir George White wishes to record his admiration of the manner in which this small garrison successfully held their own for six nights and days against overwhelming numbers. He would also specially refer to the patient courage and endurance of the followers, both at the Malakand and Chakdarra, during the operations from the 26th July to the 2nd August.

5. Among many other brave acts performed during the defe draw special attention to the gallantry and devotion of the signallers the Signal Tower under very trying circumstances without water to heavy fire, continued to perform their duties in a most soldierlike mann

That the morale of the small garrison of Chakdarra was in no d strain to which they had been subjected is evident from the brilliant

6. His Excellency desires to commend the services of Major-General Sir B mentioned by him in the operations under reference, to the special consider ment of India.

No. 1, "Despatches—Malakand Field Force," Camp Amandara, 14th Au

From—MAJOR-GENERAL SIR B. BLOOD, K.C.I., Commanding the Malakand Field Force,

To—The Adjutant-General in India.

I have the honour to submit the following report of the operations carried out under my orders at the Malakand and in the Swat Valley on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd instant, including the relief of the garrison of Chakdarra Fort on the 2nd instant.

2. Having assumed command of the Malakand Field Force at Nowshera on the morning of the 31st July 1897, I proceeded at once to Mardan, where I halted to make arrangements for the onward march of the additional troops which had been detailed for the Field Force. At about 3 A.M. on the 1st August, I received a telegram from Army Head-quarters informing me that Chakdarra Fort was hard pressed, and that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief wished me to go on to the Malakand as quickly as possible with a view to the immediate relief of the first named place. I accordingly proceeded at once, and being somewhat delayed by the disturbed state of the country between Jalala and Dargai, I arrived at the Malakand about noon on the 1st August.

3. On arrival I found that Brigadier-General W H. Meiklejohn, C.B., C.M.G, Commanding at the place, was busily engaged in organising a force of all arms, with provisions and ammunition for the relief of Chakdarra Fort. He had limited the strength of the force to 1,000 rifles with 4 guns, all the Cavalry available, and a party of sappers, as he considered the detaching of a larger force from the garrison of the Malakand would involve the risk of the capture by the enemy of the outlying portions of that position and of the destruction of the buildings, stores and transport animals therein—a contingency which I agreed with him in thinking altogether inadmissible. I consequently decided on the composition and strength of the force which he proposed as under:

400 Rifles, 24th Punjab Infantry, under Major J G Ramsay.

400 Rifles, 45th Sikhs, under Colonel H. A. Sawyer.

200 Rifles, Guides Infantry, under Lieutenant P. C. Eliott-Lockhart.

2 Squadrons, Guides Cavalry, under Lieutenant G. DE H. Smith, 2nd Regiment, Central India Horse.
2 Squadrons, 11th Bengal Lancers, under Major S. B. Beatson.

4 Guns, No. 8 Bengal Mountain Battery, under Captain A. H. C. Birch, R.A.

50 Sappers, No. 5 Company, Queen's Own Sappers and Miners, under Lieutenant A. R. Winsloe, R.E.

2 Sections, Native Field Hospital, under Surgeon-Captain H. F. Whitchurch, V.C., I.M.S.

4. Brigadier-General Meiklejohn's idea of carrying out the movement of the relieving force was that it should march down to the Khar plain by the Graded Road, and that the ground near our position which commands that road, and was then in the hands of the enemy, would have as far as possible to be cleared of them in time to prevent their interfering with the march of the force; all of which was also entirely in accordance with my views. With regard to the time of the operation, I decided that it was to be carried out at dawn on the 2nd, the day of the 1st being already far spent, and the necessary arrangements not being forward enough to admit of its being properly carried out on that day; while, as a matter of course, the chances of success were greater and the probability of loss less, if the operation were undertaken at dawn instead of by daylight.

5. These matters having been satisfactorily settled, I next relieved Brigadier-General Meiklejohn of charge of the Malakand position, and gave him command of the relieving column entrusting him with the sole charge of the preparations connected with it, and directing him to have it assembled before dark with everything complete on Gretna Green there to bivouac for the night, and to be ready to march as soon as it should be light enough next morning.

6. I then handed over charge of the Malakand Fort and position to Colonel A. J. F Reid, directing him to strengthen the picquets at Castle Rock as far as possible, and to be ready with a force taken from them to attack and clear the enemy from the position marked "A"* on the sketch herewith at dawn on the morning of the 2nd.

* Hereinafter called "Goldney's Hill."

, R.A. (8th Bengal Mountain Battery).

Smith, 2nd Regiment, Central India Horse, attached to Queen's Guides (Cavalry).

. Winsloe, R.E. (No. 5 Company, Queen's Own Sappers and Miners).

ant P. C. Eliott-Lockhart, Queen's Own Corps of Guides (Infantry).

Non-Captain H. F. Whitchurch, V.C, attended to the wounded under fire throughout the fighting.

following officers under Colonel T. H. Goldney's command led their detachments under rvation with gallantry and judgment, viz.:

Lieutenant-Colonel L. J. E. Bradshaw, 35th Sikhs.

Captain L. C. H. Stainforth, 38th Dogras.

Jemadar Nawab, who commanded two guns of No. 8 Bengal Mountain Battery in support of Colonel Goldney's attack, attracted my favourable notice by his smartness, quickness and thorough knowledge of his work.

I would also wish to bring to His Excellency's notice the good work done by Major H. Burney, Gordon Highlanders, Assistant Adjutant-General, Major H. Wharry, D.S.O., Chief Commissariat Officer, and Captain A. B. Dunsterville, 1st Battalion, East Surrey Regiment, my Aide-de-Camp, the only officers of the Divisional Staff of my force who had arrived at the Malakand on the 2nd August. These officers worked very hard and were of great use to me.

20. Major H. A. Deane, C.S.I., Political Agent, Dir and Swat, was not in any way under my orders during the operations above described, but notwithstanding, I hope, I may be permitted to express the obligations under which I lie to him for valuable information and general assistance which he gave me.

21. I forward herewith in original Brigadier-General Meiklejohn's report on the fighting which took place at the Malakand from the 26th July until I arrived there on the 1st August of which my report above is really a continuation, and in doing so I would observe that I fully concur with Brigadier-General Meiklejohn's favourable opinions regarding the behaviour of the troops under his command and with his recommendations of individuals. I further append a report which I have compiled myself on the fighting at Chakdarra from the 26th July till the 2nd August when its relief was carried out under my orders.

22. I attach a sketch of the Malakand position to my report on the Malakand operations of the 1st, 2nd and 3rd August, and a sketch of Chakdarra Fort to my report on the fighting there. A list is appended to each report of the casualties which took place in the fighting to which it refers:

...lakand Field Force," dated Camp Mingaora, 20th August 1897.

...AL SIR B. BLOOD, K.C.B., Commanding Malakand Field Force,

...eneral in India.

...av... ...r to submit the following report on the fighting which took place at Chak-Fort between the 26th July and the 2nd August 1897, when the place was relieved and the ...my dispersed by the force commanded by Brigadier-General W. H. Meiklejohn, C.B., C.M.G., who was then acting under my orders.

2. On the 26th July 1897 the garrison consisted of Lieutenant H. B. Rattray, 45th Sikhs, commanding, Lieutenant J. L. Wheatley and 2 companies of the same regiment, and 20 sabres, 11th Bengal Lancers; the total strength being 2 British officers, —— Native officers and —— other ranks, besides a few medical and commissariat details. Lieutenant A. B. Minchin, 25th Punjab Infantry, Assistant Political Agent, was also present in the Fort on this date and throughout the subsequent period under reference.

3. 26th July.—The first intimation of disturbance which reached the garrison was brought in on the evening of the 26th July by Havildar Gurdit Singh, 45th Sikhs, who was out surveying that day. He came in on a mule and reported that the tribes were rising and that some of them had taken from him a pair of binoculars, a prismatic compass and Rs. 50. Lieutenant Rattray was playing polo at Khar at this time, but on being warned he at once rode back to Chakdarra and on arrival made all necessary preparations for the defence of the Fort, which was vigorously attacked three times between 10-15 P.M. and 4 A.M. that night; the attacks in all cases being easily repulsed. In one of these attacks the enemy used ladders taken from the civil hospital, a solid building which stood close outside the walls of the Fort, and was therefore very useful to the enemy throughout their operations.

4. 27th July.—On the morning of the 27th July Captain H. Wright, 11th Bengal Lancers, with 40 sabres of his regiment, rode through the enemy from the Malakand, and in doing so, showed very marked gallantry and judgment. At the Amandara Pass he was strongly opposed, and only succeeded in getting through the enemy by a combination of quick and sound decision with determined resolution which was in the highest degree creditable to him. Two of his men were wounded during his ride, but were brought safely into Chakdarra. Captain D. Baker, Transport Officer, Malakand Brigade, also arrived with Captain Wright.

5. On arrival Captain Wright assumed command of the Fort, and his detachment, with the other men of his regiment already there, took over and most ably conducted throughout the siege the defence of the outer enclosure in which the horses and transport animals were accommodated.

6. On the forenoon of the 27th the enemy made several determined advances towards the walls of the Fort, but were repulsed with heavy loss. By this time sangars had been built round the Signal Tower and a heavy fire from them was kept up upon it. As signalling could only be done from the open outside the tower, it became practically impossible, and as the telegraph line had been destroyed, communication with the Malakand was cut off. There was also considerable difficulty about throwing food and water into the the Signal Tower, but nevertheless on the 27th, with the help of the maxims and 9-pounder in the Fort, several days' provisions were put in, together with six additional men and as much water as possible; and in the same way daily supplies of water were afterwards sent in until the 1st August, when the enemy succeeded in cutting off all access to the Tower.

7. On the night of the 27th the enemy made two more attacks which were repulsed with heavy loss to them. In the second of these attacks, they brought up ladders and attempted to escalade the walls of the Fort at the north-east corner. On this and subsequent days, Captain Baker made himself most useful by superintending arrangements for giving increased cover, which undoubtedly saved many casualties.

8. 28th July.—On the 28th July the enemy made vigorous attacks between 5-30 P.M. and dawn next morning, chiefly against the east side of the cavalry enclosure. They were invariably beaten off with heavy loss.

9. 29th July.—On the 29th July the enemy were seen approaching at 3 P.M. in largely increased numbers with ladders and bundles of grass, and directed their chief efforts to the capture of the Signal Tower. They continued their efforts against the Tower till 8 P.M. without success, and next morning some 50 of their corpses were counted outside it.

10. 30th July.—On the 30th July the garrison had a comparatively easy time, and obtained some much needed rest, as the enemy did not advance till about 7 P.M. and then without much vigour.

11. 31st July.—On the 31st July the enemy kept quiet till about 4-30 P.M., when they advanced against the north-east corner of the Fort, but suffered severely from the fire of the 9-pounder and maxims, finally retiring at 11 P.M. to Chakdarra village.

12. 1st August.—On the 1st August the difficulties of the garrison greatly increased, the enemy appearing in far larger numbers with more rifles. During the previous night they had occupied and loopholed the civil hospital already mentioned, and from thence they completely commanded the cavalry enclosure and rendered moving about there very dangerous. They also held the ridge some 150 yards from the Fort to the north-west, thus cutting off all communication with the Signal Tower, and commanding the whole of the north and

The detachment in the Signal Tower made pressing requests for water which could not to them. The enemy kept the whole garrison at their posts all day and all night, but

13. 2nd August.—On the 2nd August the enemy came on in large numbers and very boldly, with ladders and bundles of grass, evidently determined to make a final attempt to take the Fort at any cost. A very heavy fire was kept up on both sides, numbers of the enemy being killed, and one man of the garrison being killed and two wounded. Just as matters were becoming critical, the garrison being dead beat from fatigue and exposure, the Cavalry of the Relieving Column appeared at Amandara. When they came near, the enemy began making off, and on seeing this, Lieutenant Rattray, 45th Sikhs, assembling a few men, attacked and cleared the Civil Hospital, bayoneting most of the enemy whom he found in it. From thence he pursued the enemy for about half a mile, being joined by Captain Baker and Lieutenant J. L. Wheatley with more men, and doing much execution. In this gallant sortie Lieutenant Rattray was severely wounded in the neck, and one sepoy was killed and two wounded, one mortally. In returning, the party found the cavalry of the Relieving Force checked by the fire from the ridge north-west of the Fort, whereupon this was attacked and the occupants bayoneted or driven off. The men who made this sortie, under 20 in number, killed over 50 of the enemy, whose bodies were afterwards counted.

14. Whilst this was going on, the cavalry of the Relieving Force had advanced for some distance along the plain north of the Fort, and had cut off many of the fugitives. They had, however, to return after pursuing a comparatively short distance, their horses being much fatigued.

15. During the fighting above described, the conduct of the whole of the garrison, whether fighting men, departmental details, or followers, is reported to have been most gallant. Not the least marked display of courage and constancy was that made by the small detachment in the Signal Tower who were without water for the last 18 hours of the siege. The signallers under No. 2729, Lance-Naik Vir Singh, 45th Sikhs, who set a brilliant example, behaved throughout in a most courageous manner; one of them, No 2829, Sepoy Prem Singh, climbing several times out of a window in the Tower with a heliograph, and signalling outside to the Malakand under a hot fire from sangars in every direction.

16. I would beg to recommend all the British and Native officers who took part in the defence I have described for the favourable consideration of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief as under, viz.:

Captain H. Wright, 11th Bengal Lancers, who, with his detachment of 40 sabres of his regiment, made the gallant ride through the enemy from the Malakand to Chakdarra Fort on the morning of the 27th July, and commanded the garison from that morning till its relief on the 2nd August.

Captain D. Baker, 2nd Bombay Infantry, who rode to Chakdarra Fort with Captain Wright, and made himself most useful. Lieutenant H. B. Rattray, 45th Sikhs, who commanded the garrison from the commencement of the attack on the 26th July till the arrival of Captain Wright next day, and is reported by that officer to have been the life and soul of the defence. 2nd-Lieutenant J. L Wheatley, 45th Sikhs, had charge of the gun and maxim detachments, and it was largely owing to his care and judgment that these weapons were so effective in the defence.

Lieutenant A. B. Minchin, 25th Punjab Infantry, Assistant Political Agent, was in the Fort throughout the siege, and was most useful.

Ressaidar Tilok Singh, 11th Bengal Lancers, accompanied Captain Wright in his ride of the 27th July, and is very favourably mentioned by that officer.

Jemadar Sudama commanded the detachment of the 21st Bengal Lancers who were at Chakdarra Fort on the 26th July, and was present throughout the siege, and is also very favourably reported on.

Subadar Jwala Singh, 45th Sikhs, was present throughout the siege, and showed great intelligence and readiness of resource, as well as courage and coolness, under fire.

Jemadar Ala Singh, 45th Sikhs, had command of the sections on the parapet of the river fort, and showed conspicuous courage and coolness under heavy fire.

Lieutenant Rattray reports that No. 522 Hospital Assistant Piara Singh, 11th Bengal Lancers, rendered valuable assistance, not only in attending the wounded under fire, but also in the sortie on the 2nd, and at other times in bringing up ammunition, etc., to the men on the parapets under fire.

17. I shall further have the honour, in a separate communication to submit, for the favourable consideration of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the names of several non-commissioned officers and men, who distinguished themselves during the siege of Chakdarra Fort, in view of their being granted the Order of Merit, should His Excellency think them deserving of that distinction.

18. I attach a rough sketch of Chakdarra and its immediate surroundings, together with a list of the casualties that occurred during the siege.

No. 729-F., "Field Operations—Malakand," dated Simla, 15th September 1897.

From—Major-General G. deC. Morton, C.B., Adjutant-General in India.

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department.

In continuation of my letter No. 728-F., dated 15th September 1897, I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to submit for the information of the Government of India the accompanying despatch from Major-General Sir B. Blood, K.C.B., Commanding the Malakand Field Force, giving an account of the operations of the force under his command from the 4th to 26th August 1897, inclusive.

2. His Excellency has much pleasure in bringing to the notice of the Government of India the admirable manner in which Sir B. Blood has exercised his command and the skilful way in which that officer handled his troops at the action of Landakai on the 17th August when he dislodged the enemy from an extremely strong natural position.

Sir George White deeply regrets the loss of Lieutenants R. T. Greaves, Lancashire Fusiliers, and H. L. S. Maclean of the Queen's Own Corps of Guides, and he also desires to record his admiration of the gallantry displayed on the occasion of their death by Lieutenant-Colonel R. B. Adams, Queen's Own Corps of Guides, Lieutenant Viscount Fincastle, 16th Lancers, and the Native officers and non-commissioned officers and men of the Queen's Own Corps of Guides who accompanied them, and whose conduct will form the subject of a separate communication.

4. The Commander-in-Chief cordially endorses the opinions expressed in paragraphs 31 and 35 of the report, and favourably commends to the notice of the Government of India the officers therein mentioned.

No. 4, "Despatches—Malakand Field Force," dated 30th August 1897.

From—Major-General Sir B. Blood, K.C.B., Commanding Malakand Field Force,

To—The Adjutant-General in India.

In continuation of my report No. 1, "Despatches—Malakand Field Force," dated the 14th inst., I have the honour to submit the following account of the operations of the force under my command from the morning of the 4th August up to the 26th August 1897, inclusive, with special reference to the advance into Upper Swat which commenced with the engagement of the 17th August at Landakai.

4th to 13th August.

On my return from Chakdarra to the Malakand on the 4th August, I proceeded with the organisation of the Malakand Field Force and its communications with the removal of the advanced dépôt to Khar from the Malakand, and with the preparation, for further operations, of a special force which I placed at Amandara—a strong and strategically important position conveniently situated for the purpose in view.

3. This special force was ready to march without tents, and with 10 days' supplies on the 8th August 1897, being composed of the 1st Infantry Brigade under Brigadier-General W. H. Meiklejohn, C.B., C.M.G., with six squadrons under Lieutenant-Colonel R. B. Adams, Queen's Own Corps of Guides, a Field and two Mountain Batteries under Colonel W. Aitken, C.B., R.A., a company of Sappers and Miners under Captain E. P. Johnson, R.E., and the necessary Field Hospitals and Medical Staff under Surgeon-Lieutanant-Colonel J. T. B. Bookey, I.M.S.

4. During the interval which necessarily elapsed before the receipt of orders for further operations, the transport of the special force was utilised for general purposes in its neighbourhood; but after the receipt of orders on the evening of the 12th August 1897 to move on Mingaora in Upper Swat, only two clear days were expended in the necessary preparations, and the special force was ready to march with 12 days' supplies for men and two days' grain for animals on the morning of the 5th. I joined the special force myself on the 14th August, the Divisional troops attached to it coming my direct command from the morning of the 15th.

14th August.

5. The weather had been unsettled for some days prior to the 15th, and in the early morning and forenoon of that day it rained so hard that I determined to delay the forward move till the 16th. On the morning of 16th it also rained very hard, but we managed a start at 1-30 P.M. and marched about five miles to Thana, four miles west of Landakai, where there is a strong position—the gate of Upper Swat—which I felt sure would be held against us, as in fact it was.

15th August.
16th August.

6. During the halt of the special force at Amandara, the country between that place and Upper Swat, on our side of the Swat River, had been very completely reconnoitred by the cavalry under Lieutenant-Colonel Adams, Queen's Own Corps of Guides, who had been most ably seconded by Major S. B. Beatson, 11th Bengal Lancers; so that all I had to do on the 16th was to take a general view of the situation at Landakai, which I accordingly did in the evening.

7. It will be seen from the accompanying sketch that our camp at Thana was in the middle of an open plain, well away from the hills and easily defended. The road from there to Landakai runs round the northern edge of the village of Thana, and thence close to hills on the right until

No. 4, "Despatches—Malakand Field Force," dated 30th August 1897.

From—MAJOR-GENERAL SIR B. BLOOD, K.C.B., Commanding Malakand Field Force,
To—The Adjutant-General in India.

In continuation of my report No. 1, "Despatches—Malakand Field Force," dated the 14th instant, I have the honour to submit the following account of the operations of the force under my command from the morning of the 4th August up to the 26th August 1897, inclusive, with special reference to the advance into Upper Swat which commenced with the engagement of the 17th August at Landakai.

15th August.
16th August.

6. During the halt of the special force at Amandara, the country between that place and Upper Swat, on our side of the Swat River, had been very completely reconnoitred by the cavalry under Lieutenant-Colonel Adams, Queen's Own Corps of Guides, who had been most ably seconded by Major S. B. Beatson, 11th Bengal Lancers; so that all I had to do on the 16th was to take a general view of the situation at Landakai, which I accordingly did in the evening.

7. It will be seen from the accompanying sketch that our camp at Thana was in the middle of an open plain, well away from the hills and easily defended. The road from there to Landakai runs round the northern edge of the village of Thana, and thence close to hills on the right until the village of Jalala is reached, where the road passes between that village and the end of a spur covered with Buddhist ruins and running up to a peak which dominates the whole Landakai position. Between the Jalala spur and Landakai is first an open valley about 900 yards wide at the lower end, then another spur, then a deep ravine, and finally the main Landakai spur ending in cliffs overhanging the Swat River; the road being carried round these cliffs for nearly a mile on a stone causeway, which, as I was correctly informed, the enemy had damaged and obstructed in various ways. Beyond the Landakai spur, as I knew from a reconnaissance made by Major S. B. Beatson, 11th Bengal Lancers, the valley is open, and the rice cultivation lies in such a way that the enemy, in occupying the lower end of the Landakai spur, would find himself formed to the left flank of his line of retreat.

8. During my reconnaissance on the evening of the 11th, I saw some hundreds of the enemy with flags occupying sangars, spread over a mile or so of the end of Landakai spur, and holding an old Buddhist Fort on a peak, where they evidently fancied themselves very securely posted. From their general appearance, their shouting, and their expenditure of ammunition, I judged that larger numbers were behind what I saw, and I accordingly returned to camp, making as little show of force as possible, and issued orders for the next day.

9. Soon after daylight the 17th August the tents and the baggage in excess of the light scale prescribed for the advance were despatched on camels to Khar under escort of a squadron of the 11th Bengal Lancers. The remainder of the baggage and the stores were then parked in camp with the unloaded transport animals, spare horses and followers, to wait until the road in front should be cleared; being protected by strengthened baggage guards, with 2 companies, 45th Sikhs, two squadrons, 11th Bengal Lancers, and 400 rifles borrowed for the day from Khar. Thus I was enabled to advance to the attack unencumbered by baggage, along the somewhat awkward road from Thana to Jalala.

17th August.

10. Punctually at 6-30 A.M. the cavalry of the advanced guard moved off, and pushing on to Jalala, found a few of the enemy established in the Buddhist ruins on the adjacent spur. These they held in check with the assistance of the infantry of the advanced guard, which consisted of two companies, 1st Battalion, Royal West Kent Regiment, under Captain W. R. Marshall, 2nd Derbyshire Regiment, attached 1st Royal West Kent Regiment, until the arrival of the remainder of the battalion which headed the main body. Then the battalion, under Major C. W. H. Evans, extended and crowned the Jalala spur, clearing the enemy out of the Buddhist ruins before mentioned. Meanwhile No. 7 (British) Mountain Battery, under Major M. F. Fegan, R.A., and No. 8 (Bengal) Mountain Battery, under Captain A. H. C. Birch, R.A., had arrived and formed in rear of the 1st Battalion, Royal West Kent Regiment, closely followed by the main body of the infantry under Brigadier-General W. H. Meiklejohn, C.B., C.M.G., consisting of the 24th Punjab Infantry and 31st Punjab Infantry under Major J. G. Ramsay and Lieutenant-Colonel J. L. O'Bryen, respectively; Colonel H. A. Sawyer with the 45th Sikhs having been left in camp to await the arrival there of the 400 rifles borrowed from Khar, with orders to bring on six companies of his battalion thereafter. The 10th Field Battery, under Major C. A. Anderson, R.A., which I had put in rear of the main body for fear it should stick anywhere in the narrow passage round Thana, also appeared close behind the infantry, and trotted towards the position told off to it.

11. Brigadier-General Meiklejohn now moved his infantry half right towards the peak marked A on the sketch herewith, the 6 companies, 45th Sikhs, having come up and following him at some little distance; while the 10th Field Battery came into action to the right of Jalala, and No. 7 (British) Mountain Battery up the spur still further to the right, both batteries being guarded by the 1st Battalion, Royal West Kent Regiment, whose firing line crowned the crest of the spur up to and including the Buddhist ruins with their supports, etc., well closed up.

12. The 10th Field Battery opened fire at 8-50 A.M. on the fort mentioned in paragraph 8, followed soon afterwards by No. 7 Mountain Battery; and the two batteries continued firing leisurely during the time that elapsed before Brigadier-General Meiklejohn reached the peak marked A in the attached sketch. The 1st Battalion, Royal West Kent Regiment, also occasionally fired section volleys as targets offered. The effect of the artillery fire was instantly apparent, as the enemy quickly evacuated the fort and sangars fired at, and retired under cover in their rear, appearing again afterwards whenever the fire slackened. Brigadier-General Meiklejohn had a long and arduous climb, but his movement was carried out in the most entirely satisfactory manner, and his appearance when he reached his objective seemed altogether to surprise and confuse the enemy, who, as we afterwards found, had made up their minds that we would force the passage of the Landakai causeway by a frontal attack, had accordingly posted considerable reserves near the end of it, which reserves were of course not only out of the actual engagement, but now found themselves in danger of being cut off from their line of retreat.

13. The enemy, after making a feeble attempt to re-inforce their left from the centre and right of their first line, which I easily frustrated by the fire of the 10th Field Battery, and No. 7 Mountain Battery, and by moving the right half battalion, 1st Battalion, Royal West Kent Regiment, to its right, into touch with Brigadier-General Meiklejohn, now seemed to lose heart altogether, and it only required a forward movement of the left half battalion, 1st Battalion, Royal West Kent Regiment, at about 11 A.M., to cause them to retreat from their last positions on the Landakai ridge. Then the 5th Company, Queen's Own Sappers and Miners, under Captain E. P. Johnson, R.E.,

advanced, and under the direction of Major E. Blunt, R.E., the senior Royal Engineer Officer present, began to repair the Landakai causeway, which, as I have mentioned, had been damaged and obstructed by the enemy. This was soon done sufficiently to admit of the advance in pursuit of three squadrons of the Guides Cavalry, whom I had kept together for that object under Lieutenant-Colonel R. B. Adams. At this time the 10th Field Battery, which could not accompany the special force beyond Jalala, in consequence of the badness of the roads beyond that place, returned to Khar under special arrangements for its escort.

14. The Landakai causeway, though passable, was still in such bad order when the Guides traversed it that they debouched from it slowly by twos and threes, and Captain H. I. E. Palmer, who commanded the leading squadron, being told by the infantry crowning the heights to his right that the enemy were escaping over the plain in front of him which he could not yet see, collected part of his squadron and pushed on in pursuit. As soon as he emerged from the fields of high Indian-corn at the end of the causeway, he saw the enemy a mile or so in front escaping to the hills and galloped after them, but the ground being heavy he got rather ahead of his men. Near him on his left was Lieutenant R. T. Greaves, Lancashire Fusiliers, who was with the force as Correspondent of the Times of India; and further to his left, and a little in rear, rode Lieutenant-Colonel R. B. Adams with his galloper, Lieutenant Norman, 11th Bengal Lancers. The first squadron came along as quickly as they could, in somewhat loose formation, and were followed at no great distance by the other two. The enemy were rapidly escaping to the face of the hill marked B on the attached sketch, and Lieutenant-Colonel Adams, quickly taking in the situation, ordered the Ziarat marked C to be held with dismounted fire; a measure which, but for the unfortunate contretemps which now occurred, would have been most effectual, as fire from this Ziarat swept completely and at short range the hill up which the enemy were retiring.

15. Captain Palmer, not hearing Lieutenant-Colonel Adams' orders, galloped on towards the hill, still having on his left Lieutenant Greaves, whose pony had apparently become unmanageable by him. Seeing a standard-bearer in the open, Captain Palmer attacked and cut him down, but at the same moment he was disabled by a bullet wound in the wrist and his horse being also shot under him, he was only saved from the enemy's swordsmen by some of his own men* who had meanwhile come up and charged the swordsmen with great gallantry. Simultaneously Lieutenant Greaves was struck by a bullet in the body and falling from his pony was instantly pounced upon by the enemy's swordsmen. Seeing this, Lieutenant-Colonel Adams, Lieutenant Viscount Fincastle, 16th Lancers (acting as Correspondent of the Times with the force), followed by Lieutenant Maclean of the Guides and several of his men† flew to the rescue, drove off the swordsmen, and carried off Lieutenant Greaves, who, while Lord Fincastle was lifting him, was again hit through the body and killed. Lieutenant Maclean, in helping, was mortally wounded. Captain Palmer's and Lord Fincastle's horses, together with two troop horses, were killed, and Lieutenant Colonel Adams' horse was wounded.

1219½ Sowar Alaf Khan.

16. Meanwhile the remainder of the Guides had occupied and opened fire from the Ziarat before mentioned and from the village of Nawa Kili close by, thus keeping the enemy in check; but notwithstanding all they could do, the fire directed on the party who were bringing off Lieutenant Greaves' body and Lieutenant Maclean who was mortally wounded was exceedingly hot, as some four or five hundred of the enemy crowded the hill facing them.

17. I trust it will have been gathered that the feat of arms performed on this occasion by Lieutenant-Colonel Adams, Lieutenant Lord Fincastle, Lieutenant Maclean, and their men, was of the most truly gallant description. I shall have the honour to bring forward the names of these officers and men in separate communications with full details for the special consideration of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

18. Soon after these occurrences, Brigadier-General Meiklejohn's infantry and artillery appeared on the scene, and the enemy were finally driven off to the higher hills, from which they continued to fire shots at impossible ranges all the afternoon.

19. About the time that Brigadier-General Meiklejohn arrived near Nawa Kili, Lieutenant-Colonel Adams, with two squadrons, advanced along the Barikot road to reconnoitre as far as Abuch, where he found about 150 of the enemy in possession of the village and of a road which leads over a low pass behind it. One squadron being dismounted under Captain G. P. Brazier-Creagh, 9th Bengal Lancers, attached to the Guides, attacked and soon dislodged the enemy, killing six or eight of them, but without any casualty on their own side. Lieutenant-Colonel Adams and his squadrons afterwards returned to camp, arriving about 6-30 P.M.

20. Meanwhile the detachments left at Thana Camp to guard the baggage and transport were not without occupation. During our march from Thana on Jalala we had observed parties of the enemy moving along the high ridge leading from Landakai towards the Morah Pass to our right rear. These men soon came in full view of our camps, and seem to have imagined that it had been left unprotected, as they assembled to the number of about a thousand, and with great shouting and beating of "tomtoms" began to descend the hills. As they showed considerable hesitation about committing themselves to the open, Lieutenant-Colonel L. J. E. Bradshaw, 35th Sikhs, commanding the detachments at the camp, sent Major F. G. Delamain,‡ 11th Bengal Lancers, with two squadrons of his regiment to try and draw them on. They were too cautious, however, and the affair ended in a musketry engagement in which Major Delamain inflicted a loss of some 20 killed on the enemy without any casualty on his own side; and ultimately drove them off to continue their retreat on Buner. After the conclusion of the engagement at Landakai, these two squadrons and the 400 rifles, 35th Sikhs, borrowed from Khar for the day, the whole under Lieutenant-Colonel L. J. E. Bradshaw, escorted the 10th Field Battery to Khar.

21. The force encamped for the night on a piece of ground well selected by Lieutenant-Colonel Masters, Assistant Quarter Master General, and situated between the villages of Landakai and Kotah.

22. The casualties in the engagement at Landakai were eleven in all as follows:

18th August. 23. On the 18th August the force marched to Ghalagai, passing a somewhat difficult Kotal on the way near Barikot, which was quickly improved by the sappers under the direction of Major E. Blunt, R.E. Some interesting Buddhist ruins were seen, including a fine "stupa" in good preservation at a place called Shankardar.

19th August. 24. On the 19th August the force marched to Mingaora, its objective for the time; the road being, except at the end of the march, where it crosses some irrigated fields. The people everywhere seemed to have given up all idea of opposition, and were anxious to propitiate us by giving us such supplies as they could. Large numbers of arms, amounting to about 800 of all sorts, were given up at Ghalagai and Mingaora. A few shots were fired into camp this night, but the villagers turned out and put the "snipers" to flight.

20th August. 25. On the 20th August the force halted and the day was given up to resting the troops and transport animals, the great number of the latter, about 2,000, having caused them to be many hours under their loads each day, even during our short marches, especially as the road, though good on the whole, was narrow and difficult in places, thus causing blocks and long delays. In spite of all drawbacks, however, the condition of the animals was excellent, and galls remarkably rare.

21st August. 26. On the 21st August the force remained halted, and a reconnaissance was carried out under the orders of Lieutenant-Colonel R. B. Adams, up the Swat Valley to Minglaor, Chahr Bagh and Gulibagh, and also towards the Kotke Pass from the first named village; much interesting and useful information being obtained.

22nd August. 27. On the 22nd August, the force still remained at Mingaora, chiefly to enable Major H. A. Deane, Political Officer, to finish his arrangements with the tribesmen thereabouts. The country towards Minglaor was examined with a view to ascertaining whether a better alignment could not be obtained for the road there than that of the existing road; but the conclusion arrived at was that the alignment of the latter was the best on the whole.

23rd August. 28. On the 23rd August the force still halted at Mingaora, as it was hoped that some Martini-Henri rifles carried off from the Malakand would be given up if we waited another day. This hope was realised, several of the rifles in question being brought in.

24th August. 29. On the 24th August the force marched back to Barikot.

25th August. 30. On the 25th August the force halted at Barikot, and a reconnaissance was pushed to the top of the Karikar Pass, from which a fine view of the Salarzai Bunerwal country was obtained.

26th August. 31. On the 26th August the force marched back to Thana, and I issued orders for it to move to Khar and the Malakand on the 27th, in order to release the 2nd Brigade with the cavalry and artillery attached to it for the next extended operation ordered.

32. In concluding this part of my report, I would wish to express my admiration of the fine soldierly qualities exhibited by all ranks of the special force which I led into Upper Swat. They fought the action at Landakai in a brilliant manner, working over high hills under a burning sun with the greatest alacrity and showing everywhere the greatest keenness to close with the enemy. They carried out admirably the trying duties necessitated by marching in hot weather with a transport train of more than 2,000 mules, and they endured with perfect cheerfulness the discomforts of several nights' bivouac in heavy rain. The officers of the Divisional Staff and of my personal staff who were with me,* Brigadier-General W. H. Meiklejohn, C.B., C.M.G., and his staff, and the several heads of departments and Commanding Officers of Divisional Troops, all carried out their duties in an entirely satisfactory manner.

Major H. A. Deane, Political Agent, and his Assistant, Lieutenant A. B. Minchin, gave valuable assistance in collecting intelligence and supplies.

33. While the operations above described were in progress, a diversion was made towards the southern border of the Buner country from Mardan by the 1st Reserve Brigade, which on its head-quarters leaving Mardan came under my command as the 3rd Brigade, Malakand Field Force.

34. A force as per margin under Brigadier-General J. Wodehouse, C.B., C.M.G., was concentrated on the 17th August at Rustam, 18 miles north-east of Mardan, and about four miles from the Buner border, with the object of acting as a containing force, and so preventing the sections of the Bunerwals who had not already committed themselves against us from joining in opposition to our advance into Upper Swat.

1st Battalion, Highland Light Infantry, under Lieutenant-Colonel R. D. B. Rutherford, 39th Garhwal Rifles, under Lieutenant-Colonel B. C. Greaves.
No. 3 Company, Bombay Sappers and Miners, under Captain C. E. Baddeley, R.E.
1 Squadron, 10th Bengal Lancers, under Captain W. L. Maxwell.
2 guns, No. 1 Mountain Battery, Royal Artillery, under Lieutenant H. L. N. Beynon, R.A.

35. The presence of this force had the desired effect, and Brigadier-General Wodehouse and his staff made good use of the time they spent at Rustam in acquiring valuable information about several of the passes in the neighbourhood.

36. Brigadier-General Wodehouse states that throughout the operations of his force, which involved considerable fatigue and exposure to heat and rain, the spirit of his troops left nothing to be desired. He makes special mention of the work of No. 3 Company, Bombay Sappers and Miners, under Captain C. E. Baddeley, R.E. He also reports very favourably on the assistance given him by Lieutenant C. P. Down, Assistant Commissioner, and has expressed to me a high opinion of that officer's abilities and acquirements, particularly of his proficiency in the local vernacular.

37. I attach hereto a list of casualties and a sketch of the country near Landakai to illustrate my account of the action at that place.

Commanding Malakand Field Force.

TOCHI.

No. 1090.—With reference to G. G. O. No. 773 of 1897, the Right Hon'ble the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council directs the publication of the subjoined letter from the Adjutant-General in India, submitting, under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief, a despatch from Lieutenant-Colonel W. duG. Gray, 1st Punjab Infantry, lately Commanding the Troops in the Tochi Valley, bringing to notice the gallant conduct of Lieutenant H. S. deBrett, Royal Artillery, at Maizar on the 10th June 1897.

No. 463-F., "Field Operations—Tochi," dated Simla, the 4th September 1897.

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department.

In continuation of this Department No. 181-T., dated the 8th July 1897, I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to forward the accompanying letter from Lieutenant-Colonel W. duG. Gray, 1st Punjab Infantry, lately Commanding Tochi Valley Troops, bringing to notice the gallant conduct of Lieutenant H. S. deBrett, Royal Artillery, at Maizar on the 10th June 1897.

No. 859-C., dated 10th August 1897.

2. The Commander-in-Chief recommends that this letter be published as an addition to Lieutenant-Colonel Gray's former despatch which appears in G. G. O. No. 773 of 1897. His Excellency has much pleasure in expressing his appreciation of this gallant act which, performed as it was at the risk of Lieutenant deBrett's life, enabled a gun to be brought into action and thus assisted the escort most materially in its retirement.

No. 859-C., "Disturbances," dated Camp Sheranni, the 10th August 1897.

From—LIEUTENANT-COLONEL W. DUG. GRAY, Commanding 1st Punjab Infantry, Punjab Frontier Force, late Commanding Tochi Valley Troops,

To—The Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, 1st Brigade, Tochi Field Force.

In paragraph 10 of my first report* on the affair of 10th June at Maizar, the rapid manner in which the reinforcements under Lieutenant H. S. deBrett, Royal Artillery, came up was brought to notice, and also the fact that the enemy was finally beaten off with the new ammunition then received.

* Tochi Garrison No. 230, dated 16th June 1897, to Assistant Adjutant-General, Punjab Frontier Force.

2. In addition to the very important service thus rendered, I have now ascertained that Lieutenant deBrett behaved with great personal gallantry at the time.

When he met the force, then closely pressed by the enemy, he found only one serviceable gun, but no sponges. This gun he served himself, ramming the charges home with a sepoy's rifle, without sponging out between the rounds; and he would not allow this most dangerous work to be done by any one else until a sponge had been improvised by wrapping a puggree round a lance.

3. The value of the fire thus maintained in finally dispersing the enemy was remarked in the above-quoted report, but the very gallant part that Lieutenant deBrett took in the service of the gun having only just come to light, I feel that it would be an injustice not to lay more stress on the importance of the part he took generally in the work of the afternoon, and I would ask that the General Officer Commanding may now bring his energy and gallantry to the notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

4. It is necessary to explain that Lieutenant deBrett was unable to bring out with the reinforcements the two guns which had remained in camp at Datta Khel as all the gun and carriage saddles were with the Maizar party; it being Captain Browne's wish to make all his gun mules, some of which were young and new, take an easy share in carrying the guns.

No. 360-A., dated 12th August 1897.

Endorsed by BRIGADIER-GENERAL C. C. EGERTON, 1st Brigade, Tochi Field Force,

To—The Assistant Adjutant-General, Tochi Field Force.

Forwarded.

No. 725-A., dated Camp Sheranni, the 16th August 1897.

Memo. from—MAJOR-GENERAL G. CORRIE BIRD, Commanding Tochi Field Force,

To—The Adjutant-General in India.

In forwarding this correspondence I would support the application that the same may be added to Lieutenant-Colonel Gray's Despatch No. 230, dated 16th June 1897, and at the same time beg to bring the very plucky action performed by Lieutenant deBrett, No. 6 Bombay Mountain Battery, to the favourable consideration of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief for some special distinction and reward.

The fact of the gun coming into action would seem to have materially assisted in extricating the escort retiring from Maizar from its perilous position and to have caused the dispersion of the attackers, and this would not have occurred but for the plucky course adopted by Lieutenant deBrett in loading the gun at the risk of his own life.

No. , dated Sheranni, the 25th July 1897.

From—CAPTAIN O. C. WILLIAMSON, Royal Artillery, Commanding No. 6 Bombay Mountain Battery, Tochi Field Force,

To—The Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, 2nd Brigade, Tochi Field Force.

I have the honour to bring to the notice of the General Officer Commanding 2nd Brigade the following facts, which I trust may be represented to the General Officer Commanding Tochi Field Force for such action as he may think proper:

Lieutenant H. S. deBrett, R.A., 6th (Bombay) Mountain Battery, went out from Datta Khel with ammunition for rifles and guns and about two companies of infantry to the relief of the troops retiring from Maizar on the 10th June 1897. Owing to all the gun and carriage saddles being with the Maizar party, he was only able to take out ammunition.

He met the force near Sheranni, but found only one serviceable gun and no sponges, and the enemy were at the time closely pressing our men.

He proceeded to load the gun and did so for the first three or four rounds personally. He personally rammed home the charge using a sepoy's rifle. There was no means of sponging out between rounds.

It is needless for me to explain the imminent danger Lieutenant deBrett stood in while performing this duty, and I consider it an act of gallantry worthy of being brought to notice.

Ultimately the difficulty and danger of not sponging was got over by using a sowar's lance with a puggree round it.

I should have known nothing of this had I not in the course of conversation elicited the facts now related. There was no other British officer present, and Lieutenant deBrett himself kept it quiet.

I wired to Mr. Gee, C.S., now on his way home as soon as I learnt the facts, and he states he remembers Lieutenant deBrett ramming home with a rifle at the time above stated, and there are non-commissioned officers and men of the battery who can testify to it also.

No. 249-A., dated Camp Datta Khel, the 27th July 1897.

Endorsed by BRIGADIER-GENERAL W. P. SYMONS, C.B., 2nd Brigade, Commanding Tochi Field Force,

To—The Assistant Adjutant-General, Tochi Field Force.

Forwarded. I trust that the General Officer Commanding Tochi Field Force will agree with me that this is the record of great gallantry in action on the part of Lieutenant deBrett, R.A., and that the Major-General will find himself able to forward it to higher authority with an expression of his commendation.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to afford early relief to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh by making provision for the appointment of a second Additional Judicial Commissioner. The existence of heavy arrears in that Court has been brought to the notice of the Government of India, and the statistics furnished show that the number of suits instituted tends in an increasing degree to exceed the number disposed of, and that the Court at its present strength cannot possibly overtake the work that has accumulated steadily during the past five years. It is proposed therefore, to amend the Oudh Courts Act, 1891 (XIV of 1891), so as to take power to strengthen the Court for the time being by the appointment of a third Judge.

2. The details of the Bill are, where necessary, explained in the annexed Notes on Clauses.

The 25th September, 1897. J. WOODBURN.

Notes on Clauses.

Clause 2.—It is here proposed to insert in section 4 of the Oudh Courts Act, 1891 (XIV of 1891), an enabling provision taking power for the Local Government with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to appoint a second Additional Judicial Commissioner to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh.

Clause 3.—By this clause it is proposed to recast section 5 of the Act in order to make its provisions equally applicable when the Court consists of the Judicial Commissioner and two Additional Judicial Commissioners.

Clause 5.—When the Court consists of three Judges the provisions of section 378 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882, will at once apply in cases submitted for the confirmation of capital sentences and no special provisions on the subject will be required. It seems unnecessary, in view of the definition of "High Court" in that Code, to declare that the Court shall be deemed to be a High Court, and sub-section (1) of section 7 may, it is thought, be repealed. Sub-section (2), in the amended form proposed, will supply the requisite special provisions in cases of a difference of opinion on references under section 377 of the Code when the Court consists of only two Judges.

Clause 7.—The preceding remarks regarding clause 5 will also explain the amendments here suggested. As soon as a third Judge is appointed to the Court, the provisions of sections 429 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882, as well as those of section 575 of the Code of Civil Procedure, will apply automatically, and all that is necessary is to make it clear that, if and so long as the Court consists of only two Judges, the arrangements made by section 9 of the existing Act must continue to be observed.

Clause 8.—The section, the addition of which to the Act is here contemplated, is based upon section 92 of the Lower Burma Courts Act, 1889 (XI of 1889). It seems calculated to facilitate the disposal of work in the Judicial Commissioner's Court by enabling the Judicial Commissioner, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, [illegible] dispensing with the fuller procedure required by the general law.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the Week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, September 25th, 1897.

During the first four days of the week under review the weather was very quiet throughout India. Pressure was very uniform, though somewhat higher over Burma, Assam and Bengal, and somewhat lower over the southern half of the Peninsula than elsewhere. The winds during this period were light and variable and the weather showery. These showers were frequent and fairly heavy over the north-east of the Indian region and over the Peninsula, while they were light and scattered over Central and Upper India. On Wednesday a change commenced. The wind shifted to north and freshened in Lower Burma, and a storm was apparently crossing the Tenasserim Peninsula. This storm crossed the Bay during the next forty-eight hours and was crossing the Madras Coast between Gopalpore and Vizagapatam on Friday morning. Thence it passed into the Central Provinces, and heavyish rain with high winds was reported over the central parts of the country on Saturday morning. During the same period, viz., the last three days of the week, the weather became unsettled on the Bombay side. A shallow diffused depression appeared off the Bombay Coast on Thursday, and concentrated and moved northward during the next two days, so that during that time the weather was unsettled and rainy over the whole of North Bombay. The weather, as was the case last week, was generally warmer than usual, the mean temperature of the whole country being about $1\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ higher than the average on each day of the week.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, September 19th.—Pressure had changed slightly and irregularly and was uniform throughout the whole country. The winds were light and variable, and there was no longer any sign of the south-west monsoon on either side of India. The mean temperature was lower than usual over Upper Burma, Assam and North Bengal as well as over North Bombay, but in all other places the heat was excessive. The abnormal excess was greatest over the west of the North-West Provinces and the east of the Punjab. Fairly general showers had been received over Burma, North-East India and the Peninsula, and a few scattered showers over the central parts of the country and Upper India.

Monday, September 20th.—Pressure had increased almost everywhere, and the barometric readings were even more uniform than on the preceding day. Northerly breezes were reported over the western districts and very variable winds elsewhere. Temperature had fallen in Burma and the Punjab, but the general distribution of the mean temperature relatively to the normal was much the same as on the previous day. The greatest abnormal excess, 5° to 6°, was reported from the Gangetic Plain. Heavyish, fairly general showers had been received over the Peninsula and part of North-East India and Burma, while in Central and Upper India the weather was fine.

Tuesday, September 21st.—The pressure changes were slight, but were rather irregular. Readings were relatively high over Burma and relatively low over the southern half of the Peninsula, but in general the barometric readings remained very uniform. North-north-westerly winds continued to be reported from the west of India and variable light winds elsewhere. Temperature had fallen very generally, and the weather was cooler than usual over the Madras Presidency, Assam and East Bengal and Rajputana, while the abnormal excess over the Gangetic Plain was between 2° and 4°. Showers had occurred more or less generally over all parts of the country, except the Gangetic Plain, the Punjab and Sind. The heaviest amounts were reported from the south of the Peninsula.

Wednesday, September 22nd.—The barometer had given way briskly over Tenasserim and Lower Burma, but in almost all other places the changes were slight. The pressure was less uniform than of late, readings being relatively high over Assam and Upper Burma and relatively low over the south of the Bay and over the Arabian Sea off the Bombay Coast. The wind had shifted to the northward and freshened in Lower Burma, but elsewhere there was little change, though the northerly breezes over Western India were apparently giving way. Temperature had risen and become normal in Rajputana, but was still low for the time of year over the Madras Presidency and part of North-East India. There had been no rain over the Punjab and Sind, but elsewhere scattered showers had been received, the amounts being large in Bengal and Madras.

Thursday, September 23rd.—The barometer had risen almost everywhere, the recovery having been brisk to rapid over Tenasserim and Lower Burma. A cyclonic storm had passed from the Andaman Sea out into the Bay, and the winds were cyclonic around the Bay area—blowing with the force of a gale at Diamond Island. At the same time a shallow depression had appeared off the Bombay Coast where the winds were irregularly cyclonic. Elsewhere there was not much change. The mean temperature was low over Madras, Bihar, North Bengal and Assam, but elsewhere the heat was excessive. There had been no rain over north-west and part of Central India, but elsewhere the weather had been more or less showery.

Friday, September 24th.—The barometer had fallen rapidly in Ganjam and slightly across the head of the Peninsula, but elsewhere pressure had increased. The storm which was noticed over the Bay on the 23rd had reached the North Madras Coast, and strongish cyclonic winds were reported over the northern half of the Bay. The depression off the Bombay Coast had developed somewhat, and southerly to south-easterly winds prevailed over North Bombay. The mean temperature was low in Madras and in North Bombay, but was excessive elsewhere. The weather had been more or less showery over Burma, Assam, Bengal, the Peninsula, the Central Provinces and North Bombay, the largest amounts being reported from Bombay.

Saturday, September 25th.—The barometer had risen over the Bay area and generally fallen elsewhere. The rise had been rapid in Ganjam, the fall rapid over the Central Provinces. The changes were due to the movements of the storm which had moved north-westward into the Central Provinces. The depression off the Bombay Coast was unchanged. The winds were cyclonic over the Central Provinces and on the Bombay Coast, south-easterly over Northern India and variable elsewhere. The mean temperature was low in Kathiawar and Madras and above the normal elsewhere. The Punjab, Upper Sind and Rajputana had been rainless, but elsewhere the weather had been more or less showery. Heavyish rain had fallen at some western and central stations.

Temperature.—The weather has been hotter than usual over the greater part of the country, but in Madras and in parts of North-East India there have been areas of relative coolness almost throughout the week, while on the 21st a local fall of rain over Rajputana reduced the temperature of that province to below the normal for a time.

The following table gives the temperature data for the week:

Province.	September 1897.							Mean variation of week.
	19th	20th			23rd	24th	25th
Burma	+1·5	+0·9	+2·1	+2·6	+2·6	+2·3	+3·0	+2·1
Bengal and Assam	+1·0	+1·0	+0·4	+1·1	+1·0	+1·9	+1·4	+1·1
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	+3·5	+3·6	+1·6	+0·9	+1·8	+2·5	+2·3	+2·3
Punjab	+2·4	+0·5	+1·0	+2·1	+2·4	+2·3	+3·7	+2·1
Bombay	+2·5	+2·7	+1·7	+1·5	+1·9	+0·4	+1·1	+1·7
Central Provinces and Berar	+2·5	+1·9	+1·4	+1·3	+1·7	+1·8	+0·2	+1·5
Central India and Gujarat	+1·0	+1·7	+2·0	+1·0	+2·4	+0·8	+1·4	+1·5
Sind and Rajputana	+1·5	+1·5	—1·1	+2·1	+2·6	+3·2	+1·6	+1·6
Madras	+1·2	+0·2	—0·7	—0·6	-0·6	+0·2	—1·4	—0·3
Mean for whole of India	+1·9	+1·6	+0·9	+1·3	+1·8	+1·3	+1·5	+1·5

The daily variations for the whole country exhibit a slight excess of heat on each day, the abnormal excess ranging from 0°·9 on the 21st to 1°·9 on the 19th. The provincial variations show that the mean temperature of Madras was slightly below the normal for the whole week, but that in the other provinces there was a steady constant excess.

The following are the highest maximum temperatures recorded on each day:

September 19th	103°·4	at	Jacobabad.
„ 23rd	105°·4	„	„
„ 24th	106°·4	„	„

The hottest area throughout the week was thus Upper Sind and the South Punjab.

Rainfall. The rainfall this week has, as was the case last week, been extensive and widespread. Two of the rainfall divisions, viz.—the South-East Punjab and the Baluchistan Hills—have received no rain during the week, while three other divisions, viz. the South and West Punjab and the west of the North-West Provinces—have had an average fall for the week of less than one-tenth of an inch. With these exceptions the rainfall has been general and effective. Rain over Burma, Assam and Bengal fell practically daily, but in Bihar the fall was somewhat less steady and was on the whole confined to the 20th to the 23rd, while over the North-West Provinces and the Punjab the scattered showers which were received over this area occurred mainly on the first two days or the last day of the week. In the west coast districts and over the central parts of the country the rainfall was, as in North-East India, of almost daily occurrence, while in Rajputana, as in Upper India, the fall was confined to the first two and the last days of the week. In the Madras divisions rain fell daily. The table at the close of the summary shows that the rainfall for the week ranged from 5·21 inches in Malabar, 5·06 inches in Mysore, 5·11 inches in Khandesh and 4·33 inches in Tenasserim, to 0·19 inch in the Central Punjab, 0·16 inch in the west submontane division of the North-West Provinces and 0·11 inch in Sind. The actual distribution of rain differed considerably during the week from the normal distribution, the main feature of the difference being the excessive rain over the Peninsula and the central parts of the country and the deficient rain over Burma and Northern India. The third column of the table shows that in twenty-eight of the rainfall divisions the rainfall of the week was less and in twenty-nine more than the normal. The region of deficient rain included roughly Burma, Assam, Bengal, the North-West Provinces and the Punjab the region of excessive rain—Rajputana, Central India, the Central Provinces and the Peninsula. The principal cases of deficiency were 2·41 inches in the Assam Hills and 2·31 inches in Deltaic Burma, but in Upper Burma, Assam (Surma), South (Oudh), the central, west hills and west submontane divisions of the North-West Provinces, the Punjab Hills and the eastern division of the Central Provinces the deficiency exceeded one inch. The cases of excess were more marked than those of deficiency, thus—Mysore reported 4·16 inches, Khandesh 3·94 inches and Malabar, South-Central Madras, the Bombay Deccan, the East Coast (North) and Madras (Central) over two inches more than the normal. In the Bombay Deccan the rainfall was excessive in all districts, but particularly in Sholapur and Satara, and the same was true, though to a somewhat less extent, over the Madras Deccan districts, while in the Vizagapatam district the fall was exceedingly heavy.

The three concluding columns of the table, which give the monsoon rainfall up to date, show that the rainfall has been in excess of the normal by 20 per cent. or more in the following divisions:—South Bihar, east, west and hills divisions of the North-West Provinces, the North and West Punjab, Malabar, South-Central Madras, Mysore, the Bombay Deccan,

Sind, West Rajputana, the East Coast (North, Central and South) and South and Central Madras, it has been deficient by 20 per cent. or more of the normal in Upper Burma, the Assam Hills, the Submontane Punjab, Gujarat and Baluchistan. In all the remaining divisions it has been approximately normal. Last week there was excessive rain in fourteen divisions, deficient rain in five divisions and normal rain in thirty-eight divisions, while in the week under review the numbers are seventeen divisions with excess, five with deficiency and thirty-five with a normal rainfall, so that there has been an increase in the number of divisions reporting an excess.

The following were the principal large totals during the week under review in the different provinces :

A Dictionary of the Economic Products of India.

BY DR. GEO. WATT, C.I.E.,

Reporter on Economic Products.

The first five volumes and Volume VI, Parts I, II, III, & IV of the Dictionary are ready at the Office of the Superintendent of Government Printing, No. 8, Hastings Street, Calcutta, and will be supplied to non-subscribers on receipt of the price for the complete set, which is R45 in India, and 3 guineas in England (exclusive of the Index, for which a separate charge will be made): packing and postage, in India, 8 annas per volume; for England, 2 rupees 6 annas per volume. For copies bound in half calf or half morocco, R6 and 8 shillings, respectively, will be charged extra for the whole set.

The Dictionary is intended to deal with the products of India—animal, vegetable, and mineral; each product being treated after a uniform plan, the paragraphs of which give the scientific, vernacular, and European names; habitat or source; history; properties and uses (both chemical and industrial); trade statistics; markets etc. The work is arranged alphabetically according to scientific nomenclature, but commercial and important vernacular names are also given as cross-references, so that little difficulty need be experienced in finding the account of a product even when its scientific name is unknown to the reader.

An important feature of the Dictionary consists in the fact that derived information is in every instance given under quotation marks, and with a reference to the original publication. Numerous contributors have, however, furnished the results of new discoveries, and confirmed the vernacular names, so that the Dictionary is not only a complete compilation of published information, but has been brought abreast of the most recent inventions and discoveries.

Volume I contains the letters A and B, and consists of 559 royal 8vo pages; Volume II embraces the letter C in 689 pages; Volume III contains the letters D, E, F, and half of G; Volume IV, latter half of G to middle of L; and Volume V contains the latter half of L to end of O; Vol. VI (which consists of four parts), Part I, contains letters P to R. The whole work completed in nine volumes (including Parts II to IV of Vol. VI), but a tenth volume may also be issued, consisting of an Index to all the vernacular and other names contained in the Dictionary. The Index will practically be a glossary of the vernacular and European names of the plants, animals, and minerals of India, and, as such, will be a work of reference, which, it is hoped, may prove of considerable value.

ACCOUNTS AND AUDIT.

3. The monthly audit of the accounts has been duly reported for each office to the Comptroller General, and special audits have also been made of the Calcutta, Bombay and Karachi Offices.

CIRCULATION.

4. The following figures show the gross and net circulation* at the beginning and end of the year :—

	Gross circulation.	Retired by other offices.	Net circulation.
	R	R	R
31st March 1897 . . .	24,36,09,585	60,76,515	23,75,33,070

The year closed with a net circulation more than 2 crores lower than that with which it opened. As in the previous year, however, the falling off did not begin until after July, from which month it rapidly declined and the average net circulation for the whole year shows a decrease of more than 10 per cent. as compared with the average of 1895-96. The averages of the last six years have been as follows :—

1891-92	25,43,62,371
1892-93	27,09,95,630
1893-94	28,29,15,237
1894-95	31,11,11,406
1895-96	29,28,10,291
1896-97	25,98,10,128

5. As explained in previous reports the net circulation is not a true indication of the use which is made of notes by the public, as it includes the value of notes held by Government in the Reserve and other treasuries. It does not follow that when the net circulation is high a corresponding rise takes place in the active circulation of notes among the people and this has been strikingly illustrated by the experience of the past few years when owing to the large accumulation of Government balances caused by the results which immediately followed the Currency legislation, the net circulation including the notes in Reserve Treasuries increased to an unprecedentedly high figure while the circulation excluding the amounts in Reserve Treasuries varied in the opposite direction being less in the years 1893-94 and 1894-95, than it had been in the immediately preceding year, 1892-93. In fact, the tendency of late years has been for the active circulation to decrease, as the net circulation increased and vice versa. These results, however, seem to have been abnormal due to the violent disturbance of ordinary conditions caused by the non-distribution of Government balances through their usual channel (viz., payment of Council Bills) in 1893-94 followed by a more rapid distribution than usual in the two following years. In paragraph 11 of last year's report it was shown that prior to this abnormal period it had, as a rule, been customary for the net and active circulation to move on average in the same direction though not to the same extent and in the year now under review these normal features are once more presented as will be seen from the following table which is a reproduction of that published last year with the year 1896-97 added.

* A note is in "gross circulation" when it is not yet returned to the original office of issue; but if it has meantime been paid off by another office of issue, and is held by it pending return to the original office of issue, then it has ceased to be in "net circulation," though it is still part of the "gross circulation."

Year.	Circulation, including Reserve Treasury.	Circulation, excluding Reserve Treasury.
1884 85 .	14,62	13,05	Increased together.
1885-86 .	14.71	13,95	Ditto.
1886 87 .	14,20	13,33	Decreased together.
1887-88 .	16,16	15,54	Increased together.
1888.89 .	16,43	15,27	Slight movement in opposite direction.
1889-90 .	16,15	15,15	Decreased together.
1890-91 .	22,88	21,15	Increased together.
1891-92 .	25,43	23,30	Ditto.
1892-93 .	27,09	24,83	Ditto.
1893-94 .	28,29	22,21	Wide movement in opposite directions.
1894-95 .	31,11	23,95	Increased together.
1895-96 .	29.28	25,86	With movement in opposite directions.
1896-97 .	25,98	24.13	Decreased together.

It does not now seem probable that there will in the immediate future be wide fluctuations in this respect in opposite directions, the Reserve Treasury balances having now fallen to their ordinary level.

6. The following table shows the true active circulation of notes with the public after excluding not only the notes in the Reserve Treasuries but also those in the other Treasuries and the Presidency Banks :—

Last day of month.	Net circulation in lakhs on last day of month.			Amounts held in Reserve Treasuries.			Amounts held in other Treasuries.			Total held in Treasuries.			Balance being notes in circulation with the public.			Notes held by Presidency Banks at Head Offices.			Active circulation among the people.

7. It will be observed from this table that the rise in the active circulation noticed last year which had been continuous for about three years and reached the highest recorded point in 1895-96 has received a check. This is, no doubt to some extent connected with the famine and a still further fall may be anticipated in the earlier months in the current year as the resources of the people are more and more tapped to provide for the present emergency, the natural tendency during a period of scarcity being, for notes to be exchanged for coin to a greater extent than usual.

8. It will also be seen from the table that the active circulation as in the previous year rose to a maximum about October. It then fell, continuously to a minimum in March. As in the previous year also the Presidency Banks note balances were increased by the cessation of the trade demands in June and July. The increase was rather earlier than usual, but its more marked features were that it was both much smaller and less sustained than usual. This result was no doubt, due to the effect of the Government Loan, and a corresponding temporary increase may be observed in the Reserve Treasuries' note balances in the months of July and August. When once the Presidency Banks' balances had fallen owing to the loan they did not recover again as a tighter money market set in and continued to the close of the year. The result has been that the average balance in the Presidency Banks has been particularly low for the year taken as a whole.

9. The active circulation, even excluding the Presidency Bank figures, was lower than that of the previous year for all months from September to March. This was no doubt in some measure due to the famine, but further remarks are made on this point in paragraph 12 below.

10. For the reasons given in previous reports it is difficult to explain in any detail the variations in individual Circles; but it is usual to give the figures for each Circle, and the net circulation is accordingly distributed over the various circles in the following table:—

From this it will be seen that the chief decreases have been in the Calcutta and Bombay Circles: Madras shows a small falling off, and other Circles have slightly increased.

11. It is not possible to bring out for each Circle the active circulation by the method employed above in respect of the total circulation, because both Treasuries and Presidency Banks hold notes of Circles other than their own. The Reserve Treasuries, however, hold practically the whole of their balances in notes of their own Circles, and in the following table the circulation of the three larger Circles is accordingly reduced by the note balances of the Reserve Treasury, and is compared with the corresponding results for the preceding two years :—

12. It may be noticed that in Bombay while there has of late years been a marked increase in the active circulation in the months of September and October, in the year 1896-97 there has been a total absence of such increase. This was, no doubt, due in the first place to the tightness of the money market. A Bank rate ranging from 4 to 8 per cent. prevailing from the months of September to November 1896, while in the previous year the rate did not rise above 3 per cent. until late in November. The balance of notes held by the Presidency Banks and included in the above figures was consequently very low, as will be seen from the following table :—

Average balance of Currency Notes held by the Bank of Bombay.

September	312	453	165
October	338	431	95
November	387	244	101
December	299	172	88
Average .	334	325	112

The effect of a tight market was no doubt aggravated later in the year by the plague and famine, and the same can as regards the famine, be said with respect to the Calcutta circulation of the last three months of the year.

13. The details of the net circulation of 31st March 1897 for each denomination of notes are as follows :—

14. There has been a decrease in notes of all denominations except that of R10, and the decrease in the higher denomination which are largely held by the Reserve Treasury and Presidency Banks is most marked.

15. The percentage of increase or decrease in each denomination as compared with 1895-96 is given below :—

	Increase (+) Decrease (—)
Five Rupee . .	... —2·5
Ten „ . .	... +2·1
Twenty „ . .	... —1·4
Fifty „ . .	... —6·8
One hundred Rupee .	... —2·8
Five „ „ .	... —3·3
One thousand „ .	... —16·4
Ten „ „ .	... —22·5

The cause of the increase in R10 notes is obscure. It has occurred in most circles except Bombay, where the decrease in the circulation of all the lower value notes is very noticeable and can no doubt be traced to the effects of the plague. The details of these for two years are as follows :—

	Bombay circulation. Number of Notes for Rupees.
	5.	10.	20.	50.
1895-96	407,063	1,141,120	132,283	92,054
1896-97	375,850	1,109,949	133,296	81,892

16. Dividing the net circulation between notes of R500 and upwards and notes below R500, the values at the end of each of the last three years have been—

(Thousands of Rupees.)

	Notes of R100 and under, value.	Percentage of total.	Notes of R500 and upward, value.	Percentage of total.	TOTAL.
	R		R		R
1894-95	12,71,30	41	17,98,70	59	30,70,00

1896-97	12,93,50	54	10,81,83	46	23,75,33

The lower value notes are again in excess, and in greater excess than last year. This is due to the causes mentioned above (paragraph 14), viz., the low balances of the Presidency Banks and Reserve Treasury.

17. The varying proportions in which notes of each denomination have circulated in the whole of India and in the principal Circles during the last two years, are exhibited below :—

18. The distribution of the circulation in each Circle between the various denominations of notes has varied but slightly, and each Province still maintains its habitual preference for particular values. For the first time for some years, however, the percentage of R5 notes used in Bombay has fallen, there having been at the same time an increase in the use of R10 notes. Madras has again taken rather a larger share of R10 notes and a smaller one of those of R100. The circulation of R10,000 notes has decreased on the whole for reasons already indicated. The percentage of R10 notes used in all India has again risen at the expense of other values, there being so far no check in the increasing popularity of this value.

19. The average value during the last four years of the notes in circulation in each circle on the last day of the year is given below, notes of R10,000 being excluded, as their high value and irregular consumption only tend to create mistaken impressions:—

	1896-97.	1895-96.	1894-95.	1893-94.

Calicut „	29	38	29	27
Rangoon „	43	42	47	45
All India	31	33	34	34

20. Except in Calicut, where the average value has decreased to its former level, the changes are slight, the total result being a small decrease in values.

ANALYSIS OF CIRCULATION.

21. There is nothing new to report on the subject of the analysis of circulation. As stated in previous reports, all differences have been ascertained, even where they have not been reconciled, and current work can now, therefore, be proved, allowing for the known differences.

RESERVE.

22. The Currency Reserve upon 31st March 1897 stood as follows:

Silver Coin—
At Calcutta	2,88,80,811	6	0

				9,99,99,945	10	0
Total agreeing with net circulation (vide paragraph 4).				23,75,33,070	0	0

23. The proportion of the Currency Reserve held in coin is now about 56 per cent. against 69 and 74 per cent. in each of the two preceding years. This fall is due to the investment of a further sum of two crores in Government Securities made under the legislation of December last.

24. The half-yearly verifications of the Currency balances on the 30th September, 1896, and 31st March, 1897, were held for all Circles and Sub-Circles, the balances being verified in accordance with the orders issued on the subject by a gazetted officer unconnected with the Currency Department.

INVESTMENTS.

25. The nominal value of the investment is R10,20,81,500 which is held at a book-value of R9,99,99,945-10-0. Of the nominal value, R8,15,95,000 consist of 3½ per cent and R2,04,86,500 of 3 per cent. securities.

PROFITS OF CIRCULATION.

26. The interest realised and credited under the head "Profits on Note circulation" during the year is R28,55,825, being the interest on the nominal amount invested at 3½ per cent. No interest was realised during the year on the amount invested at 3 per cent.

ISSUE AND RECEIPT OF NOTES.

27. The following are the gross issues and receipts of the year, the detail by Circles being shown in Statement VI :—

Balance, being gross circulation, March 31st, 1897 (vide paragraph 4)		24,36,09,585

28. The transactions between Head Offices and Agencies show a large increase as the use of this means of preventing actual remittances is being more largely resorted to everywhere. The receipts from other Currency Circles represent the receipts in each Circle of its own notes cashed in other Circles; the amounts so received again increased this year exceeding those of last year by 88 lakhs and being larger than any year since 1893-94.

29. The remittances are for the most part payments and receipts of one Currency Office, in consideration of receipts or payments at another. The total remittance transactions were exceptionally heavy due to low Government balances and a straitened money market rendering numerous remittances necessary both on Government and trade account.

30. The total issues and receipts for the last three years are as follows:—

	Issues. ₹	Receipts. ₹
1894-95	1,00,57,23,145	1,00,23,36,925
1895-96	1,17,17,93,445	1,21,74,23,785
1896-97	1,22,64,01,040	1,24,98,63,505

31. The issues have increased by about 546 lakhs, and the receipts by 324 lakhs as compared with the previous year, the difference being made up as follows:—

	Issues.	Receipts.
Over the counter	−3,56	−6,85
Remittance transactions	+7,56	+9,15
From other Currency Circles . . .	—	+88
Other heads	+1,46	+6
	+5,46	+3,24

32. The Issues and Receipts in the various Circles bears no fixed proportion to the circulation. This is brought out in the following table which gives for each of the larger circles, the value of the gross circulation, the mean value of the receipts and issues, and the percentage of the former on the latter:—

IN LAKHS OF RUPEES.

NAME OF CIRCLE.	Average circulation on last day of month.	Mean value of Receipts and Issues.	Percentage of amount in column 2 on that in column 3.
Calcutta .	11,02	54,40	20

Lahore	1,81	9,09
Bombay	7,28	25,05	29
Madras	3,04	17,33	17
Rangoon	55	10,17

33. The aggregate gross issues and receipts of the several denominations of notes at both Offices of Issue and Agencies during the year were as follows:—

	Number of Notes for Rupees.							Total.
	10	20	50	100	500	1,000	10,000	Number.	Value.
Issues . .	1,068,746	6,059,452	645,477	443,419	1,434,953	169,070	291,072	60,628	10,172,817	122,64,01,040
Receipts .	1,083,621	5,973,074	652,933	462,948	1,455,756	170,530	301,958	61,571	10,162,391	124,98,63,505
More Issues .	—	86,378	—						10,426
„ Receipts .	14,875	—	7,456	19,529	20,803	1,460	10,886	943		2,34,62,465

The receipts exceeded the issues in every case except in that of notes of R10, following the decrease in the circulation which has already been referred to.

34. The average number of notes that passed over the counters at each Head Office on each working day during the past three years, and the daily average of cancellations are given in the following table :—

	Notes cashed.			Notes Issued.			Notes cancelled.
	1894-95.	1895-96.	1896-97.	1894-95.	1895-96.	1896-97.	1894-95.	1895-96.	1896-97.
At Calcutta . .	12,880	14,520	14,806	15,437	16,251	16,093	10,053	11,691	13,000
„ Bombay . .	7,720	8,630	8,490	8,878	9,651	8,761	5,032	4,829	5,077

35. The proportion of cancellations continues high, especially in the Madras and Rangoon Circles, the withdrawals of notes which have been at all soiled being regarded as an important safeguard against forgery. The difference in procedure in this respect, at the time when the Department was first organised and at the present time, is made evident by the following table, which shows the percentages of cancellations in the Calcutta Circle in the first, second and third years of the notes issued in 1862 and 1892. Five Rupee notes were first issued in 1872.

36. The following table shows in continuation of that given last year what proportion of the first issues still remain in circulation. This information is given for all India (except Burmah). The first issues were made in 1862 in Calcutta, Bombay and Madras; in 1864 in Allahabad and Lahore; and not until 1883 in Burmah. There were a few errors in last year's table, which have now been corrected and which account for some small differences which may be observed.

Denomination.		First Year.		Second Year.
		Issued.	Outstanding.	Issued.	Outstanding.
		₹	₹	₹	₹
Rupees	10	25,50,000	22,530	14,75,000	10,530

	Total	4,24,60,500	1,54,770	4,49,69,800	52,640

37. The outstandings in the issues of the first year are proportionately nearly three times as large as those of the second year's issues, possibly because Paper Currency when quite a novelty was not preserved so carefully as when its value became better known. It appears not unlikely that not less than a lakh of the first year's issue will never be presented for payment. These old notes are still coming in, though slowly. Taking the Calcutta Circle alone, the cancellations of the issues of the first year, 1862, during the last ten years are shown below:—

Denomination.		Originally issued in 1862.	Cancelled since 1885.	Still outstanding.

38. It seems evident, therefore, that many of these notes must have been lost and will never be presented. The Bank of England makes extraordinary investments of the value of all notes outstanding for more than forty years.

39. Some difficulty was occasioned during the year by the Bank of England stopping the issue of certain series which had hitherto been confined to a particular circle and issuing new series to certain circles, the letter denoting which had previously been used in other circles. This necessitated in some cases a second serial letter (A) being stamped on the notes in India after the original serial letter, in order to distinguish them from notes bearing the same serial letter previously issued. It has since been arranged with the Bank of England to stop the issue to circles of serial letters belonging to another circle and to issue for each circle only the serial letter previously used for it adding a second serial letter (A) in cases where the old letter has been exhausted.

The stock of R10 notes in Madras ran short during the year, and it had to be supplied temporarily with Rangoon Notes with the word Madras overprinted on them.

The letter (c) indicates the value of Foreign Notes which were legally encashable, i.e., the amount of Sub-Circle notes encashed by their respective head circles.

42. The gross amount of Foreign Circle encashments by all circles for 1896-97 exceeds that of the previous year by about 47 lakhs. The chief variations have been net decreases of 53 and 12 lakhs in Allahabad and Lahore and net increases of 39, 54 and 34 lakhs at Calcutta, Madras and Calicut. Calcutta has cashed fewer notes of Bombay and Rangoon, but more notes of other Circles. Bombay has cashed fewer notes of Calcutta and Allahabad but more notes of other circles. In Allahabad the decrease has been chiefly in Calcutta notes.

43. The encashment of Foreign Circle Notes represents the transfer of funds by the public from one Circle to another, and the following statement compares, in lakhs of rupees, the net transfer thus made between each of the Circles during the last two years. The plus figures indicate that transfers to the Circle exceeded those from it, and the minus figures represent an opposite movement

	1895-96.	1896-97.	Difference
Calcutta .	+199	+284	+85
Allahabad .	—19	—123	—104
Lahore .	—124	—225	—101
Bombay .	+78	+174	+96
Karachi .	—18	—40	—22
Madras .	—80	—45	+35
Calicut .	—25	—19	+6
Rangoon .	—11	—6	+5

44. The most important transfers were those from Madras and Lahore to Bombay, and from Allahabad and Lahore to Calcutta and Calcutta to Allahabad.

45. As noticed in previous reports the closing of the Mints has caused a very considerable difference in the encashment of Bombay notes by other Circles. Before the Mints were closed the transfers from that Circle always exceeded the transfers to it, but since that event the transfers to it have been in excess. The net figures for Bombay for the last seven years are :—

—186	—68	—161	+70	+6	+78	+174

The difference occurs largely in the encashment of Bombay notes at Calcutta, the amounts so encashed having been in the last seven years 266, 184, 258, 112, 132, 178 and 74 lakhs respectively. When the Mints were open, silver was chiefly imported at Bombay and tendered to the Currency Department, and the notes received in payment were to a large extent remitted to Calcutta and paid in as revenue; but this has ceased with the closing of the Mints.

48. The net result was a decrease in the coin reserve of 421 lakhs. This decrease after deducting 2 crores on account of the fresh investment in December 1896 and R2,75,000 paid at Allahabad last year (but received in 1895-96) exactly corresponds with the decrease in the net circulation as shown in para. 4.

49. The receipts and issues exceeded those of the previous year by 7,35 lakhs and 6,83 lakhs respectively, the differences being made up as follows :—

51. The total amounts of shroff-marked rupees withdrawn from circulation in the last eight years are shown below :—

1895-96	13,34
1896-97	15,13

There has again been an increase in the amount withdrawn.

52. The total amount of 1835 coin withdrawn since it was first recalled is about 75 lakhs, a large portion of this has been provisionally utilised in the coinage of small coin at the Mint.

53. The following statement shows the number of coins cut and broken under the Coinage Act during the calendar year 1895 :—

The amount of coin believed to have been reduced by fraudulent means is still largest in the North-Western Provinces, Punjab and India Treasuries. There is some reason to think that a portion of that believed to have lost more than 2 per cent. by reasonable wear has really been reduced by other means, but its detection at the treasuries is a matter of great difficulty.

54. There was no coinage of whole rupees during the year. The usual statements of whole rupees coined and issued from the Indian Mints from 1835 to 1893, and of the rupee census or proportion of each of those annual issues found on examination in each District Treasury of a certain number of rupees of the coin ordinarily current in each district, are shown below :—

VICTORIA.

55. The statement does not exhibit any marked feature. The proportion of the issues of 1840 and 1862 is still larger than in 1893, and very slightly larger than last year, the figures for five years being 34·6, 34·6, 35·5, 35·7, and 35·8, per cent. As there ought naturally to be a decrease in the amount of earlier issues in circulation, this appears to show that hoarded rupees continue to some small extent to be exchanged for bar silver. I append a short note by Mr. Harrison on the present circulation.

Proportion of the several issues of Government Rupees in actual circulation in each Province in the years 1875, 1880, 1885, 1886, 1887, 1888, 1889, 1890, 1891, 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895, 1896, and 1897 as ascertained by the examination, each year, of a bag containing £2,000 in every Government Treasury.

In what year examined.

EXCHANGE OF SMALL COIN.

55. The receipts and issues of small change at the Currency Offices during the year were as follows :—

TOTAL, 1895-96 .	28,32,726	0	0	54,38,527	12	0	26,05,801	12	0

There have been larger receipts and much larger issues of small silver compared with the previous year. The chief increase in the net issues occurs in half rupees and quarter rupees at Calcutta and Allahabad and eighth rupees at Calcutta.

AGENCIES.

57. The only Province in which the Currency Agency system, properly so called, is at all thoroughly worked, is the Punjab. The issue of notes from the Agencies in that Province at Simla, Rawal Pindi, Umballa, and Peshawar shows a very large increase, the total issues amounting to 2,32 lakhs against 1,69 lakhs in 1895-96 and 158 lakhs in 1894-95. The issues from Agencies form a very large proportion (25 per cent.) of the total issues in this Circle.

58. The other so-called Agencies are really Currency chests, established with the object of more conveniently and rapidly effecting the resource operations of Government. This system is being developed every year.

59. At the end of the year, the total number of Currency chests was 148 against 161 in 1895-96, but the total balance of coin deposited in them was upwards of 6,70 lakhs of rupees against 6,25 in 1895-96 distributed as follows :—

CLAIMS ON LOST NOTES.

60. The following is a statement of lost and mutilated notes paid during the year on bond of indemnity :—

Nature of loss.	Number of notes for Rupees

Whole notes, lost or destroyed	..	...	...	3	8	4	...	...	15	2,950

1895-96 .	39	365	137	101	412	24	22	...	1,100	86,835
1894-95 .	53	311	92	133	490	30	13	...	1,122	88,805

Both the number and the value of these claims increased during the past year, but are very small when compared with the value of the notes in circulation. Notes lost by theft are not included in the above statement, as no claim lies on their account against the Department. The names and addresses of presenters of stolen notes are ascertained and communicated to the Police, but these proceedings seldom lead to the recovery of the value of the notes by the rightful owners. Thus in Calcutta 98 cases were referred to the Police during the year, in three of which only were convictions secured,—two were on account of notes of ₹100 and one was on account of a ₹500 note.

FRAUD AND FORGERY

61. The forged notes presented during the year have been the following :—

Circle in which presented.	R5.	R10.	R20.	R50.	R100.	R500.	R1,000.	TOTAL.
Calcutta	1	34	...	...	...	3	3	41
Bombay	2	1	...	...	1	2	...	6
Madras	...	...	1	...	...	...	...	1
Allahabad	...	1	...	3	...	3	...	7
Lahore	...	4	...	...	...	...	...	4
Rangoon	3	...	...	...	...	...	...	3
TOTAL	6	40	1	3	1	8	3	62

The total number falls short of that of the previous year by 32, the chief decreases being in Bombay and Madras; but nearly all the large numbers in those provinces in the previous year were seized in two cases.

62. Of the Calcutta forgeries the R5 note was one of the $\frac{R}{70}$ series of which specimens had previously come to light in 1888 and 1890. The forgers and utterers of these have not been detected. Of the 10-rupee notes, 8 belonged to the well-known Mahendra forgery, one to the $\frac{U}{22}$ and one to the $\frac{U}{24}$ forgery, both of which are described in paragraph 54 of the report for 1892-93, and one belonged to the $\frac{V}{2}$ forgery of the same year. Nothing fresh was discovered regarding those forgeries. The other 23 notes were new forgeries, of which 13 were of the $\frac{V}{17}$ series and were brought down in a batch by the Police, having been discovered in Buxar. Another rather large batch of the same forgery has since been discovered in Calcutta. Two men have been sent up for trial in connection with the Buxar notes, and the matter is still under investigation by the Police who are endeavouring to trace the original source of the forgery. This forgery is an extremely good one, and might be passed even by Banks in the course of business. The other forgeries are crude and only likely to deceive the most ignorant. Of the R500 notes, two belong to the old Etawah forgery of 1889-90. Thakur Das, the leader of the gang then convicted, is still in jail for another seven years, but some of his accomplices have been released and are apparently putting these notes into circulation again. In one of these cases the utterer was arrested but has absconded. In the third case the note has not been yet received for inspection, but the utterer has been sentenced at Moradabad to 10 years' imprisonment. Of the R1,000 notes, two were of the Cawnpur forgery of 1894-95. In one of these the utterer has been sentenced at Benares to 10 years'. imprisonment. The other case is still under investigation by the police. The third case is apparently a new forgery; the utterer was acquitted for want of sufficient evidence. Of the Bombay notes, all were old forgeries (in which the utterers have all been convicted in previous years), except one for R500, Bombay series $\frac{R}{21}$, and one for R100, Bombay series $\frac{W}{33}$. In the former case the utterer was convicted in Bombay and sentenced to four years' imprisonment. In the latter case no clue has been obtained.

63. The Madras forgery was a new one of inferior execution. The utterer was convicted and sentenced to two years' imprisonment at Bangalore. The Allahabad cases were all old forgeries. Those of ₹50 were of the $\frac{1}{5^0}$ Calcutta series, and the utterer was sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment at Budaon. The ₹10 note was of the $\frac{R}{8^8}$ series, and the ₹500 notes of the $\frac{V}{7^5}$ series. The utterer in one of the latter cases was convicted at Moradabad In the other cases the accused have not been apprehended. In the Lahore cases the notes were all Calcutta notes of old forgeries. The utterer has not been detected. The three notes presented at Rangoon were sent to the Assay Office by the Bank of Bengal, Moulmein; they were of the old Rangoon forgery mentioned in the report for 1891-92. Apparently, there has been no conviction in respect of the present case.

64. There have been a few cases of fraud in connection with claims on half and mutilated notes of the usual description. In one case in Calcutta one Koylash Nath Sanyal deposited the right half of a currency note for ₹10 and claimed value on the ground that he had received the entire note in 1895 on account of pay, and not half of it, whereas, as a matter of fact, the other half had been sent to the Currency Office in May 1880 by the Post Master General, Bengal, as an unclaimed note. No prosecution has so far been undertaken in this case. In a somewhat similar case, however, at Sehore, where a claim was made to the Bombay office for value of a note, half of which was produced and half stated to have been lost in a previous year in which the half note was known to have been in the Currency Office, a conviction was obtained and one Oomrajan was sentenced to a fine of ₹55 or 3 months' imprisonment in default. The punishment appears to have been inadequate In another case in Calcutta, on which a similar claim was made by one Rama Nath Mahapatra in December 1896, a prosecution has been instituted, but the accused has not yet been placed on his trial.

A similar case also occurred in Madras, in which one Samanna Chetty claimed value on two half notes of ₹100 each, stating that the other halves had been lost. It was proved, however, that they had been deposited by a bonâ fide claimant as a mismatched note in 1892, and Samanna was convicted of attempting to cheat and fined ₹1,000 or 3 months' imprisonment in default.

Another case of similar nature also occurred in Madras, in which one Narayan, Patel of Belgaum, was convicted of attempting to cheat by representing that he had a half note in his possession in August 1895 and lost it, while it was proved that the note was in the Currency Office at the time under investigation of a bonâ fide claim. The accused was sentenced to fine or imprisonment, but was acquitted by the Sessions Judge. The Legal Remembrancer has, however, advised an appeal against the acquittal. Still one more case of this sort in Bangalore is now under enquiry. In another case one Debi Das reported in February 1896 that a note for ₹100 was stolen from him on the 14th of that month. The note was subsequently cashed at Calcutta, and, report having been made, the receiver of the note as stolen property was detected and convicted. One case of attempted fraud occurred at Allahabad, where a note for R10 was altered to R10,000. The alteration was very clumsy, and the two persons implicated were convicted and sentenced at Lucknow to seven years' imprisonment.

65. A somewhat peculiar case occurred in Bombay in which one Jamsedji Framji claimed from Government the value of certain half notes, the other halves of which he alleged had been obtained from him by cheating by one Chutterbhuj. As however he had taken no action against Chutterbhuj in either a Civil or Criminal Court to prove that the transaction was a fraudulent one and as he admitted that he had given the half notes to Chutterbhuj voluntarily, payment of his claim was refused. He then brought an action against Government in the Court of the Sessions Judge, Karachi, for the value of the half notes which was defended under the advice of the Hon'ble Advocate General, Bombay. The case has since been decided against the claimant.

As the earnings of three important railways, viz., the Oudh and Rohilkhund, the Bengal North Western, and the Indian Midland Railways, are paid into the North-Western Provinces treasuries, and as the revenue collected in those provinces ordinarily exceeds the expenditure disbursed within them, there has been for some years past a large accumulation of silver coin there. As mentioned in paragraph 66 of last year's report, silver coin has also been gravitating to the Madras Presidency for sometime past. During the first half of the year under review remittances of silver were therefore regulated mainly with the object of dispersing these accumulations of silver in the North-Western Provinces and the Madras Presidency. Thus R127 lakhs and 175 lakhs, of which 25 lakhs were sent through Bombay were remitted from the two Provinces respectively to Calcutta where the financing of the excellent jute crop of Bengal created an exceptionally heavy demand for coin.

The ordinary course of silver remittances was, however, entirely changed during the second half of the year in consequence of the famine. Owing to the serious falling off in Land Revenue and the large famine expenditure on famine relief in the North-Western Provinces and the Central Provinces, it became necessary to send heavy remittances to them, 43 lakhs having been remitted through the Currency Department and 30 lakhs through the treasury to the North-Western Provinces and 36 lakhs to the Central Provinces through the treasury. The exports of rice from Burma were exceptionally heavy during the year and it became necessary to remit 50 lakhs in coin to Rangoon of which 25 were sent from Bombay and 25 lakhs from Calicut.

Owing to a general failure of crops and the plague in Bombay, the net exports during the year fell short of those of the previous year by more than 12 crores. There was however a small increase in the net absorption of rupees in consequence of the famine as it involved a large outlay on the part of the State and also because the general rise in prices necessitated an increase in the circulating medium of exchange.

During the first quarter of the year, there appears to have been a large decrease in the demand for coin as 105 lakhs worth of coin came back from circulation while in the corresponding period of the previous year 78 lakhs passed into circulation. This was apparently due partly to the large falling off in the net exports and partly to the issues in the previous year having been exceptionally heavy in the Punjab in consequence of the Chitral Expedition.

During the second quarter, there was a heavy demand for coin in Bengal in consequence of the excellent jute crops. The famine commenced in the third quarter and created a demand for coin in the North-Western Provinces and the Central Provinces which was partly counterbalanced by a falling off in the demand in Bombay and the Central Provinces in consequence of smaller exports of cotton. The most notable feature of the fourth quarter was a large demand for coin in Burma created by the heavy exports of rice from there.

69. The following statement compares the distribution of silver at the end of 1896-97 with that at the end of the two previous years :—

The statement shows that there is an accumulation in Madras and the Punjab; the surplus in the Punjab has already been removed to Kurrachee and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. Several remittances have also been sent from Madras, but there is still an accumulation there, a portion of which is likely to be dispersed by the outlay on Famine Relief works, but remittances will still have to be made to other provinces to reduce the circulation in the province to its proper level.

TREASURY STATISTICS.

70. The transactions in notes at the several Treasuries in India during 1893-94, 1894-95, and 1895-96 have been as follows:—

	1894-95.	1895-96.	1896-97.
Receipts from the Public in payment of Government dues	14,69,48,715	17,28,96,790	15,67,67,880
Receipts from the Public in exchange for silver	3,37,97,101	3,47,69,697	2,89,27,880
Receipts from the Public for other notes	28,65,120	35,48,830	35,22,150
TOTAL RECEIPTS	18,36,10,936	21,12,15,317	18,92,17,910
Issues to the Public in payment of Government dues	6,34,63,665	6,62 54,559	7,22,62,065
Issues to the Public in exchange for silver	3,83,79,781	4,60,39,443	4,73,62,045
Issues to the Public for other notes	28,65,120	35,48,830	35,22,150
TOTAL ISSUES	10,47,08,566	11,58,42,832	12,31,46,260

There has been a decrease in the receipts and an increase in the issues of notes at treasuries. That in receipts under the head Payment of Government dues, was a consequence no doubt of the smaller active circulation. The decrease in the issues of coin in exchange for notes, is probably due to the lower treasury coin balances prevalent during the year and the consequent restriction of encashment of notes for the public.

71. The total Treasury transactions in notes during the last three years have been as follows (in lakhs of rupees):—

	94-95.	1895-96.	1896-
Government of India	361	434	301
Central Provinces	59	78	66
Burma	66	61	65
Assam	78	87	90
Bengal	562	620	654
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	278	334	284
Punjab	479	520	533
Madras	510	544	532
Bombay	482	582	586
Hyderabad	7	10	11
TOTAL	2,882	3,270	3,122

There was, on the whole, a decrease, but the figures of the various provinces show fluctuations which cannot be explained.

72. The following statement gives details regarding the encashment of notes by Treasuries:—

	1894-95.	895-96.	1896-97.
Where notes were cashed throughout the year to the extent of the public demand	188	187	186
Where notes were ordinary but not always cashed . .	38	40	41
Where notes were not usually cashed	18	17	16
TOTAL .	244	244	243

This return, as at present prepared, is hardly a trustworthy guide to the general condition of affairs in regard to the encashment of notes. From the statement in para. 70 above it will be seen that this encashment was undoubtedly restricted which means that, in consequence of their low balances, treasuries were obliged to be stricter that usual in the encashment of notes during, at all events, a portion of the year, and the table here given should bring out the same result. Steps will be taken to ensure this return containing more accurate information in future.

73. Statement V shows the proportion of Treasury and Bank balances which in each Province were held in the form of Currency Notes.

Including Reserve Treasuries the percentage of balances held in notes was:—

	1895.	1896.
Calcutta Circle	34 per cent.	56 per cent.
Bombay ,, ...	28 ,,	45 ,,
Madras ,, ...	29 ,,	43 ,,

But if Reserve Treasuries were omitted, the figures would be:—

	1895. Balance in		1896. Balance in		Percentage Notes.
	Notes.	Cash.	Notes.	Cash.	1895.	1896.
	In thousands of rupees.				Per cent.	Per cent.
Calcutta Circle . . .	50,82	1,78,64	35,22	1,11,67	22	31
Bombay ,, . . .	17,47	78,41	14,96	62,46	18
Madras ,, . . .	22,22	1,12,96	14,20	79,28	16

This result, an increase in the balance of notes held as compared with coin, might have been expected from the low coin balances which are known to have existed during the year and which were remarked upon above.

RECEITPS AND EXPENDITURE.

74. The figures of receipts and expenditure given in Statement III are only approximate as the accounts for 1896-97 are not yet closed. There was no difference between the actual receipts in 1895-96 and the approximate figures given in last year's report, but the expenditure was more by R407-12-8 than the approximate figures. Details of the differences are given in the foot-note to Statement III. The charges for 1896-97 were more than in the previous year by R1,66,000 due almost entirely to an increase in the charges for note forms and the cost of remittances.

A note upon the Rupee Circulation and 1835 Coinage by Mr. F. C. Harrison, Accountant General, Madras.

I mentioned last year that it is now extremely difficult to utilise these figures for the purpose of calculating the circulation. Still to preserve the continuity of the record, I append the table usually given:—

Its meaning is perhaps clearer when the figures are grouped I show the 1835 entries separately as this issue is under recall.

No conclusion, however, can be drawn from this table until some attempt is made to correct the figures for 1835. Many treasuries in 1896 and 1897 (in spite of very particular instructions in 1897) examined the contents of bags of rupees which had been already purged of 1835 coin. The error for 1896 can be corrected with fair accuracy, for in July 1896 the Comptroller General at my request asked each treasury to examine the month's receipts and report the proportion of 1835 rupees found as compared with other issues. The result, when calculated according to the system followed in constructing table A, was that 1·05 per cent. of the circulation was found to consist of 1835 coin. As the 1896 census took place in May and this issue is under recall, it is clear that the May figure must be higher than 1·05. Again, when separating 1835 rupees, some are no doubt overlooked. For these reasons I substitute 1·2 for the entry ·77 representing the 1835 coinage present in 1896 according to tables A and B.

Similarly in 1897 many treasuries sent in returns showing no 1835 coin. As this result was obviously impossible and due to their neglect of our instructions, I had a fresh examination made in nearly all such cases,* and the result comes out that 1835 coin formed ·7, not ·5, of the circulation of 1897.

Table C shows the result of making these corrections, which both probably are on the safe side.

The total in some cases is not quite 100 owing to miscellaneous coin, which is sometimes found being excluded.

The changes that have taken place during the last few years since the closure of the mints exhibit a considerable divergence from the even tenor of the old returns. This was only to be expected. In 1894 the new rupees of 1892 and 1893 were still entering the circulation, and the consequent increase in the percentage present of the 1888-93 group operated to reduce the percentages of the older groups, the William IV rupee obstinately resisting. This latter fact seems to point to a slight re-appearance on balance of the older mintages from hoards. In 1895 the influx of new rupees had ceased, and the re-appearance of older coin became more marked. The same tendency continued in 1896, although, as was carefully explained in my note of last year, it does not in the least follow that there was an absolute increase in the total circulation. This year the movement in opposite directions of the percentages of the 1840-76 and 1877-88 groups has received a check. The explanation of this change in direction is probably the famine. The people cannot afford to melt rupees for ornaments (the practice may also be languishing) so much as formerly, and they cannot hoard. The result is that there is less to counteract any re-appearance from hoards. The former cause is less operative in the case of the 1840-76 group, for old coin is obviously less melted than heavier coin. The above reasoning perhaps accounts for the relative difference in the increase shown by these two groups. It must not be forgotten that the change is very slight, and in the main is simply due to the shrinkage in the William IV percentage caused by the recall of this issue.

I now pass to an examination of the statistics of the recall of the William IV or "1835 rupee." This recall commenced in February 1896. Strictly speaking, the term 'recall' is inaccurate,—the orders of Government are simply not to re-issue it. The following table shows the withdrawals of this rupee according to provinces for each month.

NOTE.—The details will not always work to the totals, for the latter are correct, whilst the former, for economy of space, are given correct to three places only.

The receipts of mofussil treasuries and the head-quarter banks and currency offices are shown separately. It will be noticed that the monthly receipts do not exhibit any uniform progression. This is due to the various times at which the main revenue of Government is collected, and also to the fact that these withdrawals necessarily increase when Government, being straitened for funds, orders their movement—each movement, of course, bringing a large number of rupees under examination.

The table shows that up to the end of May 86½ lakhs of these rupees have been withdrawn.

I now propose to attempt to utilise these data to check previous estimates of the circulation. In table E, I show the previous percentages contributed in each province by the 1835 rupee to the circulation.

I omit the details for 1896 on account of their untrustworthiness (already explained in part I of this note). The comparison is, therefore, between the circulations of 1895 and 1897. Column III shows the decrease in the percentage due to the recall. Column IV gives the details of the recall in each province. Column V is deduced from columns III and IV by a simple rule of three. It is clear that, when we can measure a percentage, we can calculate the whole. The total circulation thus arrived at is 105⅓ crores. The Punjab circulation is, however, probably overstated by about half a crore. Twenty lakhs of hoarded rupees were received from Jhind State, and amongst them were 87,897 William IV rupees. The exclusion of these reduces the Punjab estimate by the amount stated. On the other hand, the total estimate makes no allowance for the circulation of the Berars or of Mysore and other Native States using British rupees more or less. It will be safe to add about 5 crores on this account, thus raising the whole total to Rs 110⅓ crores. The largest previous estimate of the circulation which I have formed is 130 crores. The question now arises whether either or both these estimates are accurate—in the latter alternative, it would be necessary to hold that the circulation has substantially decreased since 1893 or 1894. A glance at the detailed provincial figures will at once suggest that the Bengal figure is far too low, whilst the remaining results accord generally, indeed closely,* with previous impressions. I find, too, on looking into the Bengal details, that some of them appear unduly low. It must be remembered that, although allowance has been made (by a recount) for all cases where no 1835 rupees have been returned as found, no allowance has been made for cases where very few were found ; i.e., it is probable that just as through disobedience or neglect only bags already purged of 1835 were in some cases examined, so also in other cases some of the bags examined were purged bags. The Bengal circulation cannot be less than the Bombay circulation, which is, I think, slightly overestimated at $29\frac{3}{4}$ crores. I propose, therefore, to raise the Bengal estimate by 8 crores and lower that of Bombay by 3 crores; the total will now be $115\frac{1}{4}$ crores. The cause to which I allude as lowering unduly the 1835 coins has to a smaller extent vitiated all the provincial figures, but not, I think, to a very serious extent. Perhaps, it will be right to raise our total to 120 crores. Further than this I am not prepared to go. Whether, therefore, the previous estimate of 130 crores was too high or whether 10 crores have disappeared since then, I cannot tell. My impression is that there has been little change, and that what change there has been is in the direction of a fall. I would add, in conclusion, that if it seem that I juggle too much with these figures, I can always be judged by results, viz., I place the circulation at about 120 crores, of which I hold about ·8 to be 1835 coin. In other words, our actual receipts of 1835 coin in the next two years (which should suffice to purge the circulation of this issue) are likely to be very nearly a crore.

* The consilience is remarkable. ·7 per cent. is the proportion of 1835 coin present in the circulation of 1897 according to Table C of part I. Now if ·7 per cent. be the figure for 1897 and 1·55 for 1895, the difference is ·85. But the present withdrawals are $80\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs. Then if ·85=$80\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs, the whole circulation is $\frac{100 \times 80\frac{1}{2}}{\cdot 85}$=101·7 crores. If, as above, I add 8 crores for the error in the Bengal estimate and 5 crores on account of Berars and Native States, and deduct 3 crores for the over estimate in the Bombay estimate, I arrive at a total of 111·7 crores, which agrees very closely with the figures given above.

REVIEW OF THE REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE RECORDED UNDER THE HEAD "IRRIGATION WORKS" IN THE ACCOUNTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA FOR 1895-96.

No. 236-I., dated Simla, the 7th September 1897.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Public Works Department.

READ—

Note by A. R. Becher, Esq., Officiating Accountant General, Public Works Department, upon the Accounts of Revenue and Expenditure of Irrigation Works in India for 1895-96.

RESOLUTION.—The Irrigation Works in India are divided into Major Works and Minor Works.

Major Works are sub-divided into—

Minor Works, for the purposes of the Accountant General's note, are sub-divided into—

2. Capital and Revenue Accounts are kept for all Major Irrigation Works, of which there were 47 during 1895-96, an increase of one as compared with the previous year. The new Major Work is the Dad Canal, a work in Bombay (Sind) classified as Productive.

Of the 47 Major Works, 39 were sanctioned as Productive Public Works and 8 as Protective Works.

Under Minor Works, there are 76 projects for which Capital and Revenue Accounts are kept: for the others only one account of receipts and charges for each work or group of works is kept.

3. The following statement shows the returns derived from the Irrigation systems, Major and Minor, for which Capital and Revenue Accounts are kept. Purely navigation systems are excluded:—

Class of work.	Number of works.	Direct and indirect Capital outlay to end of 1895-96.	Gross Revenue.	Working expenses, including indirect charges.	Net Revenue.	Irrigated area.	Percentage of net revenue on Capital outlay.

* Excludes the Hijili Tidal Canal (Bengal).

† Includes outlay on Gokak Canal, 1st section, which is now classed as a Minor Work and combined with Gokak Storage Works.

‡ Excluding two navigation canals in Bengal (the "Calcutta and Eastern" and the "Orissa Coast" canals) and four navigation canals in Madras (the Chilka Lake, Buckingham, Vedâranniyam, Ganjam-Gopalpur canals), and one Irrigation canal in Madras (the Ganjam Minor rivers system), complete Capital and Revenue Accounts of which have not yet been prepared.

4. The net revenue derived from Major Irrigation Works was Rx. 42,833 less than in the previous year. The decrease is due to a falling off of revenue amounting to Rx. 160,203 in the North-Western Provinces where the favourable winter rains of 1894-95 caused a great reduction in the canal irrigated area of the rabi of that year, the collections on account of which come into the accounts of the year under review. This decrease was partly balanced by an increase of revenue in the Punjab and Madras due to the development of irrigation in the former Province and to the enhancement of water-rates in the latter.

The Periyar Project, the Jamrao Canal and the Fatehpur Branch of the Lower Ganges Canal were not opened for irrigation during 1895-96. When these projects are completed and when the irrigation from them and from projects, such as the Chenab Canal, recently opened for irrigation, is fully developed, the net profit from Major Works should be considerably increased.

The total net profit on all Major Works up to the end of 1895-96 amounted, after allowing for interest charges, to over 3½ millions of Rx.

5. The following statement shows the area irrigated by, and the gross revenue derived from, the Major and Minor Irrigation Works during the last five years :-

* Exclusive of figures for certain works in Madras, which were not given in the Revenue Report for 1891-92.
† The increase was due to the inclusion in the Accounts for 1892-93 of irrigation revenue of certain works in Madras pertaining to the year 1891-92, vide note * above.
‡ Exclusive of the area irrigated from the Native States Branches of the Sirhind and Western Jumna Canals in the Punjab.
§ Exclusive of the areas irrigated from the Native States Branches of the Sirhind Canal and from the Patiala Section of Sirsa Branch, Western Jumna Canal, in the Punjab.

The area irrigated is in excess of that of the previous year and approaches ten million acres, but owing to causes explained in paragraph 4 above, there was a decrease in the gross revenue realised.

The area irrigated in Native States in the Punjab from the channels constructed from funds contributed by the States amounted to 338,813 acres.

6. The estimated value of the crops irrigated from the Major and Minor Works during 1895-96 amounted to Rx. 26,009,137 being an average of Rx. 2·60 per acre.

7. The average rate of revenue assessed per acre irrigated was Rx. 0·36 and Rx. 0·22 for Major and Minor Works respectively, and the figures being the same as in the previous year. For Major Works the rate varies from Rx. 0·73 in Bombay (excluding Sind) to Rx. 0·18 in Bengal and Sind, and for Minor Works from Rx. 0·33 in Baluchistan to Rx. 0·13 in the Punjab.

8. The areas of principal crops irrigated during 1895-96 in the various Provinces by the works for which Capital and Revenue Accounts are kept are given in the following table:—

Province.	Rice.	Wheat.	Jowar and chari (Sorghum vulgare).	Bajra (Panicilaria spicata)	Sugar-cane.	Cotton.	Barley.	Indigo.	Maize.	Ragi (Eleusine coracana).

9. The following are the percentages on gross revenue of the cost of revenue management (including collection charges) and of the up-keep of the works for Major Works in the different Provinces:—

Province.	Revenue management, per cent.	Up-keep, per cent.	Total, per cent.
	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.

Bombay	16 8	26·2	43 0
North-Western Provinces .	18·6	21·7	40·3
Bengal	31 1	60·7	91·8

In Sind the rate for collection charges has been reduced from 10 to 6 per cent.

10. The following statement shows the total cost of working per acre irrigated by the Major Works in the different Provinces:—

	1895-96. Rx.
Sind	·07	Including old maintenance charges.
Madras	·09
Punjab	·11
North-Western Provinces . .	·12
Bengal	·23	Excluding maintenance of Tidal canal.
Bombay	·41

The working expenses as a whole were less by Rx. 15,681 than in the previous year. In the North-Western Provinces the decrease of Rx. 38,229 was due to the restriction of expenditure in consequence of the large falling off in irrigation revenue.

11. The following statement gives for the principal canals in each Province details of the length of channels, of canal discharge, of area irrigated and of the duty of water :—

	Canals.	Length of completed main and branch canal. (Miles.)	Length of completed distributaries. (Miles.)	Maximum discharge at head of canals (cubic feet per second).	Average Discharge at head (cubic feet per second).		Area irrigated (acres).					Area irrigated per cubic foot per second of average discharge at head (acres).

The direct outlay on works for which only Revenue Accounts are kept and for which neither Capital nor Revenue Accounts are kept including those maintained by the Civil Department was Rx. 658,672 as compared with Rx. 671,546. The direct receipts were Rx. 72,936 against Rx. 7,800. These direct receipts comprise only the sums credited in the Public Works Accounts; the revenue derived from this class of works which is assessed and collected as Land Revenue is accounted for under that head in the Civil Accounts.

The figures in the following statement which relates to this class of works are extracted from the Irrigation Revenue Reports of the different Provinces.

The figures are approximate only as certain receipts, e.g., those realized by Civil Officers from irrigation works under their charge do not appear in the Reports.

Works classed as "Agricultural" are excluded :—

15. The total area irrigated from all works during 1895-96 amounted $14\frac{9}{16}$ million acres.

If the value per acre of the irrigated crops be taken at the estimated rate of Rx. 2·60 as in paragraph 6, the total value of the produce from canal irrigated lands amounted to $38\frac{3}{4}$ millions of Rx.

Note by the Accountant General, Public Works Department, dated 4th March 1897.

Accompaniment to P. W. D. Review, No. 236I., dated the 7th September 1897.

Note by A. R. Becher, Esq., Offg. Accountant General, Public Works Department, upon the accounts of Revenue and Expenditure of Irrigation Works in India for 1895-96.

The figures in the accounts submitted herewith agree with the Finance and Revenue accounts of the Government of India, but in this note certain figures are added from the Administrative accounts of the Public Works Department, Irrigation Branch, the Revenue Reports of Irrigation Works and the Annual Statement of the Financial Results of Irrigation Operations in India.

2. The Irrigation works in India are divided into two main classes, viz., Major Works and Minor Works.

Major Works are sub-divided into—

(a) Productive Works, the Capital of which has been provided from borrowed money; and

Minor Works are for the purpose of this note sub-divided into—

(a) Works for which Capital and Revenue accounts are kept; and

3. Capital and Revenue accounts are kept for all Major Irrigation Works. There are 47 projects classed as Major Works, of which one, viz., the Hijili Tidal Canal in Bengal, is a purely navigation canal.

Of these, 39 were sanctioned as works expected to be remunerative, i.e., estimated to pay the cost of up-keep as well as interest on Capital outlay. They were or are being constructed from funds provided from sources outside the general revenues. The remaining eight projects* were sanctioned as works of protection against famine, and the cost of their construction has been or is being paid for out of annual grants made from general revenues under the head of "Famine Insurance."

* North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

2. Swat River Canal.

3. Rushikulya Project.
Bombay, Deccan and Gujarat.
4. Nira Canal.
5. Mhaswad Tank.
6. Chankapur Tank.
7. Maladevi Tank.
8. † Gokak Canal, 1st section.

4. The works classed as Minor Irrigation Works are numerous. Capital and Revenue accounts are kept for 76 separate projects of this class; for the others only one account of receipts and charges for each work or group of works is kept. Of the 76 projects for which Capital and Revenue accounts are kept, 6 are purely navigation canals, of which 2 are in Bengal and 4 in Madras.

5. The general financial results of all works for which Capital and Revenue accounts are kept are as follows:—

	Major Works.	Minor Works.	Total.
	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.
Capital Outlay.
During 1895-96 . . .	788,997	104,318	893,315

Against in 1894-95 .	4·08	5·65	4·29
„ 1893-94 .	4·04	6·89	4·42

6. The net revenue derived from Major Works was Rx. 32,485 less than that of the previous year. The decrease was due to a falling off of the revenue in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh owing to the heavy winter-rains of 1894-95 which reduced the demand for canal water for the rabi irrigation of that year, the collections on account of which were made in 1895-96. The interest charges during 1895-96 also increased by Rx. 28,287 owing to additional capital outlay, so that the decrease in the net profit was Rx. 60,772. The net result of the year would have been still more unfavourable, but for an increase of revenue in the Punjab and Madras owing to the development of irrigation in the former Province and to the enhancement of water rates in the latter.

Fatehpur Branch of the Lower Ganges Canal.
Periyar project.
Jamrao Canal.

7. The projects noted in the margin were not opened for irrigation during 1895-96. When these projects are completed and the irrigation from them and the Chenab Canal and other projects are fully developed, the net profit from Major Works will be considerably increased, although the works in Bengal and the Deccan and the Karnul Canal and Barur tank in Madras are not expected to pay the interest on the Capital invested in them.

8. The net revenue from Minor Works was less than that of the previous year by Rx. 1,713. The important variations in the revenue from this class of works are explained in paras. 34 to 36 below.

9. The receipts and charges of the year 1895-96 on Revenue account, exclusive of the figures relating to Minor Works for which Capital accounts are not kept, are detailed in the following statement by funds and provinces:—

10. The foregoing table shows that after paying interest on borrowed money expended in the construction of Major Irrigation Works, the highest net profits were, as in the previous three years, obtained from irrigation projects in Madras. Next follow the Punjab and Bombay. In the Punjab the revenue will steadily increase, as the new irrigation projects and their distributaries are completed. In Bengal the loss was, as explained in last year's report, due to the permanent settlement which renders enhancement of land revenue impracticable. The loss in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh was due to heavy winter rains of 1894-95.

15. The systems that have, up to the end of 1895-96, paid off the accumulated interest on the Capital expended on them are noted below :—

1. Godavari Delta System	3,141,432

Assuming that the works are still worth the amount charged in each case to the Capital account, this represents a net profit to the State at the end of 1895-96 on these systems of	13,103,648
The charge to the State on other Major Works is { Productive Works	9,083,904
{ Protective Works	766,258
And this leaves a net profit to date on all Major Works of	3,254,486

16. The following statement shows the net charge to the State to the end of each year for the last five years on account of further projects, which are expected eventually to pay off the accumulated interest on their Capital cost :—

NOTE.—The projects which have not yet been opened for irrigation have been excluded from this statement.

In all these projects the debit against them should be decreasing.

17. The continued steady decrease against the Eastern Nara before completion of the project is satisfactory.

18. The continued increase against the Lower Ganges Canal is not altogether satisfactory; this canal has been opened 17 years, and has not yet begun to pay the annual interest charges, although the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh expects that the ultimate revenue from the canal will amount to 5 per cent. on the Capital outlay. The Agra canal has been in operation for many years: the continued increase in the debit against it is due to a cycle of years of excessive rainfall which enabled the crops to be brought to maturity without the aid of canal water; it is, however, expected that the net revenue from the canal will exceed the interest charges from 1896-97 so the interest charges will not be a permanent burden on the State. The Sirhind Canal has not been opened for 10 years; the irrigation from this project has not had time to develop fully. During 1895-96 the debit against the Chenab canal has been reduced by Rx. 13,853, although the canal is not yet in full operation; it will probably be completed in 1897-98.

The decrease in the debit against the Lower Sohag and Para Canal and the Sangam Anicut System is a satisfactory feature.

19. The undernoted works, the construction of which was permitted from borrowed money prior to the introduction of the rules laying down the conditions which must now be fulfilled before a work can be classed as Productive, are not expected to repay the accumulated interest charges on the Capital invested in them :—

In addition to the above, the Karnul Canal in Madras, which was purchased from the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company in 1882, is not likely ever to be a financial success, and the Barur tank also will probably not pay the interest on the capital outlay. Under the rules contained in Public Works Department Code, Volume II, Chapter V, para. 35, clause VIII, the current expenditure on these works is being provided out of the general revenues.

21. The gross revenue in 1895-96 fell short of that of the previous year by Rx. 48,166. The principal differences are due to the following causes:—

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—The decrease of Rx. 198,432 was due to the heavy winter rains of 1894-95 which reduced the demand for canal water for rabi irrigation.

Punjab.—The increase of Rx. 113,271 was due to the extension of irrigation from the Chenab canal, to the greater demand for canal water in the kharif season of 1895 owing to scanty rainfall on lands traversed by the Bari Doab canal, and to increased receipts from the Sirhind canal, the receipts for 1894-95 being abnormally low owing to excessive rainfall.

Madras.—The increase of Rx. 44,016 was mainly due to the enhancement of water-rates on the Godavari, Kistna and Cauvery delta systems.

25. The working expenses in 1895-96 were less than those of the previous year by Rx. 15,681. The decrease is the net result of increases and decreases in different provinces. The differences are explained as follows :—

Bengal.—The decrease of Rx. 7,771 was due to smaller expenditure being necessary for the maintenance and repairs of the Sone project.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—The decrease of Rx. 38,229 was due to the restriction of expenditure in consequence of the very large falling off in the irrigation revenue.

Punjab.—The increase of Rx. 18,993 in the expenditure during 1895-96 was due to the maintenance of greater lengths of canals opened for irrigation.

Madras.—The increase of Rx. 23,066 was due to large expenditure having become necessary for the maintenance and minor improvements of the Kistna delta, Sangam anicut and the Rushikulya projects.

Bombay.—The expenditure in 1894-95 in this province was somewhat large owing to special repairs to the Desert Canal and to certain bunds in connection with the Eastern Nara project which were damaged by floods.

26. The cost of maintenance and working per acre irrigated in the different provinces during the five years ending 1895-96, and the percentage of the outlay upon maintenance and working on gross revenue, are as follows :—

(e) Exclusive of Rs. 41,267, expenditure incurred from the grant under 35—Construction of Protective Irrigation Works which is shown under Major Works.

30. This table shows that the best return on the capital expended was derived from the Irrawaddy embankments in Lower Burma. Next follow the canals in the Punjab, in Sind and Madras. The Deccan and Gujarat show the worst result.

31. The net revenue derived in 1895-96 from the works constructed for irrigation purposes (excluding navigation) taken collectively amounted to 8·24 per cent. on the Capital outlay to end of the year against 8·66 in the previous year. The decrease was chiefly due to a falling off of the revenue from the canals in Sind which is explained to be due to an insufficient supply of water in the canals. The decrease due to this cause was partly counterbalanced by an increase of revenue from the Irrawaddy embankments in Lower Burma and from the Indus and Shahpur inundation canals in the Punjab as explained in paragraphs 35 and 36 of this note.

32. The revenue from the navigation canals exceeded the working expenses by Rx. 19,055 against the corresponding figure of Rx. 13,716 in the previous year. The increase was contributed chiefly by the Calcutta and Eastern and the Orissa coast canals in Bengal. The net revenue from these canals amounted to 21·98 and ·41 per cent. respectively on the capital outlay.

33. The revenue during 1895-96 derived from Minor Works for which Capital and Revenue accounts are kept is detailed in the following statement, and compared with the revenue of the previous four years :—

34. The gross revenue of 1895-96 fell short of that of the previous year by Rx. 22,592, owing to an insufficient supply of water in the canals in Sind.

35. The increase of Rx. 9,919 in the revenue during 1895-96 in Lower Burma, as compared with that of 1894-95, was due to larger areas having been cultivated in the Bassein, Thôngwa and Henzada districts.

36. The increase of Rx. 13,610 in the Punjab was mainly due to an improvement of revenue from the Indus and Shahpur Inundation canals.

37. The working expenses of the year 1895-96 and of the previous four years are shown in the following statement :—

38. The charges for maintenance and working for the year 1895-96 were less than those of the previous year by Rx. 20,879. The decrease chiefly occurred in Lower Burma and Bombay. The decrease of Rx. 8,888 in Lower Burma was due to the expenditure in the previous year having been somewhat large owing to the necessity for raising, strengthening and retiring several miles of the Irrawaddy embankments which were threatened by river encroachments. The decrease of Rx. 9,444 in Bombay was chiefly due to a reduction of the collection charges in the Civil Department.

39. The following table gives the percentages of expenditure on revenue in each province during the five years ending 1895-96 :—

40. The percentage of expenditure on revenue for the whole of India during the year 1895-96 was slightly less than that in the previous year. The figures for the respective provinces as a rule show uneven results. The cost of maintenance and working of the canals in Bengal, in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and in the Punjab absorbs a very large portion of the gross revenue.

41. The rates per irrigated acre in the different provinces during the year 1895-96 were as follows:—

43. The foregoing table shows that up to 1894-95 the direct receipts realized from this class of Minor Works had been increasing steadily. The fall in 1895-96 occurred in Bengal and was due chiefly to the recoveries on account of capitalized maintenance charges of the Howrah drainage scheme, which were hitherto accounted for under this head, having been adjusted in the accounts for 1895-96 under the debt head "Drainage Advances," and partly to a falling-off of the receipts from the Nadia river owing to the very unsatisfactory state of the river. A large portion of the revenue derived from this class of works is assessed and collected with the Land Revenue and is accounted for under the head I.—Land Revenue in the Civil Accounts. It is only in the Irrigation revenue reports of the Public Works Department that credit for such indirect receipts is taken.

44. The increase in the expenditure from Imperial funds during 1895-96, as compared with that of the previous year, occurred in Bombay, and was due to increased expenditure on the improvement of the Shikarpur and Karachi canals in Sind. The decrease in the expenditure from Provincial funds occurred chiefly in Lower Burma and partly in the Punjab. The decrease in Lower Burma was due chiefly to the expenditure in 1894-95 having been somewhat large owing to the construction of some new embankments, and partly to the first section of the canal between Kyaikto and Bilin rivers having been suspended. The decrease in the Punjab was due to the completion of the survey of the Michni-Nowshera canal and of the widening of the Barkat Alikhan canal.

I.—WORKING OF THE MINTS.

1. Imports and Coinage: Gold.—The imports of gold during the year under report were again heavy though somewhat less than in the previous year. The exports of gold also declined slightly. The net imports were 309,365 ounces, valued at Rs. 2,29,10,383 against 322,623 ounces of the value of Rs. 2,52,59,524 in the previous year. The following table shows the quantity and value of gold imported into, and exported from, India during the last five years:

Year.	Imports		Exports.		Net imports (+), Net exports (—).
	Oz.	Rs.	Oz.	Rs	Oz.	Rs.
1892-93	272,442	1,18,17,891	726,925	4,59,41,720	—454,483	—2,81,26,829

1896-97	657,238	4,49,11,790	347,873	2,20,01,407	+ 309,365	+ 2,29,10,383

No gold was tendered for coinage or coined during the year in either of the Mints.

2. Imports and Coinage: Silver.—The net imports of silver into India were less than those of the preceding year by about 1,089,000 ounces, and the value of the silver was less by about Rs. 72,62,000. The following are the figures of net imports of silver into India, the net imports into Bengal and Bombay being given separately:

Year.	Net Imports.						Amount tendered for Rupee coinage.		Amount tendered for Dollar coinage.
	All India.		Calcutta only.		Bombay only.		Calcutta.	Bombay.

(b) ,, ,, 18,468,424 ,, ,, ,, ,, ,,

The last column of the above table refers to silver presented at the Bombay Mint for coinage into British dollars and subsequent export to Hongkong and the Straits Settlements. These amounts do not practically affect the net imports as shown in the table, as they are for the most part exported during the year of import.

3. Total coinage: Gold and Silver.—No gold has been coined in either Mint since 1892-93. The value of the coinage of silver in each Mint (excluding the dollar coinage) during the last five years is given below:

Year.	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Total.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1892-93	2,99,80,183	9,69,35,081	12,69,15,264
1893-94	82,10,146	3,99,14,855	4,81,25,001
1894-95	9,45,047	...	9,45,947
1895-96	29,27,134	...	29,27,134
1896-97	35,86,845	21,46,683	57,33,528

The whole of the silver coinage in the Mints during the year 1896-97, as shown in the above table, was for the Government, and consisted of small silver coins only: as will appear from paragraphs 4 and 5 below, the receipts of uncurrent coin furnished the material for this coinage. The details are given below:

	Calcutta.		Bombay.
	Tale.	Value.	Tale.	Value.
		Rs.		Rs.
Half rupees	2,113,035	10,56,068	1,042,228	5,21,114
Quarter rupees	6,811,475	17,02,869	2,384,928	5,96,232
One-eighth rupees	6,616,060	8,27,008	8,234,696	10,29,337

The increase in the coinage of small coin was due to the large requirements of famine districts. Both Mints deserve credit for the expeditious manner in which they met the large demand, which arose suddenly.

In addition to the coinage for Government above mentioned, 6,135,617 British dollars containing 13,922,299 tolas of silver (rupee standard) were coined in the Bombay Mint during the year, against 3,316,063 dollars containing 7,524,449 tolas coined in 1895-96. Taking the balance which remained in the Mint, ready for issue, at the close of 1895-96, namely, 122,570 dollars, the number of dollars which were available for export in 1896-97 was 6,258,187, of which 6,223,638 were issued to tenderers for export, and the balance, 34,549, remained in the Mint ready for issue.

4. Description of silver received in the Mints.—In Bombay bar silver to the amount of 13,158,000 tolas was tendered for coinage into dollars: of this, 3,596,000 tolas came from London, 8,063,000 from America (of which 143,000 from San-Francisco), 1,254,000 from Australia, 197,000 from Italy, and 48,000 from France. The bar silver presented is of higher fineness than the standard on which the mint accounts are based, namely, the rupee standard; and the amount brought to account was 14,594,739 tolas of that standard. In Calcutta 2,451 tolas (rupee standard) of silver bullion were received from the Military and Survey Departments. Uncurrent coins of the value of Rs. 38,90,866 in Calcutta and of Rs. 30,89,539 in Bombay were sent to the Mints by Government Treasuries and Departments: the receipts in the Bombay Mint included some Bhopal and Baroda coins which had been received in the treasuries in payment of tributes, etc.

5. Recoinage of silver received in the Mints.—Apart from silver received for the coinage of dollars, the receipts in the Mints consisted almost entirely of uncurrent and defaced silver coin remitted by Government treasuries and departments as given in paragraph 4. These remittances are utilised for the coinage of small silver coins (including half rupees). The value of the total coinages of small silver in the year was, as stated in paragraph 3, Rs. 35,86,845 in Calcutta and Rs. 21,46,683 in Bombay, and the total weight of silver in tolas of standard rupee fineness received on Government account in the two Mints was 3,820,735 tolas in Calcutta, and 3,102,883 tolas in Bombay.

6. Copper coinage.—The total value of the copper coinage was Rs. 17,69,011 against Rs. 8,20,625 in the preceding year. This large increase which represents an additional coinage of over 50 million copper pieces was entirely due to heavy requirements of pice at the famine relief works. This unprecedentedly large and at the same time urgent demand was energetically met by the Calcutta Mint, the outturn of which was raised to over a million pieces a day, or more than double the outturn on the last occasion (1884-85) when the Mint was put on overtime.

No copper coins for the Straits Government or for the Abdali Chief, near Aden, were coined during the year.

About 15,738 maunds of copper slabs were purchased during the year at an average cost of Rs. 34·34 per maund against 15,003 maunds at Rs. 33·167 per maund in the preceding year.

7. Gain on copper coinage.—The gain on copper coinage passed into circulation during the last five years was as follows:

	Rs.
1892-93	3,78,929
1893-94	5,08,467
1894-95	2,92,627
1895-96	2,81,312
1896-97	13,76,190

8. Operative losses.—

Silver.—In the Calcutta Mint the operative losses for melting and coining after the adjustment of fictitious losses and gains, amounted to 2,979 tolas or about 36·6 tolas per lakh. But as the values for dirt in the scissel, blanks, etc., calculated and included in the fictitious losses and gains, are not absolutely correct, the Mint Master prefers to estimate the loss at from 33 to 38 tolas per lakh. In the Bombay Mint the loss estimated on the above principle would be about Rs. 32 to 37 per lakh, and the total operative loss is calculated to have been Rs. 10,369 in the year.

Copper.—During the year about 26,211 maunds of copper were operated on against 11,989 maunds in 1895-96, and the loss amounted to 476·75 maunds, the actual rate being 1·819 per cent., against 2·157 in the preceding year. But after deducting the value of bye-products, this loss is reduced to ·29 per cent., against ·26 per cent. in the preceding year.

The percentage of good coin obtained from the silver coinage in both the Mints shows an improvement over the results of the preceding year. The dollar coinage showed a better result by 2 per cent. than the previous year. The percentage of good copper coin (pice and half-pice) from metal operated on has been about the same as in 1895-96.

9. Revenue and Expenditure.—The following table gives the revenue and expenditure of the two Mints for the last five years:

Year.	REVENUE.							EXPENDITURE.
	SEIGNORAGE.			OTHER RECEIPTS.			TOTAL.
	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Total.	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Total.		Calcutta.	Bombay.	TOTAL.

1896-97 ...	...	...	...	22,603	1,76,822	1,99,425	1,99,425	8,02,246	5,57,678	13,59,924
Total ...	6,42,345	23,36,708	29,79,053	3,13,109	16,04,686	19,17,795	48,97,848	43,46,378	36,06,744	79,53,122

As explained in the review of the Mint Administration Reports for 1894-95 the cessation of the public coinage of silver accounts for the decrease in revenue and expenditure since 1893-94.

The receipts of the Bombay Mint include Rs. 1,45,952 on account of the charge of 1 per cent. for the coinage of British dollars.

The expenditure on salaries and establishments of the two Mints for the year 1896-97 compares as follows with the expenditure of the preceding year:

	CALCUTTA MINT.			BOMBAY MINT.			BOTH MINTS
	1895-96.	1896-97.	Increase + Decrease —	1895-96.	1896-97.	Increase + Decrease —	1895-96.	1896-97.	Increase + Decrease —
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Fixed establishment...	1,74,628	1,56,656	— 17,972	1,45,299	1,39,586	— 5,713	3,22,927	2,99,242	— 23,685
Temporary establishment and over-time work.	47,353	56,673	+ 9,320	6,409	12,880	+ 6,471	53,7	69,553	+ 15,791
Total		2,13,329	— 8,652	1,54,708	1,55,466	+	3,76,089	3,68,795	— 7,894

In the Calcutta Mint the decrease of Rs. 17,972 under "Fixed establishment" was partly due to revision of Establishment and general savings. The increase under "Temporary establishment, etc.," was owing to the entertainment of a larger establishment than usual to cope with the demand for coin for famine relief works.

In Bombay the increase in the temporary establishment was due to the larger coinage of dollars and of small silver.

10. Stores.—In the Calcutta Mint the expenditure on stores was Rs. 74,884 against Rs. 45,185 in 1895-96, the increase being due to the heavy coinage of the year. In the Bombay Mint the expenditure on this account amounted to Rs. 22,293 against Rs. 15,049 in the previous year.

11. Pro-forma charges.—These indirect charges in the two Mints for 1896-97 compare as follows with those of 1895-96:

(In rupees.)

	Calcutta Mint.			Bombay Mint.			Both Mints.
	1895-96.	1896-97.	Increase + Decrease −	1895-96.	1896-97.	Increase + Decrease −	1895-96.	1896-97.	Increase + Decrease −
Pension and furlough allowances.	26,484	24,216	− 2,268	5,687	6,236	+ 549	32,171	30,452	− 1,719
Interest on stock and block.	3,75,885	3,74,558	− 1,327	2,29,376	2,63,300	+ 33,924	6,05,261	6,37,858	+ 32,597
Total ...	4,02,369	3,98,774	− 3,595	2,35,063	2,69,536	+ 34,473	6,37,432	6,68,310	+ 30,878

The increase under the second head in the Bombay Mint was due to the average silver balance in the Mint having been higher than in the previous year.

12. Miscellaneous work.—The account of miscellaneous work done in the two Mints is shown in the following table:

	Calcutta Mint.			Bombay Mint.			Both Mints.
	Cost of work done.	Amount realised.	Profit.	Cost of work done.	Amount realised.	Profit.	Cost of work done	Amount realised.	Profit.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.		Rs.
1895-96	30,375	46,768	7,473	10,217	10,698	481	40,542	57,496	7,954
96-97	71,206	77,484	6,278	11,931	12,428	497	83,137	89,912	6,775
Better ...	...	30,686	...		1,730	16	...	32,416
Worse ...	31,881	...	1,195	1,714			33,595		1,179

As usual, the amount of miscellaneous work in the Bombay Mint was not large. In the Calcutta Mint, the miscellaneous work comprised mainly the manufacture of a large number of medals, stars of the Military Department, decorations for the Army Temperance Association, brass washers and bolts and nuts for the Survey of India Department, brass tokens for various firms in Calcutta, and gold, silver and bronze medals for public institutions.

13. Capital Account.—The Capital Account of the Calcutta Mint stood at the end of the year at Rs. 77,11,550 against Rs. 77,11,036 at the end of 1895-96. The account of the Bombay Mint has remained unaltered during the year, and stood at Rs. 37,94,328 at its close.

14. Offences against the coinage.—During the year 1896, 875 cases were brought to trial, 1,072 persons tried, and 589 persons convicted for offences against the coinage, compared with 858 cases brought to trial, 1,039 persons tried and 644 persons convicted during 1895. There was thus an increase of about 2 per cent. in the number of cases tried, and a decrease of 8·54 per cent. in the number of persons convicted. As in 1895 the largest number of cases were reported from the North-Western Provinces. The bulk of the cases fell under the head of possessing and delivering counterfeited coin; on this charge 690 persons were tried and 380 convicted, against 676 tried and 421 convicted in the previous year.

II.—WORKING OF THE ASSAY OFFICES.

15. Number of Assays made.—The following table compares the number of gold and silver assays made during 1896-97 with those of the preceding year:

	Calcutta Mint.		Bombay Mint.		Both Mints.
	Gold.	Silver.	Gold.	Silver.	Gold.	Silver.
1895-96	1,296	4,347	...	6,674	1,296	11,021
1896-97	1,207	5,477	...	9,222	1,207	14,699
Increase +, decrease — —	89 +	1,130	...	+ 2,548	— 89	+ 3,678

Besides the above several miscellaneous assays were made in both the Mints.

16. Meltings for standard coinage.—The average fineness per mille of silver meltings for coinage of small silver in Calcutta and Bombay made during the year was as follows:

	Calcutta.	Bombay.
Half rupees	915·979	915·684
Quarter rupees	915·780	915·588
One-eighth rupees	915·539	915·520

The average fineness of the meltings for the coinage of British dollars was 898·853.

17. Parting Assays of silver coins.—The average proportion of gold found in the silver pyx coins at the Calcutta Mint was 1·218 per mille against 1·087 per mille in 1895-96. In the Bombay Mint the proportion was ·9044 per mille in Government silver coins, and ·0726 per mille in British dollars. This difference in the proportion of gold found in the two classes of coins is attributed to the use of old coin, which contains a considerable quantity of gold, in the manufacture of Government coins, and the use of bar silver, which contains very little gold, in the manufacture of dollars.

18. Pyx trials of silver coins.—The results of the pyx trials in the two Assay offices are summarised in the following table:

	Trials for weight.			Trials for fineness.
	Number of trials made.	Total number of coins weighed	Average weight in grains.	Number of trials made.	Total number of coins assayed.		Average fineness per mille of coins assayed.
					Singly.	In groups after melting.	Singly.	In groups after melting.

British dollars ...	81	1,620	416·012	...	405	1,215	900·120	900·190

Of the total number of half rupees weighed in Calcutta and Bombay none was beyond the legal remedy in weight. As regards the dollar coinage no coin was found to be beyond the legal remedy either of weight or fineness.

19. Pyx trials in England for 1894-95 and 1895-96.—The average weight and fineness of the Government coins from the Calcutta Mint for the two years and of the standard weight and millesimal fineness of British dollars from the Bombay Mint for 1895-96 were found to correspond closely to the standards prescribed for both these classes of coins; and the Government coins from Calcutta showed the average proportion of gold as in previous years. But the proportion of gold discovered in the British dollar coinage was reported to be specially high. This subject is now under examination.

20. Reference standard weights.—The standard weights in both the Mints were duly verified in the year under report.

21. The Governor General in Council acknowledges the efficiency with which the Mint and Assay Departments have been worked and controlled by the officers in charge.

ORDER.—Ordered that this Resolution be published in the Gazette of India.

Ordered also that copies of this Resolution be forwarded to the Mint Masters, Bombay and Calcutta (with printed copies of the two Reports on the working of the Mints), and to the Assay Masters, Bombay and Calcutta (with printed copies of the two Reports on the working of the Assay Departments).

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to afford early relief to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh by making provision for the appointment of a second Additional Judicial Commissioner. The existence of heavy arrears in that Court has been brought to the notice of the Government of India, and the statistics furnished show that the number of suits instituted tends in an increasing degree to exceed the number disposed of, and that the Court at its present strength cannot possibly overtake the work that has accumulated steadily during the past five years. It is proposed, therefore, to amend the Oudh Courts Act, 1891 (XIV of 1891), so as to take power to strengthen the Court for the time being by the appointment of a third Judge.

2. The details of the Bill are, where necessary, explained in the annexed Notes on Clauses.

The 25th September, 1897. J. WOODBURN.

Notes on Clauses.

Clause 2.—It is here proposed to insert in section 4 of the Oudh Courts Act, 1891 (XIV of 1891), an enabling provision taking power for the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to appoint a second Additional Judicial Commissioner to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh.

Clause 3.—By this clause it is proposed to recast section 5 of the Act in order to make its provisions equally applicable when the Court consists of the Judicial Commissioner and two Additional Judicial Commissioners.

Clause 5.—When the Court consists of three Judges the provisions of section 378 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882, will at once apply in cases submitted for the confirmation of capital sentences and no special provisions on the subject will be required. It seems unnecessary, in view of the definition of "High Court" in that Code, to declare that the Court shall be deemed to be a High Court, and sub-section (1) of section 7 may, it is thought, be repealed. Sub-section (2), in the amended form proposed, will supply the requisite special provisions in cases of a difference of opinion on references under section 377 of the Code when the Court consists of only two Judges.

Clause 7.—The preceding remarks regarding clause 5 will also explain the amendments here suggested. As soon as a third Judge is appointed to the Court, the provisions of sections 429 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882, as well as those of section 575 of the Code of Civil Procedure, will apply automatically, and all that is necessary is to make it clear that, if and so long as the Court consists of only two Judges, the arrangements made by section 9 of the existing Act must continue to be observed.

Clause 8.—The section, the addition of which to the Act is here contemplated, is based upon section 92 of the Lower Burma Courts Act, 1889 (XI of 1889). It seems calculated to facilitate the disposal of work in the Judicial Commissioner's Court by enabling the Judicial Commissioner, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, to frame rules dispensing with the fuller procedure required by the general law.

J. M. MACPHERSON,
Secretary to the Government of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 1st October, 1897:

NO. 14 OF 1897.

[The numbers given in brackets on the margin of the clauses of this Bill refer to the sections of Act IX of 1873.]

A Bill to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Agricultural Tenancies in the Central Provinces.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to agricultural tenancies in the Central Provinces; It is hereby enacted as follows:

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, 1898.

(2) It extends to all the territories for the time being administered by the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces; and

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,-

(1) the expressions "agricultural year," "málik makbúzá," "sír-land," "survey-number," "record-of-rights" and "village" have the meanings assigned to them, respectively, in the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1881;

(2) "arrear" means an instalment or part of an instalment of rent which is not paid on or before the date on which it is payable:

(3) "holding" means a parcel of land held by a tenant of a landlord under one lease or one set of conditions:

(4) "improvement" means, with reference to a holding, any work which adds to the letting-value of the holding, which is suitable to the holding and consistent with the purpose for which it was let, and which, if not executed on the holding, is either executed directly for its benefit, or is, after execution, made directly beneficial to it:

Explanation I.—It includes the reclaiming, enclosing or clearing of lands for agricultural purposes; but it does not include such embankments, temporary wells and water-channels as are made by tenants in the ordinary course of agriculture; and no work executed by the tenant of a holding is an improvement if it substantially diminishes the value of any other part of the estate of his landlord:

Explanation II.—A work which benefits several holdings may be deemed to be, with respect to each of them, an improvement:

(5) "land" means land which is let or occupied for agricultural purposes or for purposes subservient to agriculture, and includes the sites of buildings appurtenant to such land: [(1).]

(6) "landlord" means the person of whom a tenant holds land, and to whom the tenant is, or, but for special contract, would be, liable to pay rent for that land [(3).]

(7) "pay", "payable" and "payment", used with reference to rent, include "deliver", "deliverable" and "delivery": [(5).]

(8) "rent" means whatever is paid, delivered or rendered, in money, kind or service, by a tenant on account of the use or occupation of land let to him: [4.]

(9) "Revenue-officer" and "Settlement-officer", in any provision of this Act, mean, respectively, such Revenue-officer or Settlement-officer appointed under the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1881, as the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, direct to discharge the functions of a Revenue-officer or Settlement-officer (as the case may be) under that provision and [(9).] XVIII of 1881.

(10) "tenant" means a person who holds land of another person, and is, or, but for a special contract, would be, liable to pay rent for that land to that other person. But it does not include a farmer, mortgagee or thikádár of proprietary rights: [(2).]

Explanation I.—An inferior proprietor is not, as such, a tenant:

Explanation II.—The holder of a survey-number in a village let in farm by the Government, or held by a gaontia in the Sambalpúr district, is a tenant of the farmer or gaontia for the time being:

CHAPTER II.

OF TENANTS GENERALLY.

A.—Classification of Tenants.

[4.] 3. There shall be five classes of tenants, namely:

Classes of tenants.

(1) absolute occupancy-tenants;
(2) occupancy-tenants;
(3) village-service tenants;
(4) sub-tenants; and

B.—Provisions relating to Rent.

[5.] 4. In all suits and proceedings between landlord and tenant, the rent payable for any agricultural year by a tenant in respect of his holding shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, to be the rent payable in respect of the holding in the agricultural year immediately preceding that year.

Presumption as to amount of rent payable.

[6.] 5. An order fixing, altering or commuting the rent of a holding on an application under this Act may, as the officer making the order thinks fit, take effect from the commencement of the agricultural year next following the date of the application, or from any subsequent day, or, if it is made on the ground of increase, diminution or deterioration of the holding, from the date of that increase, diminution or deterioration, or from any subsequent day.

Date from which order fixing rent operates.

[7.] 6. Rents shall be payable in such instalments and on such dates as the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, prescribe, and, in the absence of any such notification applicable to the case, according to the contract between the parties, or, where there is no such contract, according to local usage.

Time for payment of rents.

[8.] 7. When two or more persons are landlords of a tenant in respect of the same holding, the tenant, subject to any rule which the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, make in this behalf, and to any contract between the parties, shall not be bound to pay part of the rent of his holding to one of those persons and part to another or others; and, subject as aforesaid, those persons shall, if the tenant so desires, appoint one of their number or some other person to receive the rent.

Rents payable to a number of landlords.

[9.] 8. (1) When a landlord refuses to accept any instalment of rent payable in money when tendered to him by a tenant,

Power to deposit rent in certain cases with Revenue-officer.

(2) when a tenant, in the case mentioned in section 7, desires the appointment of a person to receive rent payable in money and the appointment is not made within a reasonable time, and

(3) when a tenant in any case is doubtful as to the person entitled to receive rent payable in money, the tenant may apply to a Revenue-officer for permission to deposit in his Court the amount of rent which he believes to be due; and that officer shall receive the deposit, if it appears to him, after examining the applicant, that he had reasonable grounds for making the application, and that it was made in good faith; and if the applicant pays the fee (if any) chargeable for the issue of the notice next hereinafter referred to.

9. (1) When a deposit has been so received, it shall be deemed to be a payment made by the tenant to his landlord in respect of rent due.

Effect of depositing rent.

(2) The officer receiving the deposit shall give notice of the receipt thereof to every person who he has reason to believe claims, or is entitled to, the deposit, and may pay the amount thereof to any person appearing to him to be entitled to the same, or may, if he thinks fit, retain the deposit pending the decision of a Civil Court as to the person so entitled.

(3) No suit or other proceeding shall be instituted against the Secretary of State for India in Council, or against any officer of the Government, in respect of anything done by a Revenue-officer under this section; but nothing in this section shall prevent any person entitled to receive the amount of any such deposit from recovering the same from a person to whom it has been paid by a Revenue-officer.

10. Every tenant from whom, except under any special enactment for the time being in force, anything is levied by his landlord in excess of the rent legally payable, shall be entitled to recover from the landlord such sum as the Court thinks fit, not exceeding five hundred rupees, or, when double the amount or value of what is so levied exceeds five hundred rupees, not exceeding double that amount or value.

Penalty for levy of anything in excess of rent by landlord.

11. A payment by a tenant to his landlord shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, to be a payment on account of rent.

Presumption as to payments by tenant to landlord.

12. If a landlord refuses to grant a receipt for rent paid by a tenant, or grants a receipt but refuses or neglects to specify therein the holding, and the period or crop, in respect of which the payment is made, or the amount paid, the tenant shall be entitled to recover from him such sum, not exceeding double the amount or value of the rent so paid, as the Court thinks fit.

Penalty for refusing receipt or giving defective receipt.

13. (1) Notwithstanding anything in the record-of-rights, but subject to any contract in writing between the parties, the rent payable in money by any tenant may, on the application of his landlord, be enhanced by a Revenue-officer on the ground that an improvement has been made since the present rent was fixed and in accordance with this Act by or at the expense of the landlord whereby the productive power of the holding has been increased:

Enhancement of rent when productive power of holding increased by landlord.

Provided that such improvement was not taken into consideration at the time when the rent was fixed or determined by the Settlement-officer at the current settlement of the local area in which the holding is situate.

(2) When the rent of any tenant has been enhanced under sub-section (1), a Revenue-officer may at any time, on the application of the tenant, modify or cancel the order for enhancement on the ground that the effect of the improvement in increasing the productive power of the holding has diminished or ceased since the date of the order for enhancement or of the last modification of such order made under this sub-section.

14. When the area of a holding the rent of which is payable in money is increased or diminished by the encroachment of the tenant or the landlord, or by fluvial action or otherwise, or the soil of a holding is, without the fault of the tenant, permanently deteriorated by a deposit of sand or any other calamity, a Revenue-officer may, notwithstanding anything in the record-of-rights or any contract between the parties, by order, on the application of the landlord or of the tenant, alter the rent with reference to that increase, diminution or deterioration.

Power to alter rent when holding is increased, diminished or deteriorated.

15. When a landlord grants a lease, or makes any other contract fixing the rent of any holding, and, while the lease or contract is in force,

(a) land-revenue is for the first time made payable in respect of the holding, or

(b) land-revenue having been previously payable in respect of it, the revenue payable when the lease or other contract was granted or made is increased or diminished, a Revenue-officer may, notwithstanding anything in the record-of-rights or any contract between the parties, by order, on the application of the landlord or of the tenant, alter the rent with reference to the revenue.

Power to alter rent in case of new assessment.

16. (1) In all cases in which a tenant, other than an ordinary tenant whose holding consists entirely of sir-land, or than a sub-tenant, pays rent for a holding in kind, or on the estimated value of a portion of the crop, or at rates varying with the crop, or partly in one of those ways and partly in another or others, the landlord or tenant may, notwithstanding anything in the record-of-rights or any contract between the parties, other than a contract whereby waste-land is let for the purpose of reclamation, apply during the progress of a settlement to a Settlement-officer, or at any other time to a Revenue-officer, to commute the rent to a fixed money-rent.

Commutation of rent payable in kind.

(2) On the receipt of the application, the officer, after giving notice of the application to the landlord and hearing him, if he appears, may determine the sum to be paid as money-rent, and may, for reasons to be recorded by him in writing, order that the tenant shall, in lieu of paying his rent in kind, or otherwise as aforesaid, pay the sum so determined.

(3) If the application is opposed, the officer may, for reasons to be recorded by him in writing, refuse to grant the same.

17. (1) Whenever from any cause the payment of the whole or any part of the land-revenue payable in respect of any land is remitted or suspended, a Revenue-officer may, by general or special order, remit or suspend, as the case may be, the payment of the rent of that land to an amount which may bear the same proportion to the whole of the rent payable in respect of the land as the land-revenue of which the payment has been remitted or suspended, bears to the whole of the land-revenue payable in respect of the land:

Provided that, where the rent is taken by actual division of the produce, no portion of it shall be suspended under this section.

Remission and suspension of rent consequent on like treatment of land-revenue.

(2) An order passed under sub-section (1) shall not be liable to be contested by suit in any Court.

(3) No suit shall lie for the recovery of any rent of which the payment has been remitted, or, during the period of suspension, of any rent of which the payment has been suspended, and, so long as a suit does not lie, such rent shall not be legally payable within the meaning of section 10.

(4) Where the payment of rent has been suspended, the period of suspension shall be excluded in the computation of the period of limitation prescribed for bringing a suit for the recovery of the rent.

(5) If the landlord collects any rent of which the payment has been remitted, or, before the expiration of the period of suspension, collects any rent of which the payment has been suspended, the whole of the land-revenue remitted in his favour shall become immediately due from him.

(6) The provisions of this section relating to the remission and suspension of the payment of rent may be applied, as far as may be, to land of which the land-revenue has been wholly or in part released, compounded for or redeemed, in any case in which, if the land-revenue in respect of the land had not been released, compounded for or redeemed, the whole or any part of it might, in the opinion of the Revenue-officer, have been remitted or suspended.

(7) The provisions of this section relating to rent shall apply also, as far as may be, to revenue and málikáná payable by inferior proprietors and to thiká jámás payable by thikádárs of proprietary rights.

[26.] 19. (1) When a Revenue-officer appoints a commissioner for any of the purposes mentioned in section 26, the officer may, in his discretion, direct the commissioner to associate with himself any other persons as assessors, and may give him instructions regarding the number, qualifications and mode of selecting those assessors (if any), and the procedure to be followed in making the division, estimate or appraisement.

(2) The commissioner so appointed shall make the division, estimate or appraisement in accordance with those instructions.

[27.] 20. (1) If in any division under the foregoing provisions either party receives less than the share to which he is entitled, he may, within three months from the date on which the division is completed, institute a suit against the other party to recover the value of the additional portion of the crop due to him at the price which prevailed on that date.

Remedy for error in division.

(2) If no such suit is instituted within the said period of three months, the division shall for all purposes be deemed as between the parties thereto to have been rightly made.

[18.] 23. Where an arrear of rent, other than a rent taken by division of the produce or by estimate or appraisement of the crop, is due in respect of a holding, the landlord may, by notice served as hereinafter provided, prohibit the removal of the produce of the holding:

secondly, such a prohibition shall not be made more than once in respect of the same produce on account of the same arrear.

[21.] 24. If, while the notice is in force, the landlord institutes a suit for the recovery of the rent, the notice shall continue in force until the Court trying the suit otherwise directs; and, if the landlord obtains a decree in the suit, the amount of that decree shall be the first charge upon the produce.

(2) The notice shall be served on the person in charge of the produce, and shall remain in force until the rent specified in the notice is paid, or, if that rent is not previously paid, subject to the provisions of section 24, until the expiration of thirty-five days from the date of service of the notice.

[22.] 27. (1) If the produce of the holding on which the arrear is due is under attachment by order of a Court, the landlord may apply to the Court to sell the produce and pay to him out of the proceeds of the sale thereof the amount or value of—

Procedure when produce is under attachment.

(a) any rent which has fallen due to him in respect of the holding within the year immediately preceding the application; and

(b) the instalment of rent falling due next after the time at which in the ordinary course of agriculture the produce would be harvested.

And the Court, if on inquiry it finds the landlord's claim to the whole or any part of the rent to be proved, shall sell the produce or such portion thereof as it may deem necessary, and shall apply the proceeds of the sale, in the first instance, to satisfy the claim.

(2) The finding of a Court on an inquiry under this section shall have the force of a decision in a suit between the parties.

E.—Of Improvements and compensation therefor.

[20.] 30. (1) In respect of the holding of an absolute occupancy-tenant or occupancy-tenant, or of the holding of an ordinary tenant which does not consist entirely of sir-land, the tenant, and, in respect of the holding of an ordinary tenant which does consist entirely of sir-land, the landlord, shall be entitled to make improvements.

Right to make improvements.

(2) If the landlord of any such holding as is referred to in sub-section (1) desires that any improvement be made in respect of the holding, he may deliver, or cause to be delivered, to his tenant a request in writing calling upon him to make the improvement within a reasonable time, and, if the tenant is unable or neglects to comply with that request, may, subject to such rules of procedure as the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, prescribe in this behalf, make the improvement himself.

Liability to pay to tenant on ejectment compensation for improvements.

31 (1) If a tenant, or the person under whom he claims, has made an improvement in respect of his holding in accordance with this Act or with the landlord's consent otherwise than in accordance with this Act, he shall not be ejected until he has received compensation for the improvement, unless the improvement was begun by him after the institution of the proceedings which resulted in the decree or order for his ejectment.

(2) A Court or officer making a decree or order for the ejectment of a tenant shall determine the amount of compensation (if any) due to him under this section, and shall stay execution until the landlord deposits the amount, less any arrears of rent or costs that have been ascertained by the proceedings for such ejectment to be due to him from the tenant.

(3) No compensation shall be claimable under this section for an improvement where the tenant has made the improvement in pursuance of a contract binding him, in consideration of some substantial advantage to be obtained by him, to make the improvement without compensation, and has obtained that advantage.

(4) Improvements made by a tenant before the first day of January, 1884, in lands other than sir-land, shall be deemed to have been made in accordance with this Act, unless it is shown that the landlord forbade the tenant to make the improvement, and was ready to make it himself.

Assessment of compensation.

32. (1) The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, make rules requiring the Court to associate with itself, for the purpose of estimating the compensation to be awarded under section 31 for an improvement, such number of assessors as the Local Government thinks fit, and determining the qualifications of those assessors and the mode of selecting them.

(2) In estimating the compensation to be awarded under section 31 for an improvement, regard shall be had—

(a) to the amount by which the letting-value or the produce, of the holding, or th value of that produce, is increased by the improvement ;

(b) to the labour and capital required for the making of such an improvement ; and

(c) to any reduction or remission of rent or other advantage given by the landlord to the tenant in consideration of the improvement.

33. An entry in the record-of-rights of any village or a stipulation in a contract providing—

(a) that a landlord shall be entitled to prevent a tenant from making, or to eject him for making, such improvements on his holding as he is entitled to make under this Act, or Miscellaneous.

Surrender of holdings. [33.]

34. (1) Any tenant not bound by a lease or other agreement for a fixed period may, at the end of any agricultural year, surrender his holding :

Provided that, notwithstanding such surrender the tenant shall continue to be liable for the agricultural year next following the date of the surrender for the rent of the holding, unless he gives to his landlord, at least thirty days before he surrenders, notice of his intention to surrender ;

Provided, also, that, if the tenant is an absolute occupancy-tenant or an occupancy-tenant, any such person as would be entitled to inherit his right in the holding in the event of his death without nearer heirs may, on application to a Revenue-officer made at any time within three years after the date of the surrender, be placed in possession of the holding ; and that, as among several persons so entitled and desirous of being placed in possession of the holding, the right to be so placed shall accrue in the order in which such persons would have inherited the right of the tenant in the holding if the tenant had died.

(2) When any such application as aforesaid is made, the Revenue-officer shall issue a notice to all persons who seem to him primâ facie to have a right equal or prior to that of the applicant, and shall, after hearing such of them as appear and any other persons who may apply to be heard in the matter, decide who from among such of them as desire to be placed in possession is first entitled to be so placed.

(3) In the following cases the Court shall presume that notice was duly given as required by the first proviso to sub-section (1), that is to say :

(a) if the tenant takes a new holding in the same village from the same landlord during the agricultural year next following the surrender

(b) if the tenant ceases, at least thirty days before the end of the agricultural year at the end of which the surrender is made, to reside in the village in which the surrendered holding is situate ; and

(c) if the landlord himself, at any time during the agricultural year next following the surrender, cultivates or lets to another tenant the holding or any part thereof.

(4) A tenant of a survey-number in a village let in farm by the Government, or held by a gaontia in the Sambalpúr District, shall be deemed to have surrendered his holding if he refuses to agree to the rent fixed under this Act for the holding, but shall not continue liable under sub-section (1) for the rent of his holding.

Where land uncultivated and rent unpaid, tenant's right to be deemed surrendered. [34.]

35. Any tenant other than an absolute occupancy-tenant who leaves his holding uncultivated and the rent of it unpaid for a period of two years shall, at the expiration of that period, be deemed to have surrendered the holding :

Provided that, in reckoning that period, any time during which, owing to an inundation or any other accident to the land beyond the tenant's control, it may have been impossible to cultivate the land, shall be excluded.

CHAPTER III.

OF ABSOLUTE OCCUPANCY-TENANTS.

[36.] 38. Every person who, at the commencement of this Act, is the tenant of any holding in respect of which he, or a person whose rights he has acquired, has been recorded in any record-of-rights made before that day as an "absolute occupancy-raiyat", or in terms equivalent thereto, shall, unless he has parted with his rights, be deemed to be an absolute occupancy-tenant of that holding.

Definition of "absolute occupancy-tenant."

[37.] 39. (1) The rent of the holding of every absolute occupancy-tenant shall be fixed by the Settlement-officer at each settlement of the area in which the holding is comprised, and the rent so fixed shall not be altered during the currency of the settlement, except under the provisions of section 13, section 14 or section 15.

Rents fixed for period of settlement.

(2) The rent payable by any such tenant in respect of his holding at the commencement of this Act shall be deemed to have been fixed at the last preceding settlement of the area in which his holding is comprised.

[38.] 40. (1) The right of an absolute occupancy-tenant in his holding shall on his death devolve as if it were land, and shall be transferable subject to the conditions contained in this section.

Right heritable and transferable after notice to landlord, who may claim to purchase.

(2) If an absolute occupancy-tenant intends to transfer any right in his holding by sale or gift, or by mortgaging the same for a sum which, together with the interest payable thereon during the five years immediately succeeding the mortgage and the previous sums (if any) secured by of it, would exceed eight times the annual rent of the holding, or by sub-letting the same in consideration of a fine or premium exceeding five times that rent, he shall give to his landlord a written notice of his intention, and shall defer proceeding with the transfer for a period of one month from the date on which the notice is given.

(3) If the intended transfer is by sale or gift, the landlord may, within the said period of one month—

(a) claim to purchase the absolute occupancy-right at such value as a Revenue-officer may, on application made to him in this behalf, fix; or

(b) permit the sale or gift, in which case he shall be entitled to a sum equal to the rent for one year, and that sum shall be a first charge on the holding.

(4) If the intended transfer is by mortgage or sub-lease, the landlord may, within the said period of one month, claim to purchase the absolute occupancy-right at such value as a Revenue-officer may, on application made to him in this behalf, fix.

(5) When the right of an absolute occupancy-tenant in his holding is sold or is foreclosed by order of a Civil Court in execution of a decree other than a decree obtained by his landlord, the landlord shall have the same right of pre-emption as is given in the case of a sale by clause (a) of sub-section (3).

(6) When an application is made to a Revenue-officer under this section to fix the value of an absolute occupancy-right which is already mortgaged, he shall fix the value of the right as if it were not mortgaged; and, if the landlord purchases the right, the mortgage-debt shall be a charge on the purchase-money in exoneration of the land.

41. Notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, or any provision of a record-of-rights, an absolute occupancy-tenant shall not be ejected from his holding by his landlord as such for any cause.

CHAPTER IV.

OF OCCUPANCY-TENANTS.

43. Every tenant who, at the commencement of this Act, has held the same land continuously for twelve years, otherwise than as an absolute occupancy-tenant or a sub-tenant, and every person who is, at the commencement of this Act, or thereafter becomes, a tenant (not being an absolute occupancy-tenant or a sub-tenant) of land in the districts of Chánda, Nimár and Sambalpúr, shall be deemed to be an occupancy-tenant of that land:

Definition of "occupancy-tenant."

Provided that the land is not—

(a) sír-land, or

(b) held in lieu of wages, or

(c) held, in any district other than Sambalpúr, under a written lease in which it is expressly agreed that a right of occupancy in the land shall not be acquired, or that the tenant shall quit the land at the termination of the lease.

Explanation I.—The occupation of any person from whom the tenant inherited his holding, is, for the purposes of this section, deemed to be the occupation of the tenant.

Explanation II.—Where, by the custom of any village, the holdings of tenants are, or have been, liable to periodical re-distribution, land which a tenant or any person under whom he claims has, in accordance with that custom, from time to time, received in exchange for land previously held by him, is, for the purpose of calculating, under this section, the period of twelve years, deemed to be the same land as the land which he held before the exchange.

Cases in which ex-proprietors become occupancy-tenants of their sír-land.

44. (1) Whoever, after the commencement of this Act, temporarily or permanently loses, or parts with, his proprietary rights in land including sír-land (other than bhogra), shall, at the date of such loss or parting, become an occupancy-tenant of that sír-land, and the rent payable by him as such shall be fixed by a Revenue-officer on application made by him or by his landlord:

Provided that the Local Government may, in its discretion, on the application of the parties to the transfer, declare any proprietor who is desirous of selling the cultivating as well as the proprietary rights in his sír-land, to be exempt from the provisions of this section in respect of all or any part of his sír-land, if it is shown to the satisfaction of the Local Government—

(a) that the transferor does not belong to an agricultural class, or

(b) that the transferor, though belonging to an agricultural class, will have other permanent means of subsistence even though parting with the cultivating rights in his sír-land, and that the transferee belongs to an agricultural class; or

(d) that the area of the sír-land is too large for the transferor to manage after he has parted with his proprietary rights, and that the transferee belongs to an agricultural class.

(2) Every transfer or surrender of the right to cultivate sír land, and every agreement for the transfer or surrender by a proprietor of his right to cultivate sír-land, whether such agreement is to be given effect to before or after such right has come into separate existence under sub-section (1), shall, if such transfer, surrender or agreement is in contravention of the provisions of this section, be void; and no Civil or Revenue Court shall recognize any such transfer, surrender or agreement in any proceeding whatsoever; and, notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Registration Act, 1877, no officer empowered to register documents under that Act shall admit to registration any document which purports to transfer or surrender the cultivating rights of a proprietor in his sír-land, or to be an agreement for such transfer or surrender, unless the sanction of the Local Government to such transfer or surrender has been endorsed on the document.

(3) If there are two or more sharers in any sír-land, and one of them becomes an occupancy-tenant in it under this section, the share which previously belonged to him, shall, on application made by him or by his landlord, be divided off by a Revenue-officer, and the rights of such occupancy-tenant shall be limited to the land comprised in such share.

Explanation.—If a proprietor parts with his proprietary rights in sír-land by mortgage with possession, he shall be an occupancy-tenant of that sír-land so long as such mortgage continues.

Devolution and transfer of occupancy-right.

45. (1) When an occupancy-tenant dies his right in his holding shall devolve as if it were land:

Provided that, except in the districts of Chánda, Nimár and Sambalpúr, a collateral relative of the tenant shall not be entitled to inherit that right, unless at the death of the tenant he was a co-sharer in the holding, or held land, or was permanently resident, in the village in or from which the holding is cultivated, and is in the male line of descent from an ancestor who occupied the holding.

(2) The right of an occupancy-tenant in his holding may, subject to the other provisions of this Act, be sold in execution of a decree for arrears of the rent thereof, but shall not be liable to sale in execution of any other decree whatsoever, nor shall any decree be passed for the sale of such right.

(3) No occupancy-tenant shall be entitled to sell, make a gift of, mortgage, sublet (except from year to year) or otherwise transfer his right in his holding or in any portion thereof, and every such sale, gift, mortgage, sub-lease (other than from year to year) or transfer shall be void, and no Court or Revenue-officer shall recognize it in any proceeding whatsoever:

Provided that an occupancy-tenant may transfer his right of occupancy to any person who, if he survived the tenant, would inherit the right of occupancy, or to any person in favour of whom as a co-sharer the right of occupancy originally arose, or who has become by succession a co-sharer therein:

Provided, also, that nothing in this section shall affect the right of the Government to sell the right of an occupancy-tenant in his holding for the recovery of an advance made to him under the Land Improvement Loans Act, 1883, or the Agriculturists' Loans Act, 1884, or the right of the purchaser at such sale to succeed to the holding. XIX of 1883. XII of 1884.

(4) No contract for the sublease of a holding or any portion thereof shall be entered into or made during the currency of a sublease of such holding or such portion thereof; and every such contract shall be void; and no Court or Revenue-officer shall recognize it in any proceeding whatsoever.

(5) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Registration Act, 1877, no officer empowered to register documents shall admit to registration any document which purports to transfer the right of an occupancy-tenant in his holding or in any portion thereof, unless the document recites that the transferee is a person who, if he survived the tenant, would inherit the right of occupancy, or is a person in favour of whom as a co-sharer the right of occupancy originally arose or who became by succession a co-sharer therein. III of 1877.

Re-entry upon land of occupancy-tenant illegally transferred.

46. If an occupancy-tenant transfers any portion of his right in any land in contravention of the provisions of the last foregoing section, any such person as is referred to in the first proviso to sub-section (3) of that section, or the landlord from whom the tenant held the land, or, if the transfer is or has become permanent, the tenant, may at any time after the date of such transfer recover by suit from the transferee or his representative in interest, possession of the subject of the transfer:

Provided that such suit shall be instituted—

(1) at any time before the transfer has become permanent, or

(2) after the transfer has become permanent but before the expiration of six years reckoned from the date on which it became permanent, or before the announcement of the assessment of the settlement next following after that date, whichever event is the later.

47. (1) Among the persons entitled to institute a suit under the last foregoing section, the right so to sue shall accrue in the following order, namely:

Priority as to right to sue under section 46.

first, to the occupancy-tenant himself, if so entitled;

secondly, to such persons as would under section 45, sub-section (1), inherit the right of occupancy if they survived the tenant, in the order in which they would so inherit the right of occupancy; thirdly, to co-sharers in the right of occupancy jointly, in proportion to their shares; and, lastly, to the landlord.

(2) When any such suit as aforesaid is instituted, the Court shall issue a notice to all persons who seem to it, prima facie, to be entitled to a right to sue, and shall, after hearing such of them as appear and any other persons who may apply to be heard in the matter, decide from time to time who from among such of them as desire to exercise the right aforesaid is first entitled to do so, and, if he is not the original plaintiff, on his paying into Court within one month such reasonable sum as it thinks fit to recompense such plaintiff for the expenses incurred by him in connection with the institution of the suit, substitute him for such plaintiff and proceed with the suit as if it had been instituted by him.

(3) For the purpose of carrying this section into effect, the Court may make all such orders as it thinks fit regarding costs, the ascertainment of the persons entitled to sue, the stay of proceedings and other matters, and an appeal shall lie from the decision in any suit under this section as provided in the Code of Civil Procedure.

XIV of 1882.

[44] 48. The rent of the holding of every occupancy-tenant shall be fixed by the Settlement-officer at each settlement of the area in which the holding is comprised.

Rent of occupancy-tenant to be fixed at settlement.

[45.] 49. (1) In the districts of Chánda, Nimár and Sambalpúr, the rent fixed under section 48 shall not be altered during the currency of any settlement except under section 13, section 14 or section 16.

Fixation of rents during currency of settlement in Chánda, Nimar and Sambalpúr.

(2) The rent payable in respect of his holding by a tenant in any of those districts at the commencement of this Act shall be deemed to have been fixed at the last preceding settlement of the area in which that holding is comprised.

(3) Subject to the provisions of sections 13, 14 and 16, the rent payable by any such tenant in respect of a holding acquired by him after the commencement of this Act shall, pending the recurrence of the settlement of the area in which that holding is comprised, be the rent fixed by agreement between him and his landlord at the time he acquires that holding, or, in the absence of any such agreement, or on the expiration of the term for which any such agreement has been made, a rent fixed by a Revenue-officer on the application of either party at the following rate, that is to say:

(a) in the districts of Chánda and Nimár, the rate which the Local Government has prescribed for occupancy-tenants and caused to be entered in the record-of-rights at the current settlement;

(b) in the district of Sambalpúr, the average rate at which at the current settlement the rents of other lands in the same village of similar quality and possessing similar advantages were fixed.

[46 50. The rate of rent payable in money by an occupancy-tenant in any other district may, during the currency of a settlement, on the application of the landlord to a Revenue-officer, be enhanced, subject to any rules made under this Act for the local area in which the holding is situate and for the time being in force:

Enhancement during settlement in other districts.

Provided that—

(a) an application under this section shall not be entertained when, within the ten years immediately preceding the application, the rent of the holding has been fixed at any settlement or under any of the other provisions of this Act, except those of section 13 or section 14, or a suit or application to enhance it has been dismissed on the merits; and

(b) no order shall be made on any such application which is inconsistent with any contract made after the current settlement and still in force, such contract being consistent with this Act.

51. No occupancy-tenant shall be liable to ejectment for arrears of rent, but the rent shall be the first charge on his holding, which shall, subject to the other provisions of this Act, be liable, as provided by section 45, sub-section (2), to sale in execution of a decree for arrears of the rent thereof.

Occupancy-tenant not liable to ejectment for arrears of rent, but holding saleable in execution of decree for arrears.

[52. Notwithstanding any contract to the contrary or any provision of a record-of-rights, an occupancy-tenant shall not be ejected from his holding by his landlord as such except* in execution of a decree of a Civil Court passed on the ground of his having diverted the land to non-agricultural purposes or being chargeable with some other act or omission which, by custom not inconsistent with this Act or with any other enactment for the time being in force, renders him liable to be ejected.

Grounds for ejectment.

* One clause (48 of sent omitte

Tenant changing land in accordance with village-custom.

54. If a tenant having a right of occupancy in any land ceases to hold that land, and thereupon commences to hold other land of the same landlord, under circumstances from which it may be inferred that the tenant has accepted that other land in lieu of, and on the same conditions as, the land which he has ceased to hold, he shall, in the absence of a written agreement to the contrary, be deemed to have a right of occupancy in the land which he so commences to hold.

56. (1) When a village-service tenant dies, his right in his village-service holding shall pass to his successor in office.

(2) A transaction by which a village-service tenant attempts to effect a transfer of his interest in his village-service holding by sale, gift, mortgage, sub-lease or otherwise except by a sub-lease from year to year shall be void, and the village-service tenant shall be liable to be ejected for such attempt.

Obligation of village-service tenant to provide substitute

57. If a village-service tenant is unable to render the service which he is bound to render, he shall provide a competent person to render it for him.

Grounds on which a village-service tenant may be ejected.

58. (1) A village-service tenant shall not be ejected from his holding except in execution of an order for ejectment passed by a Revenue-officer on one of the following grounds, namely:

(a) that the tenant has attempted to effect a transfer of his holding in contravention of section 56, sub-section (2);

(b) that the tenant has ceased to render the service which he is bound to render, or has failed to render it properly, or, being unable to render it himself, has failed to provide a competent person to render it as required by section 57;

(c) that the tenant has diverted his land to non-agricultural purposes or is chargeable with some other act or omission which, by local custom or the provisions of the village wajib-ul-arz, renders him liable to be dismissed from office;

(2) When a village-service tenant is ejected from his holding under this section, or when he dies or resigns or is dismissed from his office, a Revenue-officer may place his successor in office in possession of the holding; and when a village-service tenant is ejected from, or loses possession of, his holding otherwise than in accordance with this section, a Revenue-officer may reinstate him in the possession of his holding and eject any transferee or trespasser who may be in wrongful possession thereof.

CHAPTER VI.

OF SUB-TENANTS.

Definition of "sub-tenant."

59. A tenant who is not an absolute occupancy-tenant or an occupancy-tenant and who holds land from another tenant, or from a málik-makbúzá, or from the holder of a survey-number, is a sub-tenant of that land.

Tenure according to agreement.

60. A sub-tenant shall, subject to the provisions of sections 6, 14 and 15, hold on such terms as may be agreed upon between him and his landlord: [52.]

Provided that, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, the sub-tenant of an occupancy-tenant or of an ordinary tenant shall be deemed to hold from year to year.

Power to declare sub-tenants in certain cases to have rights of ordinary tenants.

61. (1) In any local area in which the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare that the provisions of this section are in force, if it is proved to the satisfaction of a Revenue-officer or Settlement-officer that a málik-makbúzá or absolute occupancy-tenant is substantially a non-agriculturist who habitually sublets his holding, such Revenue-officer or Settlement-officer may, with the previous sanction of the Commissioner and in accordance with such rules as the Local Government may prescribe, declare that all persons who are, or may become, the sub-tenants of such holding, possess, as against their landlord, the rights conferred by this Act on an ordinary tenant:

Provided that—

(a) no such order shall be passed until an opportunity has been given to the málik-makbúzá or absolute occupancy-tenant to show cause against it; and,

(b) notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, the tenure of a sub-tenant who has become, or may become, possessed of the rights of an ordinary tenant under this section, shall be terminable by his landlord after notice given to the sub-tenant through a Revenue-officer not less than six months before the close of the agricultural year, accompanied by a deposit, as compensation for disturbance, of a sum equal to three times the annual rent payable to the landlord by the sub-tenant.

(2) An order passed under sub-section (1) may be withdrawn under the like authority, if the málik-makbúzá or absolute occupancy-tenant proves to the satisfaction of a Revenue-officer or Settlement-officer that, having terminated the tenure of his sub-tenant under proviso (b) to that sub-section, he has established his own cultivation and intends to cultivate his holding himself.

(3) If an absolute occupancy-tenant regarding whose holding a declaration under sub-section (1) is in force, dies without heirs or surrenders his holding, his sub-tenant (if any) shall be deemed to hold direct from the superior landlord at the rent which he was formerly liable to pay to such absolute occupancy-tenant.

CHAPTER VII.

OF ORDINARY TENANTS.

Definition of "ordinary tenant."

62. (1) Every tenant who is not an absolute occupancy-tenant, or an occupancy-tenant, or a village-service tenant or a sub-tenant, is an ordinary tenant. [53.]

(2) In any local area in which the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare that the provisions of this sub-section are in force, where a person cultivates land not being sír-land under an agreement made with the proprietor of the land and purporting to be an agreement for the cultivation of the land by such person and such proprietor in partnership, such person is an ordinary tenant of the land so cultivated by him, and, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, the rent payable by him for the land shall be fixed by a Revenue-officer on application made by him or his landlord.

[54A.] 63. (1) A Settlement-officer shall, unless the Local Government otherwise directs, determine the rents payable by the ordinary tenants of a mahál, other than ordinary tenants whose holdings consist entirely of sir-land, and, on and from the date on which the land-revenue assessment takes effect, the landlord shall be entitled to receive only the rents so determined.

Landlord's right to recover rents determined at settlement as payable by ordinary tenants.

(2) The rents determined under sub-section (1) shall be recorded in the proceedings of the Settlement-officer, and a copy of the record shall be granted free of expense to the landlord.

(3) When by reason of the receipt by the landlord of any consideration, whether in money or otherwise, a tenant is holding at a rent lower than that determined by the Settlement-officer under sub-section (1), the Settlement-officer may, notwithstanding anything in this Act, declare him to be entitled to hold at such lower rent,—

(a) if the term is fixed by contract, for the term so fixed or for any shorter period;

(b) in other cases, for such term as the Settlement-officer, having regard to the circumstances, fixes as fair and equitable and the term for which the tenant is declared to be so entitled shall be entered in the record made under sub-section (2):

Provided that in no case shall the tenant be entitled to hold at such lower rent for a period longer than that for which the settlement is being made, and, at the expiry of the settlement, he shall not be entitled to a continuance of the privilege.

[56.] 64. When a landlord wishes to enhance the rent of an ordinary tenant whose holding does not consist entirely of sir-land and whose rent is not fixed by an agreement in writing, and the tenant does not agree to the enhancement, the landlord may cause to be served on the tenant through a Revenue-officer a notice of the enhancement not less than six months or more than twelve months before the commencement of the agricultural year in which the landlord desires the enhancement to take effect.

Notice of enhancement to be served through Revenue-officer.

[57.] 65. (1) If, within the period of one month from the service of a notice under the last foregoing section, the tenant on whom the notice has been served, presents to the Revenue-officer issuing the notice a statement in writing declaring his willingness to pay the enhanced rent, he shall be deemed to have agreed to pay that rent from the commencement of the agricultural year next following.

Liability of tenant to ejectment in default of his agreeing to enhancement.

(2) If the tenant does not, within the said period of one month, present to the Revenue-officer a statement as aforesaid, the landlord may, not less than ten weeks before the commencement of the agricultural year next following, apply to the Revenue-officer to eject the tenant.

[58.] 66. (1) If, when an application has been made under sub-section (2) of the last foregoing section, the tenant appears and agrees to pay the enhanced rent demanded, his agreement shall thereupon be recorded, and he shall not be ejected but shall be liable to pay that rent from the commencement of the agricultural year next following the date of the agreement.

Procedure in ejectment-suit.

(2) If the tenant fails to appear, or if, on appearing, he does not agree to pay the enhanced rent demanded, the Revenue-officer shall determine what rent is fair and equitable for the holding.

(3) If the tenant agrees to pay the rent so determined, he shall be entitled to remain in occupation of the holding at that rent from the commencement of the current agricultural year.

(4) If the tenant does not agree to pay the rent determined under sub-section (2), the Revenue-officer may make an order for his ejectment on condition that within fifteen days from the date of the order the landlord deposits—

(a) such sum (if any) as may be declared by the order to be payable to the tenant as compensation for improvements; and

(b) a further sum as compensation for disturbance equal to seven times the yearly amount (if any) by which the rent determined under sub-section (2) exceeds the rent previously paid.

[59.] 67. (1) If these sums are so deposited, the order shall be made absolute and the sums deposited shall be paid to the tenant.

Conditions on which ejectment order is to be executed.

(2) If these sums are not so deposited, the decree shall become void, and the tenant shall remain in occupation of his holding at the rent previously paid by him.

[54.] 68. An ordinary tenant shall, subject to the provisions of sections 13, 14, 15, 63 and 66, pay such rent as may, from time to time, be fixed by agreement between him and his landlord.

Rent of ordinary tenant regulated by agreement.

[60.] [S. 54A (4).] 69. When the rent of a tenant has been determined by a Settlement-officer under section 63, or where a tenant has agreed to pay an enhanced rent for his holding under section 65, or when a tenant is holding at a rent determined as fair and equitable under section 66 or section 80, or when a rent has been agreed upon by contract or consent between the landlord and his tenant in respect of any holding, or when an order to eject a tenant from his holding has become void under section 67, no notice of enhancement under section 64 shall be served on such tenant, in respect of such holding, nor shall any further enhancement, by contract or consent or otherwise, in respect of such holding be permissible, for a period of seven years from the date on which the settlement made by the Settlement-officer took effect, or from the date of such determination, agreement, contract or consent, or from the date of such order for ejectment becoming void, as the case may be:

Fresh proceedings not to be taken for seven years.

Provided that, where a tenant is holding land under a special contract with his landlord at a favourable rent for a term of years in consideration of the labour or expense involved in the reclamation by such tenant of the land from waste, nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent a fair rent being fixed or agreed upon after the expiration of the term of such contract.

55.] 70. Notwithstanding any contract to the contrary or any provision of a record-of-rights, an ordinary tenant shall not be ejected from his holding by his landlord as such except—

Grounds on which an ordinary tenant may be ejected.

(a) as provided in the case of an occupancy-tenant by section 52;

(b) in accordance with the provisions of section 66;

(c) in execution of a decree for ejectment passed on the ground that his holding consists entirely of sír-land;

61.] 71. (1) When an ordinary tenant dies, his right in his holding shall devolve as if it were land:

Devolution and transfer of ordinary tenancy

Provided that a collateral relative of the tenant shall not be entitled to inherit his right unless at the death of the tenant he was a co-sharer in the holding.

(2) No decree shall be passed for the sale of the right of an ordinary tenant in his holding, nor shall such right be sold in execution of any decree whatsoever.

(3) No ordinary tenant shall be entitled to sell, make a gift of, mortgage, sublet (except from year to year) or otherwise transfer his right or holding or any portion thereof; and every such sale, gift, mortgage, sublease (other than from year to year) or transfer shall be void, and no Court or Revenue-officer shall recognize it in any proceeding whatsoever:

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall affect the right of the Government to sell the right of an ordinary tenant in his holding for the recovery of an advance made to him under the Land Improve-
1883. ment Loans Act, 1883, or the Agriculturists' Loans
884. Act, 1884, or the right of the purchaser at such sale to succeed to the holding.

(4) No contract for the sublease of a holding or any portion thereof shall be entered into or made during the currency of a sublease of such holding or such portion thereof; and every such contract shall be void; and no Court or Revenue-officer shall recognize it in any proceeding whatsoever.

(5) Notwithstanding anything contained in the 1877 Indian Registration Act, 1877, an officer empowered to register documents under that Act shall admit to registration any document which purports to transfer the right of an ordinary tenant in his holding or in any portion thereof.

Re-entry upon land of ordinary tenant illegally transferred.

72. If an ordinary tenant transfers any portion of his rights in any land in contravention of the provisions of the last foregoing section, any such person as is referred to in the proviso to sub-section (1) of that section, or the landlord from whom the tenant held the land, or, if the transfer is or has become permanent, the tenant, may at any time after the date of such transfer recover by suit from the transferee or his representative in interest possession of the subject of the transfer:

Provided that such suit shall be instituted—

(1) at any time before the transfer has become permanent, or

(2) after the transfer has become permanent but before the expiration of six years reckoned from the date on which it became permanent, or before the announcement of the assessment of the settlement next following after that date, whichever event is later.

Priority as to right of recovery of possession under section 72.

73. (1) Among the persons entitled to institute a suit under the last foregoing section, the right so to sue shall accrue in the following order, namely:

first, to the tenant himself, if so entitled;

secondly, to such of the persons entitled to institute a suit under the last foregoing section as would, under section 71, sub-section (1), inherit the right transferred if they survived the tenant, in the order in which they would so inherit such right; and,

lastly, to the landlord.

(2) When any such suit as aforesaid is instituted, the Court shall issue a notice to all persons who seem to it, primâ facie, to be entitled to a right to sue, and shall, after hearing such of them as appear and any other persons who may apply to be heard in the matter, decide from time to time who from among such of them as desire to exercise the right aforesaid is first entitled to do so, and, if he is not the original plaintiff, on his paying into Court within one month such reasonable sum as it thinks fit to recompense such plaintiff for the expenses incurred by him in connection with the institution of the suit, substitute him for such plaintiff and proceed with the suit as if it had been instituted by him.

(3) For the purpose of carrying this section into effect, the Court may make all such orders as it thinks fit regarding costs, the ascertainment of the persons entitled to sue, the stay of proceedings and other matters, and an appeal shall lie from the decision in every suit under this section as provided in the Code of Civil Procedure.

XIV of 1882.

[62.] 74. (1) Notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, the landlord of any holding held by an ordinary tenant shall, at the request of the tenant and on the tender by the tenant to him of a sum equal to two-and-a-half times the annual rent payable in respect of the holding, together with the cost of preparing any instrument required for this purpose, confer upon the tenant the rights of an occupancy-tenant in respect of the holding; and, when these rights have so been conferred, the rent of the tenant shall be deemed to be fixed under this Act, within the meaning of section 50, at the rate at which rent was payable by the tenant at the date of the request and tender:

Obligation of landlord to confer occupancy-rights on ordinary tenant.

Provided that the tenant may, for the purposes of any such request and tender, and the landlord may, upon any such request and tender being made to him, apply to a Revenue-officer, or during the progress of settlement-operations to a Settlement-officer, to fix the rent of the holding for the purposes of this section; and, if it is proved to the satisfaction of the officer that the rate of rent payable in respect to the holding is greater or less than the rate usually paid by ordinary tenants of holdings situate in the village or vicinity for land of similar quality with like advantages, the officer may fix the rent at the latter rate, and the rent so fixed shall for the purposes of this section be deemed to be, and to have been at the date of the request and tender, the rent payable by the tenant:

Provided, further, that, if the application is made otherwise than during the progress of settlement-operations, nothing in this section shall be construed to empower a Revenue-officer to alter a rent within seven years of its having been fixed under any of the provisions of this Act, except on the ground that some such change as is described in section 14 has since occurred so as to render the rent so fixed no longer a fair rent.

(2) If a landlord to whom a request and tender are made by a tenant under sub-section (1), refuses or neglects for a period of one month to confer the rights of an occupancy-tenant on the tenant, the tenant may deposit the sum aforesaid in the Court of a Revenue-officer, or, during the progress of settlement-operations, of a Settlement-officer, and apply to that officer to confer upon him the rights of an occupancy-tenant in respect of the holding.

(3) The officer so applied to, after giving notice of the application to the landlord and hearing him, if he appears, and after making such inquiry as he thinks necessary, may execute any instrument required for conferring the rights of an occupancy-tenant in respect of the holding upon the tenant, and the execution shall have the same effect as an execution by the landlord.

(4) Every person upon whom the rights of an occupancy-tenant are conferred under this section, shall be deemed to be an occupancy-tenant for the purposes of this Act.

(5) Nothing in this section shall apply to a holding consisting entirely of sir-land.

CHAPTER VIII

JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE.

Power to order progressive enhancement.

75. If a Revenue-officer or Settlement-officer, as the case may be, in any proceeding under this Act passes an order which enhances a tenant's rent, but considers that the immediate enforcement of such order to its full extent will be attended by hardship to the tenant, he may direct that the enhancement shall be gradual, that is to say, that the rent shall increase by annual increments for any number of years, not exceeding five, until the full enhancement ordered has been reached.

76. The Local Government may direct that all suits or any specified class of suits, between landlords and tenants as such, shall not be registered in the registers of civil suits kept under the Code of Civil Procedure but in such other registers as he may prescribe.

XIV of 1882.

[67.] Plaint in such suits.

77. (1) In suits between landlords and tenants as such, the plaint shall, in addition to the matters mentioned in section 50 of the Code of Civil Procedure, specify the area of the land to which the suit relates, and, where the fields comprised in that land have been numbered in a Government survey, the number of each such field; and, in the case of suits for an arrear, the amount of the yearly rent and the instalments in which it is payable.

XIV of 1882.

(2) When the land to which the suit relates comprises parts of numbered fields, or has not been divided into numbered fields, an accurate and sufficient description of the land and its boundaries shall be given in the plaint.

78. In suits between landlords and tenants as such, the fees of a legal practitioner shall not be allowed as costs, unless the Court considers, for reasons to be recorded by it in writing, that those fees ought to be allowed.

79. No set-off shall be allowed in any suit for arrears unless the amount claimed as a set-off has been determined by a decree or order of a competent Court or of a Revenue-officer or Settlement-officer.

Procedure when ordinary tenant in suit pleads excessive rent.

80. (1) If in any suit in which the defendant is an ordinary tenant whose holding does not consist entirely of sir-land, the tenant appears and, at any time before a decree is passed, pleads that his rent is excessive, the Court shall inquire into the circumstances of the rent.

(2) If the Court finds that the rent payable by the tenant has been enhanced by contract or consent above the rent determined by a Settlement-officer at the current settlement or by a Revenue-officer under this Act, or, when not so determined, above the rent at which the holding was first taken up by the tenant, or, if the rent payable was determined by a Settlement-officer only after the landlord had refused to comply with the request of the Settlement-officer to reduce it, the Court may stay proceedings and refer the case to a Revenue-officer, who shall thereupon determine what rent is fair and equitable for the holding. If the rent so determined is less than the rent previously payable, the Court shall decree against the tenant arrears of rent on account of any year only to the extent of the amount (if any) by which his payments for that year fall short of the rent so determined.

(3) If the Court finds that the rent in respect of which the plea is made by the tenant, was not enhanced or determined in the manner described in sub-section (2), but was the rent at which the tenant first took up the holding from the landlord, the Court shall pass a decree for such sum as may be due at the rent so payable, but may, before or after passing the decree, refer the case to a Revenue officer, who shall thereupon determine what is a fair and equitable rent for the holding, and, if the tenant pays the amount decreed within the time allowed by this Act, he shall be entitled to remain in occupation of his holding at the rent so determined with effect from the commencement of the agricultural year next following the date of the institution of the suit.

Explanation I.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize a Revenue-officer to determine a rent higher than that payable by the tenant at the date of the institution of the suit.

Explanation II.—A statement made during the progress of settlement-operations by the Settlement-officer, and contained in any return or report prescribed by the Local Government, to the effect that a landlord refused to reduce any rent, shall be conclusive proof of such refusal.

Tenant's improvements how to be treated in fixing rents.

81. When the land in respect of which an application is made under section 49 of section 50, or for which a fair rent is to be determined under section 67 or section 80, has been improved, in accordance with the provisions of this Act, by the agency, or at the expense, of the tenant and the value of such improvement was not taken into consideration by the Settlement-officer in determining the rent of the holding at the settlement current at the time of the application, the quality and advantages of the land shall, notwithstanding anything contained in any contract or record-of-rights to the contrary, be deemed, for the purposes of any such section as aforesaid, to be the quality and advantages which the land would have had and enjoyed, if the improvement had not been made.

.] 82. In suits for arrears, interest on the arrears may be allowed up to the date of institution, at such rate, not exceeding twelve per cent. per annum, as the Court thinks fit.

Interest on arrears.

.] 83. A decree or order passed in a suit for arrears, whether on appeal or otherwise, by a Judge of a Civil Court exercising powers not less than those of an Assistant Commissioner of the first class, as defined in the Cen-1885. tral Provinces Civil Courts Act, 1885, shall not be subject to appeal, unless—

No appeal in certain suits for arrears.

(a) the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit exceeds one hundred rupees; or

(b) the decree has decided a question relating to title to land or to some interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, or a question of right to enhance or vary the rent of a tenant, or a question of the amount of rent annually payable by a tenant.

] 84. (1) If a decree for an arrear is passed against a tenant and remains unsatisfied, the landlord may, at any time before the execution of the decree is barred by limitation and not less than six months before the expiration of the current agricultural year, apply to the Court having authority to execute the decree, if the tenant is an occupancy-tenant or an absolute occupancy tenant, to attach the holding in respect of which the arrear is due, and, if the tenant is an ordinary tenant, to cause a notice to be served on him, directing him either to pay the amount due under the decree not later than the expiration of the current agricultural year, or to surrender his holding not later than that time.

Ejectment for non-payment of an arrear due under a decree.

(2) If the holding of an occupancy-tenant or an absolute occupancy-tenant is attached under sub-section (1) and the amount due is not paid by the tenant within three months from the date of such attachment, the Court shall order the sale of the holding attached and shall transfer the proceedings to a Revenue-officer for execution of the sale in accordance with such rules as may be prescribed by the Local Government in this behalf:

Provided that no sale shall be confirmed under such rules before the expiration of the current agricultural year.

(3) If the amount due under the decree is paid before the expiration of the current agricultural year, or if the sale is not confirmed before such expiration, then, if such amount is paid at any time before the sale is confirmed, the Court shall release the holding from attachment.

(4) If the tenant is an ordinary tenant and a notice under sub-section (1) is served on him not less than four months before the expiration of the current agricultural year, and if the amount due is not paid and the holding is not surrendered before such expiration, the Court may, in its discretion but subject to the other provisions of this Act, make an order for the ejectment of the tenant from his holding.

[73.] 85. (1) Where, in answer to a suit for an arrear, the tenant admits that the arrear is due, but pleads that the produce of his holding during the period in respect of which the arrear is claimed has been diminished or destroyed by drought, hail or other extraordinary calamity beyond his control, the Court in its discretion may, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, allow in its decree any deduction from the arrear, and direct payment of the amount decreed (if any) in such instalments (if any) as it thinks fit.

Power of Court to deal with cases of drought or other calamity in suits for arrears.

(2) In any such case the Court may order that the provisions of the last foregoing section shall not apply to the decree.

(3) In making a decree under this section the Court shall have regard to—

(a) the value of the produce of the holding for the whole agricultural year in respect of which the arrear accrued; and

(b) the proportion which the amount of rent payable for that year by the tenant bears to that value.

(4) If in any such suit it appears that the land-revenue of the village in which the holding is situate has been, wholly or in part, suspended or remitted on account of drought, hail or other extraordinary calamity in respect of the period for which the arrear is claimed, the Court shall presume, until the contrary is shown, that the diminution or destruction alleged by the tenant has taken place.

[74.] 86. (1) A suit for the ejectment of a tenant on the ground that he has done or omitted to do something for doing or omitting to do which he is liable to ejectment, or that he has broken a condition on breach of which he is, under the terms of a contract between him and the landlord, liable to ejectment, shall not be entertained unless the landlord has requested the tenant, where the damage or breach is capable of remedy, to remedy the same, and, in any case, to pay reasonable compensation for the damage or breach, and the tenant has failed to comply within a reasonable time with that request.

Relief against forfeitures.

(2) A decree passed in favour of a landlord in any such suit shall declare the amount of compensation which would reasonably be payable to the plaintiff for the damage or breach, and whether, in the opinion of the Court, the damage or breach is capable of remedy, and shall fix a period during which it shall be open to the defendant to pay that amount to the plaintiff, and, where the damage or breach is declared to be capable of remedy, to remedy the same.

(3) The Court may, from time to time, extend a period fixed by it under sub-section (2) for remedying a damage or breach.

(4) If the defendant, within the period or extended period (as the case may be) fixed by the Court under this section, pays the compensation mentioned in the decree, and, where the damage or breach is declared by the Court to be capable of remedy, remedies the damage or breach to the satisfaction of the Court, the decree shall not be executed.

Rights of ejected tenant in respect of crops and land prepared for sowing.

87. The following rules shall be applicable in the case of every tenant ejected from a holding:

(1) When the tenant has, before the date of his ejectment, sown or planted crops in any land comprised in the holding, he shall be entitled, at the option of the landlord, either to retain possession of that land and to use it for the purpose of tending and gathering in the crops, or to receive from the landlord the estimated value of the labour and capital expended by the tenant in preparing the land and sowing, planting and tending the crops, together with reasonable interest thereon.

(2) When the tenant has, before the date of his ejectment, prepared for sowing any land comprised in his holding, but has not sown or planted crops on that land, he shall be entitled to receive from the landlord the estimated value of the labour and capital expended by him in so preparing the land, together with reasonable interest thereon.

Provided that a tenant shall not be entitled to retain possession of any land or receive any sum in respect thereof under this section when, after the commencement of proceedings by the landlord for his ejectment, he has cultivated or prepared the land contrary to local usage.

[76.] 88. When a landlord elects, under clause (1) of the last foregoing section, to allow a tenant to retain possession of any land for the purpose specified in that clause, the tenant shall pay to the landlord, for the use and occupation of the land during the period for which he is allowed to retain possession of the same, such rent as the Court may deem reasonable.

Payment by tenant for occupation of land under section 87.

[77.] 89. In all suits and proceedings for ejectment or for sale for arrears of rent the Court shall inquire into and determine all claims under this Act by the landlord against the tenant as such, or by the tenant against the landlord as such.

All claims between landlord and tenant to be determined in ejectment or sale proceedings.

[78.] 90. (1) When it appears to a Court making an enquiry under the last foregoing section that the amount payable by the landlord to the tenant as such exceeds the amount payable by the tenant to the landlord as such, the proceedings for sale, or for ejectment, if under section 84, shall abate, and, in other cases, the decree or order for ejectment (if any) shall, unless the landlord and tenant come to an arrangement regarding the payment of the excess sum, specify a time within which it must be paid into Court.

Procedure when, on ejectment, money is due by the landlord to the tenant.

(2) If it is so paid within the time specified, the Court shall, subject to the other provisions of this Act, eject the tenant; and, if it is not so paid, the Court shall refuse to eject the tenant.

[79.] 91. All decrees and orders for ejectment under this Act shall take effect from the beginning of the agricultural year next following the date of the decree or order, except where such decree or order is passed within the first month of the agricultural year, when, subject to the provisions of sections 57 and 68, it shall take effect at once.

Ejectment decrees and orders to have effect from beginning of agricultural year.

92. Any tenant who has been ejected from his holding or from any portion thereof otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act, may, on application to a Revenue-officer made within one year from the date of his ejectment, be reinstated in possession of such holding or portion:

Reinstatement of tenant illegally ejected.

Provided that no order passed under this section shall prejudice the right of the landlord to eject the tenant so reinstated, or the right of a tenant whose application for reinstatement is rejected, to recover possession of his holding by means of a regular suit instituted in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

[80.] 93. (1) If any landlord or tenant of a holding desires that the extent of that holding be ascertained, or that evidence relating to any improvement made in respect thereof, or to the state of the holding at any specified time, be recorded, he may apply to a Revenue-officer; and that officer shall thereupon, in presence of the parties,

Applications to measure certain condition of holdings.

(a) make or cause to be made such inquiry as he thinks fit, with a view to ascertaining the extent of the holding, and record his finding thereon, or

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Experience of the working of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, 1883, gained since its amendment by Act XVII of 1889, has shown the necessity for its further amendment in some matters of importance. The reasons for the changes which are now proposed are explained below, and the amendments have the almost unanimous support of the officers consulted. As those changes are numerous, it is proposed to repeal the Acts of 1883 and 1889 and to pass a Bill to consolidate and amend the law on the subject.

2. The twelve-year rule, under which a tenant acquired a right-of-occupancy in land which he had held continuously for twelve years, was abrogated in 1883 in favour of a measure which protected all tenants except sub-tenants. The principal features of this enactment were the right of the ordinary tenant to hold his land so long as the rent was paid, the prohibition of frequent enhancements of rent, and the right to the payment of compensation in case of disturbance. These safeguards, which were novel and experimental, have not completely answered their purpose, at least in the more advanced parts of the province. The present law has failed in those tracts in which the competition for land is keenest, in respect of the method by which the rent of the ordinary tenant is settled; and, with the increase of population, a similar result may be expected in the parts that are at present less advanced. It is, therefore, proposed, not to alter the principle of the present law, but to amend it by an extension of the principle on which it is already based, so as to provide that the rent of every tenant shall be fixed at settlement for a term of seven years, whether the Settlement-officer raises, lowers or maintains it, and that after the expiry of this period, should the landlord propose to enhance it, the tenant shall have a right of reference to the Revenue-officer, who will then proceed to fix a fair rent at which the tenant will be entitled to hold. The amendments necessary to give effect to this proposal are contained in clauses 60, 66 and 80 of the Bill.

3. This proposal has been further extended so as to provide that the fairness of the rent may be adjudicated upon when the tenant proposes to purchase the occupancy-right of his holding (clause 74); that there shall be power to make enhancements of rents progressive (clause 75); and that in a suit for the recovery of arrears of rent, which may lead to ejectment, the Court shall inquire into the circumstances of the rent, if it is pleaded that it is excessive, and shall, subject to certain limitations, refer the case to a Revenue-officer who shall determine a fair and equitable rent (clause 80).

4. It is also proposed to withdraw from occupancy and ordinary tenants the powers of transfer which they at present enjoy with the consent of their landlord, leaving untouched the power which occupancy-tenants possess of transferring holdings to heirs or co-sharers independently of that consent. Powers of transfer were conferred upon tenants of both classes, practically for the first time by the legislation of 1883. They have scarcely yet learned the powers with which they were then endowed. Transfers have, up to the present, been few, but there is abundant evidence in the extent to which the holdings of absolute occupancy-tenants have been transferred, that, once tenants of the lower classes fairly learn that they have rights of transfer, similar results will follow in their holdings also. The design of the Act of 1883 was to encourage the application of capital to the soil, but there is a complete consensus of opinion that these anticipations have not been fulfilled, and that, in the interests of the preservation of their holdings to the tenants, it is necessary to retrace our steps. This can fortunately still be done without interference with estal lished customs and prescriptive rights. It is, therefore, proposed to withdraw from occupancy and ordinary tenants all power of transfer to strangers save by way of sub-leasing from year to year (clauses 45 and 71). This will place the occupancy and ordinary tenant in practically the same position as the occupancy-tenant of the neighbouring North-Western Provinces. Transfers in contravention of the law have at the same time been declared to be void; but those interested have been empowered to recover possession of the holding thus transferred (clauses 70 and 72).

5. It is proposed, moreover, to amend the present law regarding the transfer of a proprietor's sir rights. A proprietor who alienates his rights of ownership, is under the present Act maintained in the enjoyment of occupancy-rights in his home farm, but only if he has not expressly agreed to the transfer of the rights of cultivation or a Court has not expressly directed such transfer. It is found, as indeed might have been expected, that so long as a debtor is allowed the option of contracting himself out of the protection which the law is intended to afford him, the same pressure of circumstances which forces him to pledge or sell his land, also forces him to relinquish the protection. It is proposed, therefore, to adopt, with certain modifications and limitations, the law on this subject already obtaining in the North Western Provinces, which refuses to the owner the option of parting with the occupancy of his sir-land, even by express agreement. Power to relax this prohibition is, however, given to the Chief Commissioner under certain specified circumstances (clause 44).

6. The right of inheritance to an occupancy holding has been extended to collaterals who hold land or are permanently resident in the village and are in the male line of descent from an ancester who occupied the holding. It has been ascertained that this is at present the common rule of succession prevailing in the Central Provinces; and, as the subdivision of holdings extends, the present more limited rule would operate, in the event of the failure of one branch of the family, to exclude the other branches from the succession to which, if still joint, they would be entitled (clause 45).

7. It is proposed to substitute the sale of the holding for the ejectment now allowed in the execution of a decree for arrears of rent against an occupancy-tenant. The present procedure allows the landlord to take advantage of the temporary necessities of the tenant in order to deprive him for ever of his holding, while the proposed procedure secures to the tenant the full market value of his rights (clause 51).

The opportunity has also been taken to provide by law for the procedure to be followed in the sale of both absolute occupancy and occupancy tenancies (clause 84).

8. The protection of sub-tenants is a matter which has become of increasing importance with the agricultural development of the Central Provinces. Power is, therefore, taken to secure to them a measure of protection in cases where their landlords, although themselves plotowners or absolute occupancy-tenants, are mere non cultivating rent receivers, so that the sub tenants are themselves the primary cultivators and consequently deserving of the protection extended to tenants proper holding directly under the owner of the land (clause 61).

9. It has been found that the cost and uncertainty of legal proceedings often prevent a tenant from seeking redress for wrong suffered at the hands of his landlord. Power has, therefore, been given to Revenue-officers to summarily reinstate tenants who have been ejected otherwise than by legal process (clause 92). If the tenant is found to have been wrongfully ejected the burden of an appeal to the Courts will then lie upon the prima facie wrongdoer.

10. Further amendments are, that the suspension or remission of the land-revenue due to the Government carries with it the suspension or remission of a corresponding proportion of the rent (clause 17); that a village-service tenant who vacates his office, also vacates his holding, while, if he is wrongfully ejected from it, a Revenue-officer may reinstate him (clause 58); that a second appeal is allowed in rent-suits when certain questions of importance are involved (clause 83 (b)); and that a suit for rent paid by division or appraisement of the produce must be brought within three months of the date fixed for the rent instalment (clause 94 (2)). This last provision is justified by the impossibility of procuring after any lengthened interval satisfactory evidence as to the produce of a field, and by the fact that, in case of dispute, either landlord or tenant may apply to a Revenue-officer, who will divide or appraise the crop for him.

11. The remaining amendments proposed are generally unimportant and call for no separate explanation.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 1st October, 1897:

NO. 15 OF 1897.

A Bill to further amend the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1881.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1881; It is hereby enacted as follows:

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act (1881) Amendment Act, 1898; and

Substitution of new definition of "sír-land" for that contained in section 4, clause (6), Act XVIII, 1881.

2. In Chapter I of the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1881 (hereinafter referred to as "the said Act"), clause (6) of section 4 is repealed, and after section 4 the following shall be substituted, namely:

Meaning of "sír-land."

'4A. (1) The expression "sír-land" means generally the demesne or permanent home-farm land of a proprietor, and includes the following, and no other, land, namely:

(a) land which has, under section 69, been finally recorded as "sír-land" in the papers of the current settlement of the local area in which the land is situate;

(b) land which has, under section 132, clause (j), been declared to be "sír-land"; and

(c) land in the Sambalpúr district which has been recorded as "bhogra" in the papers of the current settlement of the local area in which the land is situate.

(2) In any local area of which no settlement has been made since the commencement of the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1889, until the next following settlement of such local area, "sír-land" also includes land which, at the commencement of the said Act, was occupied by, and had been cultivated by the proprietor or one of the proprietors thereof for a period of not less than twelve consecutive years:

Provided that land (other than bhogra) which, at the commencement of the said Act, was unoccupied by such proprietor, and which had, after the date of the last settlement made before the commencement of that Act, or after the expiration of such period of twelve years, been so unoccupied for a period of six consecutive years, shall not be deemed to be "sír-land."

(3) In any local area of which no settlement has been made since the commencement of this Act, until the next following settlement of such local area, "sír-land" also includes land which had, at the commencement of the said Act, been broken up from waste by the proprietor or one of the proprietors thereof, and cultivated by him for a period of not less than six consecutive years:

Provided that, if such period of six years had been completed before the commencement of the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1889, and such land was at the commencement of that Act unoccupied by the proprietor, and had been so unoccupied by him for six consecutive years, it shall not be deemed to be "sír-land." XVI of 1889.

Explanation I.—For the purposes of sub-sections (2) and (3), land shall be deemed to be occupied by the proprietor when it is leased out by him with an express reservation of his sír-rights, and land shall be deemed to be cultivated when it is allowed to lie fallow in accordance with the usual practice of cultivation.

Explanation II.—In this definition the word "proprietor" shall be deemed to include an assignee of proprietary rights, but not a málik-makbúzá.

Explanation III.—When by any local custom land is liable to exchange or redistribution among the cultivators thereof, land which is not "sír-land" and which is taken in exchange for "sír-land," becomes "sír land", and the "sír land" given in exchange for that land ceases to be "sír-land."

Explanation IV.—Land which has been recorded as "sír-land" in the papers of any settlement made before the commencement of this Act, shall be deemed to have been finally recorded as "sír-land" under section 69.'

3. After clause (14) of section 4 of the said Act, the following shall be added, namely:

4. To clause (15) of section 4 of the said Act the following shall be added namely:

Amendment of section 4, clause (15), Act XVIII, 1881.

"and in section 65-A it includes also the sum payable by a thikádár, farmer or gaontia to the proprietor for the use or occupation of a village or part of a village farmed by him."

5. For section 65-A of the said Act, the following shall be substituted, namely:

(b) when on the death of a thikádár there are two or more heirs bearing the same relationship to him, the eldest of such heirs shall succeed:

Provided, first, that of such heirs an heir who was joint with the thikádár, shall have preference over an heir who was separate; and

Provided, secondly, that the eldest of two or more such heirs shall be at liberty at the time of succession to resign his right in favour of another heir bearing the same degree of relationship to the deceased thikádár as he himself bears

(c) a protected thikádár, whether holding under a written lease or a verbal agreement, shall be entitled to a renewal of his lease on its expiry, on his agreeing to farm his village at a fair and equitable rent;

(5) In any proceedings before a Court for the ejectment of a thikádár, gaontia or farmer, if it appears that the thikádár, gaontia or farmer has filed an application before a Revenue-officer to obtain a declaration that he is protected, or if he files such an application before the Court, the Court shall stay proceedings until the application has been disposed of in accordance with the provisions of this Act, and shall, if the application is filed before itself, forward such application to the Deputy Commissioner or Settlement-officer for disposal.

(6) If any protected thikádár, gaontia or farmer is shown to have since the commencement of the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1898, contravened, or to be contravening, the conditions of his tenure as contained in clause (a) or (g) of sub-section 4, or to have grossly mismanaged the village held by him in lease, the Settlement-officer or Deputy Commissioner may, with the previous sanction of the Chief Commissioner, declare such thikádár, gaontia or farmer to have forfeited the protection previously conferred on him under this section, and such thikádár, farmer or gaontia shall from the date of such declaration cease to be protected.

(j) declaring, either on his own motion or on a reference made by a Court or Revenue-officer, land to be sír-land under the provisions of section 69, sub-section (2), clause (b), and the provisos thereto"

13. Sections 3, 5, 17, 19, 20 and 24 of the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1889, are repealed.

Repeals.

XVI of 1889.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

In the revision of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, 1883, it has been proposed to amend the law regarding the transfer of a proprietors' sír rights, and to refuse to the owner the option of parting with the occupation of his sír-land, even by express agreement. The object of this measure is to preserve to the owner, who has lost his property by improvidence or misfortune, some measure of subsistence. But it is obvious that, if he were allowed to convert the whole of his land into sír, he would be practically deprived of his powers of alienation, and the actual cultivators of those rights of occupation, which they possess in lands outside the sír. The definition of "sír-land" has, therefore, by clause 2 of the annexed Bill to amend the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1881, been somewhat restricted, and, more particularly, rights in sír, as distinguished from khudkasht, have been limited to one quarter of the total occupied area of the mahál.

2. The working of the law for the protection of thíkádárs has shown that it is desirable to enlarge the provisions of section 65-A of Act XVIII of 1881. The necessity for protection has in many cases been brought to notice only after the thíkádár has been ejected on the expiry of his lease or by the decree of a Civil Court, when, under the law as it stands, interference is impossible. It is inconsistent with the object of the section that its provisions should be liable to be thus set at naught by the action of one of the parties, and it is, therefore, proposed to take power to reinstate ejected thíkádárs who are entitled to protection, at any time within one year from the date of their ejectment. It is also proposed that a Civil Court shall be required to make a reference to a Revenue-officer in every case in which the protected status is claimed by a thíkádár who is the defendant in an action for ejectment. The main incidents of the tenure, which have hitherto only found a place in the terms of settlement, are now to be embodied in the law. It is also proposed to empower the Chief Commissioner to confer upon a thíkádár occupancy-rights in the whole or a portion of the land which he cultivates, instead of protecting him in respect of the whole of his property, and to cancel the protected status when the thíkádár's conduct or management of the property is such as to deprive him of any claim to consideration. These changes are given effect to by clause 5 of the Bill.

3. The definition of "arrear" contained in section 91 of Act XVIII of 1881 does not cover money due to the Government on account of town sites, banks, fisheries, quarries and the like. It is, therefore, proposed, by clauses 3, 8, and 10 of the Bill, to insert a definition of "land-revenue" in section 4 of that Act, to recast section 91 and to amend section 94, so as to render the procedure for the recovery of arrears applicable to these and similar dues.

4. It has recently become the practice for the creditors of a landlord to attach his unpaid rents in the hands of tenants, and so to defeat the lien which the Government possesses upon them. It is, therefore, proposed to follow the lines of the Punjab and other Land-revenue Acts, and, by clause 9 of the Bill, to insert a new section in Act XVIII of 1881 to declare the Land-revenue a first charge on the rents and profits of land.

OUDH COURTS BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Oudh Courts Act, 1891. He said:—"That Act provides for a Court of two Judicial Commissioners. It was not contemplated at the time that the Act was passed that a necessity should arise for a third Judicial Commissioner but I am sorry to say that necessity has now been established. According to the last return which we have received, there were upwards of 1,200 appeals pending before the Court of the Judicial Commissioners, and the limit of the number of disposals of appeals of the kind which they have hitherto reached has been 500. The result is that an appellant who lodges an appeal now will have to wait two years for its disposal. This is practically a denial of justice, and the Government of India have arranged, with the assent of my hon'ble friend Sir James Westland, on whom so many claims are made, and also with the sanction of the Secretary of State, that a third Judicial Commissioner should be appointed for a term of one year, in order to bring the list of appeals within manageable limits. In order to appoint a third Judicial Commissioner it is necessary to amend the law of 1891, and the opportunity is taken to carry out two amendments which are of importance. Under the Act of 1891, when the two Judicial Commissioners sitting as a Bench differ in opinion, a reference has to be made to the High Court at Allahabad for the disposal and decision of the case. Now that there are to be three Judicial Commissioners, the reference will no longer be to that High Court, but to the third Judicial Commissioner, and the judgment will be given in accordance with the opinion of the majority of the Judges of the Court. Opportunity has also been taken to add to the law in Oudh a provision which has been taken from the Lower Burma Courts Act by which the Judicial Commissioner is empowered to make rules for the recording of judgments and the taking of evidence, which will shorten and simplify the procedure of the Court, and which will, I hope, result in the speedy disposal of the great mass of litigation which is now pending. These are the only remarks I have to make."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the Gazette of India in English and in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Government Gazette in English and in such other languages as the Local Government may think fit.

The motion was put and agreed to.

CENTRAL PROVINCES TENANCY BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Agricultural Tenancies in the Central Provinces. He said:—"I must ask the Council to bear with me a little, while I explain and describe the circumstances under which the necessity for this legislation has arisen. The Central Provinces were constituted in 1861, by appropriation of areas from other great provinces of India. Tracts were taken from the North-Western Provinces, from Bombay, from Madras and from Bengal and added to the kingdom of Nagpur and made what are now known as the Central Provinces. The result was a very singular combination of races, a diversity of languages, of customs and at one time even of laws, which was perhaps peculiar in India. But one outcome of the organisation of the Central Provinces was the discovery that in that area proprietary rights were weaker and tenant rights were stronger than perhaps in any other province of India. The region was a backward one, not very thickly peopled, not easily accessible, with a scanty agriculture, a country in which tenants were of very great importance, and in which the maintenance of tenants in peace and contentment was a matter of necessity to the proprietor of land; but besides that the proprietary tenure was less certain and firm than it was in most other parts of India. In some parts there were Rajas of ancient standing and proprietary communities whose position was just as distinct and defined and clear as it was in the upper provinces of India. In other parts of the country the conduct and management of the villages rested in the hands of headmen, who were only representatives of the cultivators, and who had no distinct or definite proprietary rights; in other parts the management was entrusted by the Government to contractors and middlemen of various kinds who had no previous connection with the villages. All these classes were simultaneously recognised as proprietors of the villages to which they belonged, or in which they resided, by the executive measures which were taken under the administration of Sir Richard Temple. Behind that arrangement no one proposes to go. There has been discussion as to whether it was a good measure or bad one ; but for evil or for good that decision has been taken, and nobody proposes to vary or alter that arrangement in any form. When the provinces were constituted a separate administration, the famous old Tenancy Act of Bengal—Act X of 1859—was extended to them as a temporary measure more with the object of providing a procedure for the Revenue Courts than with the intention of laying down any distinct rules as to the rights of tenants. What these rights would be was a subject of prolonged discussion which ended in the Act of 1883 which it is now proposed to amend. The Act of 1883 recognized three distinct classes of tenants. One of these was called in the Act "absolute occupancy tenants." These were tenants who had been long and permanently associated with the village, who had probably assisted in the foundation of it, who had built houses and wells, and in various ways taken a prominent part in the settlement. Next to them came a class which were called occupancy-tenants. They were villagers who were settled for more than twelve years in the village before the Act came into force. And the third class were called in the Act ordinary tenants, and included all the cultivators who were not embraced in the two upper classes of the tenantry.

"Now the legislature in 1883 found that the position and incidence of the tenure of even this ordinary class was so strong that instead of extending the occupancy sections of the Bengal Act, it was decided to confer upon the ordinary tenant powers and privileges which were very much in excess of the privileges given even to occupancy-tenants in other parts of India. To the extension of the system of occupancy tenancy the legislature then took strong exception on the ground that experience had shown in the North-Western Provinces and in Bengal the difficulty of preventing the evasion of the law by the landholders by the plan of constantly moving the tenants from one field to another and so preventing them from acquiring the rights of occupancy-tenants. As a matter of fact, the privileges which were conferred upon these classes of tenants were these. The absolute occupancy tenant was declared practically a proprietor. He was entitled to transfer his rights in his holding, without reference to anybody, to anyone he liked to assign them to. His rent was fixed, like the revenue of the proprietor, for the period of settlement. The occupancy tenant —the tenant of the next class—was endowed, for the first time in the history of the province, with the power of transfer, but subject to the approval and consent of the landlord if the transfer was to be made to a transferee who lay out of the family of the transferor. His rent was to be fixed for ten years by the Settlement-officer, and provision was made that if the landlord wished to enhance his rent during the period of settlement, it was to be subject to the approval and consent of the Revenue-officer. The ordinary tenant, the last grade of the three, was also, and for the first time in the history of the province, credited with the power of transfer of his holding ; but it was decided that his power of transfer should be entirely subject to the consent of the landlord. His rent was to be fixed for a period of seven years instead of ten years ; it might or might not be fixed by the Settlement-officer, unlike the occupancy-tenant, whose rent must be fixed ; but once fixed it was to remain unchanged for seven years. On the expiry of these seven years the landlord might enhance the rent by private contract ; but two curious provisions were inserted to protect the tenant from arbitrary and excessive enhancement. One of these was that if the tenant did not choose to pay the enhanced rent it was open to him to surrender the land and take compensation for improvements and further compensation for disturbance equal to seven times the yearly increase of rent demanded. The other provision was that he might protect himself by purchasing the right of occupancy at a sum equal to two and a half times the amount of his rental.

"It may interest the Council to know the proportion in which the different classes of tenants hold land in the Central Provinces. The absolute occupancy-tenants hold 17 per cent. ; the occupancy-tenants 44 per cent.; and the ordinary tenants 39 per cent.

"This law has been working for fourteen years. The enquiries of the Settlement-officers show that, as regards ordinary tenants, the hopes and anticipations of the legislature have not been realized, and the present law is a curious illustration of the fact that benevolent and well-meant measures, however benevolent and excellent they may be, often take a long time to reach the understanding of the people. For fourteen years this has been the law of the land which I have attempted to describe, and up to the present time the occupancy-tenant has not learnt the extent and value of its powers. It has never sunk into the mind of the ordinary tenant that he can protect himself by purchasing the right of occupancy or by claiming compensation for disturbance. The investigations which the Settlement-officers have been making for the last half dozen years have disclosed that in certain parts of the country landlords enhance by means which have been accepted by the ordinary tenant without complaint in the belief that he could not resist them and in the belief that there was no method by which he could protect himself from arbitrary enhancement. These excessive rents the Settlement-officers have been able throughout the country to reduce to what are now considered fair rents with the consent of the landholders.

"I think the greatest credit is due to the landholders that when the oppressiveness of the rent was brought to their notice they have accepted so generally the recommendations of the Settlement-officers; but it is not right that matters of this kind should rest entirely on the personal influence of the Settlement-officer. An authority should be given to him to reduce rent where it is excessive and to maintain a fair rent for the future. The proposals, therefore, of the Government of India now are, not that we shall depart from the principles of the Act of 1883, but that we shall develop them in a manner which is more consonant with the habits and knowledge of the people themselves; and the main part of the amendments in this direction which I have now to recommend to the Council are that the law should be so altered in regard to the ordinary tenant that the Settlement-officer shall be given the liberty to fix rent. The law, as it at present stands, evidently contemplates that he shall be authorized to raise rents where they are inadequate. It is necessary that he should be given authority also to confirm rents, where they are fair, and to reduce them when excessive.

"Further, we shall have to consider when the ordinary tenant's rent is to be enhanced during the period of settlement by what method it should be enhanced, and how we shall ensure that the enhancement shall be fair. The plan of compensation for disturbance which was adopted from the Irish Legislation of the time has not taken root, and the proposal of the Government of India is that, as in the case of occupancy-tenants so in the case of ordinary tenants, there shall be a reference, where there is a dispute as to the propriety of enhancement, to the Revenue-officer. This is a manner of settling disputes which has long been the subject of discussion in different parts of India, and there was at one time a little hesitation in my mind as to this plan. It has not proved practicable in the North-Western Provinces, but we are advised that in the circumstances of the Central Provinces it will be so. For one thing they have now in the Central Provinces in the course of the settlement operations obtained a remarkably complete register of all agricultural conditions—the character of the soil, the rates of rent and the castes of the different villagers; but besides that in the Central Provinces there will be in future a shorter period of settlement than has been customary in some other parts of India; and advantage has been taken of these shorter settlements to arrange a rotation by which no more than two or three districts will be under settlement in one season. The result of bringing all the province under settlement at one time has been a serious disintegration of the revenue establishments and of the ordinary administration, but by this new system of rotation there will be a constant series of districts under settlement and the Chief Commissioner anticipates no difficulty of bringing to the service of each district an adequate succession of Revenue-officers, specially trained by settlement work, for the duty of adjudicating upon questions of the fairness of rents. This is the main change which has been made in the tenant law of the Central Provinces.

"There are various minor points with which I do not think I need trouble the Council. For the most part they are small matters to be decided in Select Committee. I think it will be sufficient if, at this stage, I merely lay before the Council the general principles on which the amendment of the law has been undertaken.

"On the other side there is a very important alteration which has been made in the interest of the landlord. The Act of 1891 provided that when a landholder sold his village he was entitled to reserve for his subsistence the lands of his home farm; but it has been proved by the experience of the last fourteen years that the pressure of the usurer, into whose hands the right of the landholder was departing, was so great that the landholders, as a rule, were compelled to divest themselves of the privileges which the law intended them to retain. In village after village—and I myself made very careful enquiries in the matter when I was in the Central Provinces—the landholder has been sold out and left absolutely without the means of subsistence. We propose in the Bill, which I have the honour to place on the table, to prevent the possibility of the landholder losing his home farm in future, and, by formally rendering void any contracts to the contrary, to preserve to him the means of subsistence.

"Lastly, and one of the most important principles of the Bill, is the proposal that we shall remove from the tenants of the occupancy and ordinary class those powers of alienations of their holdings which we gave them for the first time in 1883. I have said that as a body neither class of tenants has realised the privileges given to them by the Act of that year. It is convenient that it is so because the circumstance removes one of the greatest difficulties which the Government must face, should it undertake an interference with any established kind of usage. In the latest returns which I have received as to the extent to which these powers have been taken advantage of, I find that in the year 1893 only one per cent. of the area in occupancy-tenancies was mortgaged or sold and less than half per cent. in the class of ordinary tenancies, and in ordinary tenancies transfers were practically limited to two out of the eighteen districts; but, in the class of absolute occupancy-tenant, which has from ancestral times remarkable and peculiar privileges, the rate of transfer has been excessive. In that class of tenancy, which is the most valuable and the most important in some respects of all, the rate of progress was such that if it were maintained the absolute occupancy-tenant will be wiped off the register in quarter of a century. I do not think that that rate of progress will be maintained. They have learnt wisdom from the experience of the past. They have learnt more and more the value of their holdings and their position; and I have the anticipation from all the experience I have obtained that that rate of progress will diminish, but it is a warning to us. The powers of alienation were conferred on the occupancy-tenant and the ordinary tenant of the Central Provinces in the anticipation that a measure of the kind would enable the application of a larger capital to agriculture. As far as experience has gone these anticipations have not been realised, and it is further a matter of experience that tenants who have not these proprietary powers are still able to obtain all the capital which is really necessary for the working of their fields. The occupancy-tenant in the North-Western Provinces has no such power; nevertheless, there is no part of India in which the agriculture has been finer and more successful than it has been in the North-Western Provinces. In the Central Provinces large areas of waste have been given over by Government on lease to cultivators from whom all powers of alienation have been religiously withheld. The cultivators of these raiyatwari tracts in the Central Provinces are quite as persevering and quite as successful in agriculture as the occupancy-tenants.

"The Government of India, therefore, propose in this matter to retrace their steps, and, with the entire approval of every officer who has been consulted in the matter, the amendments have been prepared which I have now to propose that the power of alienation which the occupancy and ordinary tenants now possess shall for the future be withdrawn.

"There is in this connection a very difficult and important question—the question of sub-leases. A hereditary cultivator may die leaving a widow and an infant son. The widow and the infant son are unable to carry on the cultivation. There must be some one in possession of the holding who can get the agriculture carried on. But the danger of every plan of sub-leases has been recognized throughout these discussions. If you admit a sub-lease, you admit a hold on the soil. What is called a sub-lease to the Revenue-officer may be in effect a mortgage of the holding, and there is the extreme danger that if you admit a plan of sub-lease at all your intention of withdrawing the power of alienation may be altogether frustrated. Nevertheless, one cannot but admit that there are circumstances in which sub-leases are essential, and not only essential but just, and the only solution of this very difficult problem at which we have been able to arrive is that a sub-lease should only be permissible for a term not exceeding one year and renewable, but subject to the condition that at the end of any single year it may be cancelled. This is the only adjustment we have been able to make to meet the necessities of a hereditary tenure without opening too wide the entrance for secret transfers.

"The sum total of our proposed amendments is not very large, although some of them are of high importance, but they follow on amendments which were passed in 1889, and, on the advice of the Legislative Department, we have decided to embody all in a single consolidated Act, instead of bringing in a mere amending Bill.

"Now, my Lord, I think I have explained to the Council as briefly as was consistent with clearness the circumstances in which we have made our proposals and the extent of the proposals themselves. They are designed on the one hand to protect the tenant from excessive enhancement, and on the other to protect the landholders from absolute ruin in those cases in which improvidence or misfortune compel them to part with their lands. The ordinary tenant in the Central Provinces is already a hereditary tenant. He is already protected by the law in name. The proposal is that the protection which he shall receive in future shall be made by a method which is within his knowledge and consistent with the customs of his country. The protection is one which we have already extended to occupancy tenants, and it is a simple extension to make it include ordinary tenants. If our proposals are carried—as I hope they may be—we shall insure that ordinary tenants shall be started fair by the fixation of their rents at settlement, and that rents which are enhanced in the future are maintained within fair limits; and if our proposals as to the withdrawal of the power of alienation are carried out, we shall have the confident hope that the holdings of the tenants in the Central Provinces shall be, what they were intended to be, hereditary in the occupation of the agricultural families to whom they belong.

"The experience of the last fourteen years has disclosed certain weaknesses in the Act of 1883. Weaknesses are discovered and brought to light in the course of time in every Act of every legislature. These weaknesses we hope now to remedy. It is impossible to predict anything in legislation, but I venture to hope, on the basis of the experience of fourteen years which we are now applying, that there will be no further necessity for legislation in regard to the tenants in the Central Provinces for at least another generation. It must be the earnest wish of us all that a region which is still in the throes of unparalleled and terrible disaster shall now emerge into a new era of agricultural prosperity and peace."

CENTRAL PROVINCES LAND REVENUE ACT (1881) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN moved for leave to introduce a Bill to further amend the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1881.

He said:—"These amendments are few. There are only two of them of any importance. One of them contains that amendment of the law as to the home farm of land-owners to which I have referred in my remarks on the Tenancy Bill. The other one is for the improvement of the law for the protection of a class of people known to the law in the Central Provinces as thékádars. Thékádars are people who are employed by owners of land to bring land under cultivation under various conditions and sometimes under special contracts. But where there was no special contract—and there are a very great number of cases where there is no special contract—it has been necessary to make some provision for these thékádars when they are ejected. In some cases they have brought the whole of the land under cultivation at the expenditure of large capital. They have made tanks for the irrigation of the fields; they have made wells for the necessities of the village; they have brought at their own expense a large number of tenants and labourers to commence and carry on the agriculture of the tract. Of course the conditions under which agriculture has been established vary from village to village; and the proposals which are included in the Bill which I now hope to introduce give a larger authority to the Chief Commissioner than he possesses at present to arrange the terms that shall be made for the compensation of these people, if they are ejected, according to the circumstances of the case. These are the only provisions which it is necessary for me to explain to the Council at this stage."

RESOLUTION.

The four Statements appended to this Resolution contain the figures returned from the various Provinces regarding the number of human beings and cattle killed by wild animals and snakes, the number of wild animals and snakes destroyed and the amount of rewards paid for their destruction, and the number of licenses issued in Form XI under the Indian Arms Act, 1878, free of charge, for the destruction of wild animals or protection of crops. The figures for the year under report (1896) are compared in the Statements with the corresponding figures for the preceding two years.

2. The following table shows the loss of human life caused by wild animals and snakes during the last three years:

	1894.		1895.		1896.
	By wild animals.	By snakes.	By wild animals.	By snakes.	By wild animals.	By snakes.
Madras	279	1,612	277	1,640	295	1,869
Bombay	40	1,233	46	1,286	51	1,109
Bengal	1,693	9,874	1,603	9,157	1,657	9,250
North-Western Provinces and Oudh ...	279	5,689	530	6,207	642	5,695
Punjab	40	1,037	54	1,085	62	962
Central Provinces	221	1,087	291	1,279	361	1,133
Burma	156	567	110	832	129	619
Assam	145	160	168	182	113	154
Coorg	1	...	1	...	1	...
Hyderabad Assigned Districts ...	37	231	23	277	16	172
Ajmere-Merwara	2	66	1	51	8	37
TOTAL ...	2,893	21,356	3,104	22,086	3,335	21,000

The most striking circumstance in connection with the figures is that they vary so slightly from year to year, and that two-thirds of the mortality caused by both wild animals and snakes are reported from the provinces of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

3. The mortality from wild animals in 1896 was larger than in the previous two years. This increase is chiefly due to a large rise in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and the Central Provinces. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh 417 deaths are ascribed to wolves as compared with 246 in 1895 and 106 in 1894, and of the number, 306 occurred in the Rohilkhand (231) and Allahabad (75) Divisions. In spite of the higher scale of rewards sanctioned in the Moradabad District of the Rohilkhand Division, where deaths caused by wolves were the largest, only two wolves are reported to have been killed. The Local Government is devoting special attention to the destruction of these pests in this tract and has approved a proposal to employ a colony of Haburahs to exterminate these animals. The Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that in the event of this proving unsuccessful, a wolf hunt must be organized on a large scale. The increase of the reward has had a good effect in reducing the mortality caused by wolves in the Meerut Division from 74 to 15. In the Central Provinces the number of persons killed by tigers and "other animals" (mostly jackals) rose in 1896 to 172 and 105, respectively, from 102 and 63 in 1894, and 142 and 71 in 1895. In explanation of this large increase it is suggested that owing to the famine the jungles were more frequented than usual. Bengal also shews a large rise in the deaths caused by tigers and hyenas; 418 persons being returned (nearly half the number from the Chota Nagpur Division) as killed by the former compared with 373 in 1894 and 385 in 1895, and 60 by the latter against 19 and 14 in those years. The increase under the head of tigers is mainly due to a large rise in the 24-Parganas and Khulna Districts of the Presidency Division and in the Angul tract of the Orissa Division. No explanation of the increase in the 24-Parganas has been suggested by the local officers; but the Government of Bengal states that it is probably due to the cause assigned for the increase in Khulna, namely, that many more of the inhabitants had recourse to the Sundarbans to cut wood and reclaim waste lands, owing to the scarcity and deficient rainfall. In the Orissa Division the increase is due to a man-eating tiger which is said to have killed 32 persons in Angul. The Local Government has offered a suitable reward for the destruction of this beast. Of the 60 deaths for which hyenas are reported to be responsible 32 are returned from the Darbhanga District, where, the Commissioner suggests, the animals referred to were probably wolves. The variations in the figures for the other Provinces are not noticeable except those for Assam where the total number of persons killed fell from 168 in 1895 to 113 in the year under review, and the number of deaths caused by tigers from 88 to 46. The Provinces in which the loss of life from all causes was highest in proportion to population were the Central Provinces, Bengal, Assam, Burma and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh; the mortality in these Provinces being one in 29,873, one in 43,058, one in 48,467, one in 58,958 and one in 73,061, respectively. Taking the whole of British India together one person was killed among every 66,319 against one in every 71,051 in 1895, and one in every 76,436 in 1894.

4. Twenty-one thousand persons are reported to have met their deaths from snake-bite in 1896 as compared with 22,086 in 1895 and 21,556 in 1894. As in previous years the largest number of deaths occurred in Bengal and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. In Bengal the increase in the number of deaths under this head over those in 1895 from 9,157 to 9,250 is very small. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh where, as noticed in the last Resolution, deaths from this cause had been continuously on the increase since 1892, the return of the year 1896 shows that the number has fallen from 6,297 in 1895 to 5,695. The decrease is attributed to the deficient rainfall during the past year, in consequence of which snakes were not driven to such an extent from their holes and there was less undergrowth to afford cover for them in the neighbourhood of village sites. It is observed that there has been a continuous increase in the mortality from snake-bite in the Madras Presidency as follows:—in 1892, 1,455; in 1893, 1,498; in 1894, 1,612; in 1895, 1,640; in 1896, 1,869. The Local Government adopted measures for the removal of noxious vegetation and rank undergrowth; these measures were confined to a limited area and they had no practical effect upon the loss of human life; at the same time there was a large falling off in the number of cattle killed by snakes, and it is impossible to draw any definite inference from the returns. In the Hyderabad Assigned Districts the number of persons killed by poisonous snakes fell from 277 in 1895 to 172 in 1896, and the Commissioner expresses the hope that the mortality may be still further reduced by the measures which are being taken to improve village sanitation by the removal of débris and rank vegetation.

5. The number of cattle reported to have been destroyed by wild animals and snakes is compared with the previous two years' figures in the following statement:

Total ...	91,919	4,877	93,978	6,129	81,397	7,143

The number of cattle reported as destroyed by wild animals in Bengal continues higher, than elsewhere, but it has fallen off from 38,500 in 1895 to 30,595 in 1896. The decrease, however, is ascribed in part to orders of the Local Government passed last year directing that kids and lambs and other animals not included within the definition of cattle should be excluded from the returns. The noticeable features of the year are that in Madras, Bengal, the Central Provinces, Assam, Coorg, the Hyderabad Assigned Districts and Ajmere-Merwara the mortality caused by wild animals among cattle decreased; while in Bombay, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and Burma, it increased. Except in Bengal, Burma and Assam the leopard is reported to be far more destructive to cattle than the tiger. The number of cattle killed by snakes has risen in Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and Burma, and has fallen in Madras and Assam. The mortality under this head is lowest in Bombay and the Punjab, being 53 and 26 respectively.

6. The number of wild animals returned as destroyed is 18,084 as compared with 14,009 in 1894, and 15,543 in 1895; the total amount of rewards paid was Rs. 1,13,690 against Rs. 1,04,932 and 1,03,615 in those years. There was a sensible increase in the number of tigers, leopards and bears for whose destruction rewards were paid. The respective numbers were 1,502 tigers, 4,711 leopards, and 1,772 bears. The number of wolves destroyed in 1896 was 2,877, slightly fewer than in 1895 but more than in 1894. More tigers were destroyed in Bengal, the Central Provinces and Assam, where 361, 323 and 353 were killed, respectively, at an expenditure of Rs. 6,813, 15,260 and 7,024, than elsewhere.

7. The number of snakes destroyed is returned as 122,360 compared with 131,726 in the preceding year and the amount of reward paid for their destruction was Rs. 5,506 against Rs. 16,415. The great decrease in the amount of rewards paid for killing snakes is due to the orders issued by the Government of Bengal and the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, directing that the payment of rewards for the destruction of snakes, should be discontinued except in Municipalities. The Governments of the Punjab and Assam have also spent less on this account than in the preceding year.

The returns show a corresponding decrease in the number of snakes destroyed in all the four Provinces mentioned above. The Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces observes that "the amount spent in this way fell from Rs. 6,436 to Rs. 1,286. A similar decrease is shown in the number of snakes killed, but this in no way corresponds to the facts. Probably many hundreds were killed by persons who did not report having done so. The discontinuance of the reward has in no way affected the number of deaths from snake-bite, which are 146 fewer than in the previous year when it was given." The last remark applies more or less to the other three Provinces, and it is clear that in the circumstances no inference can be drawn from a decrease in the reported number of snakes destroyed. These figures in fact are not of much value: Bombay shows a very large increase (12,421 to 42,148) and Burma a large decrease (13,971 to 7,150): no rewards are paid from Provincial revenues in Bombay for destruction of snakes, and of the 42,148 above mentioned no less than 35,932 were in the Ratnagiri District, while the Government of Burma states that many harmless snakes are no doubt included in some years in the returns, and that no deductions of any value can be drawn from them.

8. The number of licenses issued in Form XI under the Indian Arms Act, 1878, free of cost, for the purpose of destroying wild animals or of protection of crops was 13,503 against 16,688 in the previous year. The total, including the number of licenses granted for this purpose which were in force from previous years, amounted to 58,594 in 1896 against 66,161 in 1895. In Madras the number of licenses granted during the year was 681 as compared with 1,856 and the total number of licenses in force 9,197 against 12,937. The decrease occurs almost wholly in South Canara and is due to 2,893 licenses issued in 1891 having lapsed in 1896, and to the falling off in the number of fresh licenses issued during the year under report. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh the number of licenses granted rose from 2,299 to 3,020, but the total number in force was less than in each of the previous two years, being 12,057 against 15,035 in 1894 and 13,360 in 1895. In the Punjab the number of licenses has again fallen. As observed last year, the number of licenses issued in this form is comparatively small in Bengal and they have been continuously decreasing during the last three years. It appears, however, that steps are now being taken to grant them somewhat more freely in the Rajshahi Division, and the Commissioner of Dacca says that they are not much required as licenses in Form VIII are freely granted. The Government of the Punjab points out that wild beasts are getting scarcer in the Punjab year by year and that there is consequently less demand for shooting licenses for purely protective purposes. The mortality in the Province from wild animals is very small.

ORDER—Ordered that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to Local Governments* and Administrations, and that it be published in the Gazette of India for general information, also that a copy be forwarded to the Foreign Department and the Director General of Statistics.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the Week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, October 2nd, 1897.

The weather changes which have occurred during the past week have been interesting. On Sunday, September 26th, the storm which had formed the principal feature in the weather of the previous week was passing through the west of the North-West Provinces. On the 27th it had reached the hills and filled up, and the barometric recovery which subsequently set in resulted in the development of very uniform pressures throughout the Indian region. These uniform pressures and quiet weather lasted until September 30th, but during this period a cyclonic storm had been quietly developing over the Bay of Bengal. On October 1st the centre of the storm lay close to the North Madras Coast between Gopalpur and Vizagapatam. At that time the disturbance was slight, the winds were generally light or moderate and the sea was slight or smooth, and it appeared as though the storm was about to pass inland as a very unimportant disturbance. The storm did not, however, cross the coast, but remained steadily in the position described above while steadily increasing in intensity. On the last day of the week the barometer read about one-quarter of an inch below the normal at Vizagapatam, and the wind was blowing a gale at Gopalpur. As a consequence of these changes the weather was rainy in Upper India on the first day of the week due to the first storm, and over the Peninsula and the Bay area from the 30th September onward due to the second storm. The mean temperature agreed with this distribution of rainfall. It was below the normal average over Madras throughout the week and below the normal in Upper India during the first few days of the week.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, September 26th.—The storm which had been traced to the Central Provinces at the close of the previous week had reached the west of the North-West Provinces, where, as well as over Upper India generally, it was occasioning a cyclonic circulation of the winds, overcast, squally weather and heavy continuous rain. A small depression was also shown over Kathiawar, where also the winds were cyclonic and the weather showery. In other parts of the country the weather was fair to showery. The mean temperature was high in Burma and Bengal, but was generally lower than usual elsewhere—more particularly over the Indus Valley, the Upper Assam Valley and the Madras Coast.

Monday, September 27th.—Both the depressions noticed on the preceding day had disappeared and the barometer had risen—more particularly over North-West India. Pressure was uniform generally with light to moderate variable winds. Very general rain had fallen over the southern half of the Peninsula, but elsewhere the weather was fair with occasional passing showers. The mean temperature remained high over Burma and Bengal and generally low elsewhere, but in the Indus Valley a rapid rise had set in and the heat had risen to above the normal.

Tuesday, September 28th.—There had been no change of importance. Pressure remained uniform throughout the Indian region as is normally the case at this season, and the winds were variable and generally light or moderate. There had been very little rain over Upper Burma, Lower Bengal and North-West India, but elsewhere the weather had been showery and at some of the southern stations the amounts had been moderately heavy.

Wednesday, September 29th.—The barometric changes had again been slight. In most parts of the Indian region the changes had been unimportant, but around the Bay area they had been such as to produce moderate gradients in the south and east and to emphasise the low pressure area lying over the Bay. The winds were light and variable generally, but around the Bay a well marked, though feeble, cyclonic circulation had been established. The rise of temperature noticed over the Indus Valley had extended and the heat was generally greater than usual, except over Madras. The weather had again been showery over the Peninsula and generally fair elsewhere.

Thursday, September 30th.—The barometric changes had again been generally slight or small, but while they had been upward over the land area they had been downward over the west of the Bay, so that there had been a further intensification of the depression area over the Bay which had now become the most marked feature of the weather. The cyclonic circulation around the Bay was now complete and at Diamond Island a gale was blowing. In other parts of the Indian region the winds showed no change. Fairly general rain had fallen over Burma, the Peninsula and North Bombay, the amounts in some instances being heavy. The heat was less than usual over Lower Burma, Assam, East Bengal and Madras. In North-West India, on the contrary, the heat was excessive.

Friday, October 1st.—Pressure had increased over Burma, the east, centre and south of the Bay and south of the Peninsula. Elsewhere it had decreased, and the depression which had been developing over the Bay had reached Ganjam, where the barometric fall had been brisk. Cyclonic winds prevailed around the Bay, but, except at Diamond Island and Gopalpur, the force was moderate. Rain had been general over Burma, Assam, Lower Bengal and the Peninsula. At several of the more southern stations the fall had been heavy. The distribution of the mean temperature with respect to the normal was the same as on the preceding day.

Saturday, October 2nd.—The barometer had risen slightly over Burma, the south of the Peninsula, the Punjab and Sind and had fallen elsewhere. The fall had been rapid over North Madras, and the cyclonic storm lying between Vizagapatam and Gopalpur had suddenly intensified considerably. Except in the extreme north-west the winds were influenced by the storm and blew from cyclonic directions, while at Gopalpur the force was strong to a gale. The heat was less than usual in Lower Burma and Madras and excessive elsewhere. Rain had fallen generally over the Peninsula and North-East India, the amounts at several stations being considerable. In other places the weather had been fine.

Temperature.—The mean temperature has agreed closely with the distribution of rainfall. In Madras rain has fallen almost daily, and the mean temperature throughout the week has been low. In Upper India heavy rain fell during the first day of the week, and the heat in the Punjab and parts of the North-West Provinces, of Sind and of Rajputana was lower than usual at the beginning of the week. Subsequently as the influence of this rainfall passed away the temperature rose to above the normal. In Bengal, Bombay and Central India the heat has been steadily, though slightly, excessive.

The following table gives the temperature data for the week:

Province.	September 1897.					October 1897.		Mean variation of week.

The mean temperature of the whole country exceeded the normal on each day of the week, except the 26th and 27th September, but the excess was small on the 28th and 29th and only about 1½° on the following days. The provincial variations show that the temperature for the week had been lower than usual in Madras, about normal in the North-West Provinces, the Punjab, Bombay and Central India and between 1° and 2° above in the remaining provinces.

The following are the highest maximum temperatures recorded on each day :

September	26th	99°·1 at	Bickaneer.
„	28th	103°·4 „	„
„	29th	105°·7 „	Dera Ismail Khan.
October	1st	106°·4 „	„
„	2nd	107°·4 „	„

There was thus a steady rise in the maximum temperature, as the influence of the rainfall in the north-west in the early part of the week disappeared.

Rain.—The rainfall records of the week under review show that, as for some weeks past, the rainfall over India has been extensive and widespread. One division—viz., the Baluchistan Hills—received no rain during the week, and two divisions—viz., the Central Punjab and the West Punjab—had less than one-tenth of an inch of rain during the week. With these exceptions effective rain was received throughout the whole country. In Burma and Assam the rain fell more or less on each day of the week, though the fall was perhaps most general and heaviest on October 2nd. In Bengal the showers occurred principally on the two first and two last days of the week, the three intervening days exhibiting relatively fair weather. In Bihar most of the rain fell on the 1st and 2nd of October, while in the North-West Provinces and Oudh all the rain fell on September the 26th and 27th and in the Punjab on the 26th only. Over the Peninsula rain was of daily occurrence, while over the central parts of the country the fall occurred mainly during the first three days.

The table at the close of the summary shows that in thirty of the rainfall divisions the rain of the week under review was heavier than usual, in twenty-five it was lighter, while in one—viz., Baluchistan—no rain is expected and none fell. The region over which the rainfall was abnormally light included all the Burma divisions, except deltaic Burma, all the Bengal and Assam divisions, except the Brahmaputra Valley, the south, central and west divisions of the Punjab and all the Central Provinces divisions. In all other divisions the rainfall was in excess. The principal cases of deficiency were over 3 inches in the Assam Hills and over one inch in Tenasserim, Arakan, East Bengal, Cachar, Central Bengal, North Bihar and the North-West Provinces (East and East Submontane). The principal instances of excess were 4·15 inches in the East Coast [North (a)], 3·46 inches in the North-West Provinces (Hills), 3 inches in South-Central Madras and over 2 inches in the west and west submontane divisions of the North-West Provinces and the East Coast (North). The excess of rain was hence not only more extensive, but more marked than the deficiency of rain. The amount of the effective rain varied from 5·35 inches in the East Coast [North (a)], 4·27 inches in Madras (South-Central), 4·07 inches in the Konkan and 4·01 inches in Malabar, to 0·17 inch in the east of the North-West Provinces.

In the Deccan districts, both of Madras and Bombay, the rainfall was everywhere excessive, and in some districts—as for example, Bijapur, Sholapur, Kolhapur, Bellary and Anantapur—the excess was between 2 inches and 4 inches.

The three concluding columns of the table, exhibiting the state of the seasonal rainfall, show that the monsoon rainfall up to date has been excessive by 20 per cent. or more of the normal in fifteen of the rainfall divisions, been in defect by 20 per cent. or more of the normal in six of the divisions and been about the average in thirty-five divisions. Last week the numbers were seventeen divisions showing an excess fall, five a deficient fall and thirty-five a normal rainfall. There has hence been very little change.

The following are the principal large totals recorded during the week under review :

Burma	Kyaikto (Thatôn)	12·98 inches.

5. The consignee of the merchandise at the first port of arrival must present at the custom house the invoice above described, with a bill of lading and an entry in duplicate made out upon the special form to be prescribed for this purpose by the Treasury Department, which will show the name of the foreign shipper or owner, the name of the importing vessel, the marks and numbers of the packages, with a statement of the nature of their contents and of their foreign value, as declared in the invoice. The entry must also indicate the bonded route by which the goods are to be transported to Omaha, and must be signed by the consignee. No other declaration will be required. The consolidation of different shipments on one entry will not be allowed; such practice having obtained in regard to previous expositions has proved to be a fruitful source of confusion. Each entry will comprise, therefore, the consignment a single exhibit only. The goods will be consigned on the customs entry, to "Surveyor of Customs, Omaha," and there need be no computation of duties upon this entry, but the amount charged against the bond of the transportation company shall be double the invoice value.

6. The collector will thereupon issue a special permit bearing the words "Omaha Exposition," authorizing the transfer of the goods, from the ship to the bonded railroad for transportation to Omaha, and will record and file one of the entries in his office, and send the other, by mail, with the invoice, to the surveyor at Omaha.

7. The permit will be taken by the agent or consignee to the inspector on board the importing vessel, who will thereupon send the goods, by a cartman duly licensed, to be delivered under the supervision of a customs officer to the transportation company.

8. The consignee will also prepare a manifest of the goods, which, after being duly certified, will be handed to the conductor of the car containing the same, and a duplicate copy must be sent by mail to the surveyor of customs at Omaha. Upon the arrival at Omaha of any car containing such articles the conductor or agent of the railroad company will report such arrival by the presentation of the manifest to the customs officer designated to receive it, who shall compare the same with the copy received by mail, and superintend the opening of the car, taking care to identify the packages by marks and numbers, as described in the manifest.

9. These regulations will also apply to goods sent to the Exposition from foreign contiguous territory. All articles destined for the Exposition arriving from Canada or Mexico, on through cars; under consular seal, must be consigned by the foreign shipper to the "Surveyor of Customs at Omaha."

10. The buildings and spaces set apart for the purposes of the Exposition are constituted "constructive bonded warehouses and yards," and all foreign articles placed therein under the supervision of the customs officers, and which have been specially imported for exhibition therein, will be treated the same as merchandise in bond. No warehouse entry will be required at Omaha in order to obtain entrance for such goods, but the latter will be kept under customs supervision, in accordance with the general regulations governing merchandise in bonded warehouses.

11. Under the special act of Congress establishing the Trans-mississippi and International Exposition, sales are permitted during its continuance, but delivery of goods sold is to be withheld until the close of the Fair. The enforcement of this latter restriction devolves properly upon the Exposition authorities, who being in control of the local police, are responsible for the protection of the exhibits. When the duties have been received by the surveyor upon the merchandise contained in any exhibit, he will regard such exhibit as released from customs control, except so far as concerns the supervision necessary to secure export with refund of duty.

12. At the close of the Exposition all goods intended for exportation will be transported in bond to the seaboard or exterior port, and exported therefrom under the general regulations for immediate export in bond, as modified by special regulations to be in due time provided.

13. Any merchandise imported by an exhibitor in excess of the articles duly installed as exhibits will be placed and retained in a storage warehouse at the expense of the importer until duly entered for payment of duty or exportation. Withdrawals of merchandise stored under these conditions, if made for the purpose of placing the same within the Exposition, will be treated under the provisions for entry on arrival at first port of entry, and no duty will be required to be paid. Such merchandise must be delivered at the Exposition in charge of a customs officer.

Goods which have been imported by exhibitors in excess of those used as exhibits, and stored on their account, may be withdrawn at any time for consumption on payment of duty and charges. Whenever duty-paid goods of this class shall be exported without having left the custody of the surveyor, the duty paid thereon, less 1 per cent. will be refunded, provided the duty paid on any such exported package shall have amounted to $50. Exhibits entered for exportation without payment of duty are not subject to appraisement.

14. Articles brought by proprietors or managers of theatrical exhibitions for temporary use may be entered free of duty upon the filing of satisfactory bonds for their expert within six months after such importation, as provided for in paragraph 596 of the tariff act.

15. It is to be distinctly understood that the United States is not liable for any loss casualty, or injury to the merchandise imported as exhibits at the Expositon, nor for any debt, contract, or expense incident to the transportation, care, or treatment of such merchandise.

16. All entries, invoices, permits, abstracts, and reports relating to merchandise imported under the act of June 10, 1896, must be separately made, and must be stamped with the words "Omaha Trans-mississippi and International Exposition."

17. Additional special regulations will be provided in due time covering the withdrawal of exhibits for consumption, transportation or exportation at the close of the Exposition.

18. The privileges granted by virtue of these regulations are intended solely for the benefit of exhibitors at the Omaha Trans-mississippi and International Exposition, and with the view of relieving them, so far as paracticable, of delays and vexations in connection with the customs business pertaining to their importations.

Any attempt to take advantage of these regulations in order to evade the tariff laws of the United States will subject the offender to all the penalties prescribed by those laws including confiscation of goods and fine and imprisonment.

No. 3, "Despatches—Malakand Field Force," dated Camp Mingaora, 20th August 1897.

From—MAJOR-GENERAL SIR B. BLOOD, K.C.B., Commanding Malakand Field Force,

To The Adjutant-General in India.

I have the honour to submit the following report on the fighting which took place at Chakdarra Fort between the 26th July and the 2nd August 1897, when the place was relieved and the enemy dispersed by the force commanded by Brigadier-General W. H. Meiklejohn, C.B., C.M.G., who was then acting under my orders.

2. On the 26th July 1897 the garrison consisted of Lieutenant H. B. Rattray, 45th Sikhs, Commanding, Lieutenant J. L. Wheatley and 2 companies of the same regiment, and 25 sabres, 11th Bengal Lancers; the total strength being 3 British officers (including a medical officer), 2 British non-commissioned officers, 3 Native officers and 213 other ranks, besides a few medical and commissariat details. Lieutenant A. B. Minchin, 25th Punjab Infantry, Assistant Political Agent, was also present in the Fort on this date and throughout the subsequent period under reference.

3. 26th July.—The first intimation of disturbance which reached the garrison was brought in on the evening of the 26th July by Havildar Gurdit Singh, 45th Sikhs, who was out surveying that day. He came in on a mule and reported that the tribes were rising and that some of them had taken from him a pair of binoculars, a prismatic compass and Rs. 50. Lieutenant Rattray was playing polo at Khar at this time, but on being warned he at once rode back to Chakdarra and on arrival made all necessary preparations for the defence of the Fort, which was vigorously attacked three times between 10-15 P.M. and 4 A.M. that night; the attacks in all cases being easily repulsed. In one of these attacks the enemy used ladders taken from the civil hospital, a solid building which stood close outside the walls of the Fort, and was therefore very useful to the enemy throughout their operations.

4. 27th July.—On the morning of the 27th July Captain H. Wright, 11th Bengal Lancers, with 40 sabres of his regiment, rode through the enemy from the Malakand, and in doing so, showed very marked gallantry and judgment. At the Amandara Pass he was strongly opposed, and only succeeded in getting through the enemy by a combination of quick and sound decision with determined resolution which was in the highest degree creditable to him. Two of his men were wounded during his ride, but were brought safely into Chakdarra. Captain D. Baker, Transport Officer, Malakand Brigade, also arrived with Captain Wright.

5. On arrival Captain Wright assumed command of the Fort, and his detachment, with the other men of his regiment already there, took over and most ably conducted throughout the siege the defence of the outer enclosure in which the horses and transport animals were accommodated.

6. On the forenoon of the 27th the enemy made several determined advances towards the walls of the Fort, but were repulsed with heavy loss. By this time sangars had been built round the Signal Tower and a heavy fire from them was kept up upon it. As signalling could only be done from the open outside the tower, it became practically impossible, and as the telegraph line had been destroyed, communication with the Malakand was cut off. There was also considerable difficulty about throwing food and water into the the Signal Tower, but nevertheless on the 27th, with the help of the maxims and 9-pounder in the Fort, several days' provisions were put in, together with six additional men and as much water as possible; and in the same way daily supplies of water were afterwards sent in until the 1st August, when the enemy succeeded in cutting off all access to the Tower.

7. On the night of the 27th the enemy made two more attacks which were repulsed with heavy loss to them. In the second of these attacks, they brought up ladders and attempted to escalade the walls of the Fort at the north-east corner. On this and subsequent days, Captain Baker made himself most useful by superintending arrangements for giving increased cover, which undoubtedly saved many casualties.

8. 28th July.—On the 28th July the enemy made vigorous attacks between 5-30 P.M. and dawn next morning, chiefly against the east side of the cavalry enclosure. They were invariably beaten off with heavy loss.

9. 29th July.—On the 29th July the enemy were seen approaching at 3 P.M. in largely increased numbers with ladders and bundles of grass, and directed their chief efforts to the capture of the Signal Tower. They continued their efforts against the Tower till 8 P.M. without success, and next morning some 50 of their corpses were counted outside it.

10. 30th July.—On the 30th July the garrison had a comparatively easy time, and obtained some much needed rest, as the enemy did not advance till about 7 P.M. and then without much vigour.

11. 31st July.—On the 31st July the enemy kept quiet till about 4-30 P.M., when they advanced against the north-east corner of the Fort, but suffered severely from the fire of the 9-pounder and maxims, finally retiring at 11 P.M. to Chakdarra village.

12. 1st August.—On the 1st August the difficulties of the garrison greatly increased, the enemy appearing in far larger numbers with more rifles. During the previous night they had occupied and loopholed the civil hospital already mentioned, and from thence they completely commanded the cavalry enclosure and rendered moving about there very dangerous. They also held the ridge some 150 yards from the Fort to the north-west, thus cutting off all communication with

RETURNS OF ACCIDENTS ON INDIAN RAILWAYS FOR THE THREE MONTHS ENDING WITH THE 31st MARCH 1897.

No. 419 R. Stat., dated Simla, the 24th September 1897.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Public Works Department.

Read again—

Government of India order No. 10 R. Stat., dated the 16th January 1896.

Government of India order No. 469 R. Stat., dated the 25th November 1896.

Read also—

The following note by the Director General of Railways, No. 350 Stat., dated the 17th September 1897, with abstract returns of accidents to trains, etc., on the open lines of railway in India for the three months ending with the 31st March 1897.

I.—Accidents to trains, rolling stock, permanent-way, etc.

Accidents to trains, rolling stock, permanent-way, etc., during the three months ending with the 31st March 1897, as shown under abstract No. 4, on pages 2392 and 2393 of the accompanying returns, caused the death of 8 and injury to 45 persons. The table below shows that, while the number of persons killed and injured was somewhat above the average (due mainly to the accident at Gholvad station, on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India railway, on the 9th January 1897, in which 5 persons were killed and 24 injured), the total number of accidents was considerably below the average.

The forms of accident returns having been revised with effect from the 1st January 1895, under the orders in Government of India Circular No. 7 Railway, dated the 19th April 1895, the averages with which comparison is made are those of the corresponding periods of 1895 and 1896 only. From the year 1900 the averages will be those of the corresponding periods of the previous five years.

2. The following table compares the variations in the mean mileage worked, the train-mileage and the number of accidents with the average, and shows that, notwithstanding an increase of 5·53 per cent. in the mean mileage worked and of 1·10 per cent. in the train-mileage run during the three months ending with the 31st March 1897, the number of accidents decreased by 117 or 10·53 per cent. as compared with the average of the corresponding periods of the two previous years :

3. The following table, showing the increase and decrease of accidents of different classes on the standard and metre gauge lines, brings out the fact that, although the general total showed a decrease, there were large variations in the number of accidents of different classes, as compared with the average of the corresponding periods of the two previous years :

It will be observed from the foregoing that, except the head "Trains running over cattle on the line," all the other heads showed decreases.

4. The number of cattle accidents was largest on the Southern Mahratta railway, viz., 64; next to that line comes the South Indian railway with 52, then the East Indian railway with 35, the Madras railway with 33, the Rajputana-Malwa railway with 31, and the Eastern Bengal State railway (standard gauge) with 30. This is believed to be, to some extent, due to a larger number of animals having strayed or been driven on to railway land for grazing purposes, owing to the scarcity of fodder due to the prevailing drought.

In relation to the train-mileage run, the highest proportion was on the Cooch Behar railway, which gave an average of 1 accident in 1,894 train-miles run; the Assam-Bengal railway coming next with an average of 1 in 4,961; then the Bengal Dooars, the Morvi, the Jorhát, and the Jodhpore-Bickaneer railways with averages of 1 in 6,912, 1 in 8,646, 1 in 9,794, and 1 in 10,515, respectively. The lowest proportion was on the Bengal and North-Western railway, viz., 1 in 234,949 train-miles run, the Great Indian Peninsula railway coming next with 1 in 216,396, then the East Indian railway with 1 in 93,985, the North Western State railway with 1 in 87,662, the Burma railways with 1 in 61,535, and the Oudh and Rohilkhand State railway with 1 in 58,121.

5. Taking the total number of accidents to trains, rolling stock, permanent-way, etc., the proportion of accidents to train-mileage run was highest on the Jorhát State railway, on which 1 accident occurred on an average in 1,632 train-miles; next to that line comes the Cooch Behar railway, with 1 accident in 1,894 train-miles; then the Assam-Bengal, the Morvi, the Bengal Dooars and the Rohilkund and Kumaon (including the Lucknow-Bareilly section) railways, with averages of 1 in 2,997, 1 in 3,325, 1 in 3,456, and 1 in 6,553, respectively. The lowest proportion was on the East Indian railway, viz., 1 in 36,550 train-miles, the North Western State railway coming next with 1 in 28,097, then the Indian Midland railway with 1 in 27,442, the Rajputana-Malwa railway with 1 in 25,573, the Great Indian Peninsula railway with 1 in 25,211 and the Oudh and Rohilkhand State railway with 1 in 24,217.

II.—Accidents from other causes not involving accidents to trains, etc.

6. The casualties to passengers, servants in the employ of railways or of contractors, and to others, from causes not involving accidents to trains (which are detailed in abstract No. 2) are compared separately, for each gauge, with the average of the corresponding periods of the two previous years in the table below:

Gauges.	Three months ending with the 31st March 1897.								Average of the corresponding periods of the two previous years.
	Passengers.		Servants.		Others.		Total.		Passengers.		Servants.		Others.		Total.

Total	14	58	49	67	128	36	191	161	18	36	38	75	102	26	158	137

It will be seen from the foregoing table that, except under "Passengers killed", and "Servants injured" the number of persons killed and injured compares unfavourably with the average of the corresponding periods of the two previous years. The increase is attributable, to some extent, to the additional mileage worked, due to the opening of new lines.

III.—Accidents in which the movement of vehicles used exclusively upon railways was not concerned.

7. The following table shows for the several gauges, the number of persons reported to have been killed or injured by accidents in which the movement of vehicles used exclusively upon railways was not concerned. Comparative figures for the corresponding previous quarter are also given:

IV.—Statistical results.

8. The following table gives certain statistical results for the period under review, comparing the number of passengers killed and injured by accidents to trains and from all causes with the number carried and the number of passenger-units carried one mile. Comparative results based on the average figures of the corresponding periods of the two previous years are also given:

V.—Number of persons killed and injured by accidents to trains, rolling stock, etc., during the first quarter of 1897.

9. The following table gives the number of accidents, as classified in abstract No. 4 of the returns, which resulted in loss of life or injury to person, and shows the railways on which they occurred:

Total	15	4	34	4	11	8	45
Average of the two corresponding quarters of 1895 and 1896	16	3	23	3	13	6	36

The increase in the total number of persons killed and injured during the first quarter of 1897, as compared with the average of the corresponding quarters of the two previous years, was mainly, as already explained in paragraph 1, due to the accident at Gholvad station on the 9th January 1897 on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India railway. Particulars of this accident are briefly given in paragraph 10.

10. A brief description of accidents which resulted in loss of life or injury to person is given below.

East Indian railway.—On the 7th January 1897, an up goods train collided with another standing on the home line at Gangpur station. The accident was due to the carelessness of the station master, who assuming that the latter train had passed his station allowed the former train in. Two railway servants were injured.

On the 11th January 1897, an outgoing engine of a mail train collided with the front brake-van while backing on to the train at Tundla. Two passengers were slightly injured.

On the 3rd February 1897, a country-cart was run into by the branch train on the Cawnpore Mills branch, owing to the bullocks having taken fright. One of the occupants of the cart was injured.

Indian Midland railway.—On the 17th February 1897, a down mail train ran into a bullock-cart at the level crossing at mile 281, between Antri and Gwalior stations, owing to the gates not having been closed by the gate-keeper before the arrival of the train. The cartman was injured.

North Western State railway.—On the 23rd January 1897, a sub-inspector's trolly was run into by an up Quetta mail train in a deep cutting at mile 479—17 near Kóchálí, owing to neglect on the part of the sub-inspector. Two railway servants were killed and the sub-inspector and a trolly man were injured.

Oudh and Rohilkhand State railway.—On the 12th February 1897, the engine of an up mail train while backing collided with the train at Fyzabad. Two passengers were slightly injured by the shock.

Eastern Bengal State railway.—(standard gauge). On the 15th January 1897, during shunting operations, an Eastern Bengal State railway up goods train collided with an East Indian railway up goods train at Naiháti station, owing to the carelessness of the shunter. A railway servant was injured.

On the 13th March 1897, a Bengal Central railway mixed train collided with an Eastern Bengal State railway goods train at Ránaghat junction station, owing to the carelessness of the assistant station master. Three passengers and one railway servant were injured.

Great Indian Peninsula railway.—On the 16th January 1897, an engine, while entering the locomotive yard at Sohagpur, was turned on to the wrong siding and collided with another. A railway servant was injured.

On the 26th January 1897, the traffic between Jalamb and Murtajápur Nágpur branch, was blocked and the telegraphic communication stopped owing to trees having fallen on the wires and across the line during a heavy storm. Two railway servants were also injured by the pilotman's hut having blown down.

Bombay, Baroda and Central India railway.—On the 9th January 1897, after the engine and four leading vehicles of an up mail train, which was booked to run through Gholvad station had passed the north points on the platform line, on which a down mixed train was standing, the pointsman discovering his mistake threw over the points for the main line, thus splitting the train and causing derailment of some of the vehicles. The front portion of the mail train collided with the mixed train, resulting in serious damage. Four passengers and a railway servant were killed and twenty-two passengers and two railway servants were injured.

Burma railways.—On the 27th January 1897, a shunting engine was allowed on to the second line, Malogon siding, at Pasundaung station, and collided with a train of empty wagons standing there, due to carelessness of the head pointsman. A railway servant was killed.

Eastern Bengal State railway.—(metre gauge). On the 17th March 1897, a down mail train ran into a cart while it was crossing the line at the level crossing at mile $\frac{16}{3}$ within the station points of Málánchi. The cartman was injured.

Bhávnagar-Gondal-Junágarh-Porbandar railway.—On the 10th February 1897, a bullock-cart was knocked off the line by the engine of an up mail train at a level crossing near Vadal station. The cartman was injured.

On the 12th March 1897, a plough drawn by bullocks, whilst crossing the line when a down mixed train was approaching, was smashed by the engine of the train, and the ploughman was injured.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

SINCE the Stamp Act of 1879 was passed the stamp law has been amended by ten different enactments. The present Bill proposes to repeal and re-enact in a consolidated form the whole of these enactments. It also proposes to introduce certain amendments where the working of the stamp law had disclosed defects. Alterations are printed in italics, and the material amendments which it is proposed to introduce are referred to in the notes on clauses given below. For facility of reference a comparative table is appended to this statement, showing how each section of the Indian Stamp Act, 1879, has been dealt with in the present Bill.

Notes on Clauses.

Clause 2 (2) and (3).—The definitions of "bill of exchange" and "bill of exchange payable on demand" are taken from the English Stamp Act, 1891 (54 and 55 Vict., c. 39). It will be noted that (as is the case in England) they include many instruments which could not be classed as "bills of exchange" within the definition given by the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, but which for stamp purposes ought to fall within the same category.

(7) The definition of "cheque" has been altered to bring it into accord with the definition given by the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881.

(11) The definition of "duly stamped" has been amended. The former definition seems scarcely applicable where the instrument was first executed abroad and afterwards stamped in British India.

(18) The definition of "policy of insurance" has been amended so as to make it cover policies of every description.

(20) The definition of "power-of-attorney" has been amended so as to make it clear that it relates only to powers-of-attorney and does not include all contracts creating the relationship of principal and agent.

(22) In the definition of "receipt" the word "advertisement" is left out, as the machinery of the Act is not applicable to advertisements acknowledging receipt of money.

The definitions of "vessel," "writing" and "schedule" have been omitted as unnecessary, being now provided for in the General Clauses Act, 1897.

Clause 3.—The general exemption on behalf of Government contained in Schedule II of the Act of 1879 has now been inserted in the body of the Act as a proviso to this clause.

Clause 4.—A proviso has been added to this clause to make it clear that the option given to the parties to elect which instrument shall be considered as the principal instrument is not to be used for the purpose of evading stamp duty.

Clause 8.—A penalty clause taken from the English Act has been added.

Clause 9.—A paragraph has been added to this clause to provide for the composition or consolidation of duties.

Clause 12.—The present law leaves it doubtful how adhesive stamps ought to be cancelled. A paragraph has been added to indicate a proper manner for the cancellation of such stamps.

Clause 20.—Section 19 of the Act of 1879 has been omitted, as the fall of the exchange value of the rupee has rendered it inapplicable. The present clause puts all foreign currency on the same footing, and the second paragraph provides a simple machinery for fixing the rate of exchange for the purpose of stamp duty.

Clause 24.—An Explanation and Illustration have been added to this clause to remove doubts as to its construction.

Clause 25.—The drafting of this clause has been altered so as to make it applicable to annuities commencing at an indefinite future time.

Clause 29.—Sub-clause (h) of this clause has been amended so as to enable a Revenue-authority or Civil Court directing a partition, to remit at discretion the stamp duty payable on the portion of an estate which remains undivided, in consequence of some shareholders electing to continue to hold jointly.

Clause 33.—A paragraph has been added to this clause to provide for the interpretation of the terms "public offices" and "persons in charge of public offices."

Clause 34.—This clause has been added, because under the present law an audit officer of public accounts, before whom an unstamped receipt is produced, must impound the instrument, and has no power to require the substitution of a duly stamped receipt.

Clause 35.—A proviso has been added which prevents the exclusion of receipts from being admitted as evidence against the person by whose fault they are unstamped. A further proviso has been added to this clause to provide that the omission of a Government officer to see that an instrument is duly stamped shall not prejudice the rights of the parties to have the document admitted in evidence.

Clause 37.—This clause has been inserted to provide for the case where by inadvertence a stamp of improper description has been used.

Clause 39.—Power is given to the Collector to Act, in cases where he thinks fit to do so, without application made.

Clause 44.—A paragraph has been added to this clause to provide that, where a party to a suit has been obliged to pay stamp duty through the default of the other party, the duty so paid may be recovered as costs and need not be made the subject of a separate suit.

Clause 45.—This clause has been amended so as to give the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority power to remit as well as to refund penalties. It further provides for the refund of any excess duty which may have been paid. The effect of the clause will be to give an informal right of appeal from the Collector to the Chief Revenue-authority.

Clause 48.—This clause provides a simple procedure for the recovery of duties and penalties.

Clause 49.—The drafting of this clause has been altered so as to make its provisions clearer and to bring it more nearly into accord with the corresponding provisions of the English Stamp Duties Management Act, 189: (54 and 55 Vict., c. 38).

Clause 50.—This clause is a redraft of the proviso to section 51 of the Act of 1879.

Clause 51.—This clause gives a new power to make allowances for stamp paper on printed forms used by incorporated companies where such forms have ceased to be required.

Clause 54.—A proviso has been added to this clause to make special provision for the case of licensed vendors of stamps.

Clause 55.—This clause is new and is intended to give facilities to Companies in respect of renewals of debentures.

Clause 56.—A paragraph has been added to make it clear that in all cases a Collector is subject to the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority.

Clause 61.—This clause has been amended so as to give to Appellate Courts revisionary powers in respect of decisions of criminal as well as of civil and revenue courts in the cases referred to.

Clause 64.—A clause has been added to cover acts which may not fall within the scope of the preceding clauses, but which nevertheless are done with the intent to defraud the Government of duty.

Clause 69.—This clause has been amended so as to make it clear that any one, whether licensed or not, can sell one-anna adhesive stamps. A corresponding provision has been made in clause 74.

Clause 73.—This clause intended to give Collectors power to trace unduly stamped documents is taken from the English Act.

NOTES TO SCHEDULE I.

GENERAL.—The arrangement of articles is more strictly alphabetical. The exemptions are printed under the Articles to which they relate, instead of being contained in a separate schedule, and exemptions of a general character, which have from time to time been made by notification are now embodied in the schedule itself. A few exemptions of documents executed in connexion with the business of public departments, have been removed from the Act and will be notified among the exemptions made by executive authority.

Article 1.—Acknowledgment of a debt. The attested acknowledgment of a debt is clearly in the nature of a bond and should be stamped as such.

Article 6.—Agreement to mortgage. A mortgage by deposit of title-deeds, commonly called an equitable mortgage, operates as an agreement to mortgage and is better described under that head. The duty is taken from the English Act.

Article 13.—Bills of Exchange. The exemption from stamp duty of Bills of Exchange payable on demand for less than twenty rupees has been omitted. There is no such exemption in England. As regards bills payable otherwise than on demand no alteration has been made in the duty, but the table of duties has been worked out at greater length for convenience of reference.

Article 15.—Bond. A similar table has been worked out with reference to bonds.

Article 17.—Instrument of Cancellation. This article is new.

Article 21.—Cheque. The exemption from stamp duty of cheques under twenty rupees has been omitted. There is no such exemption in England.

Article 23.—Conveyance. The duty has not been altered, but the table of duties has been worked out at greater length for convenience of reference.

Article 24.—Copy or Extract. Provision has been made for stamping duplicate receipts when signed or attested.

Article 27.—Debenture. This article is new; debentures at present come under the general conditions of Bonds, but it has been considered more convenient to deal with them under a separate article.

Article 32.—Instrument of Further Charge. This article has been altered so as to impose the higher duty in cases in which possession is given in pursuance of the instrument of further charge.

Article 35.—A provision for a proper duty on perpetual leases has been added.

Article 40.—Mortgage deed. An addition has been made to this article, taken from the English Stamp Act, 1891, to provide for cases of mortgage by further assurance. An exemption has been added to make it clear, that ordinary pawn transactions are not liable to stamp duty. The explanation regarding possession is intended to prevent evasion of the higher duty on mortgages with possession.

Article 41.—Mortgage of Crop. This is a new article, but it represents an existing notification reducing the duty in the case of mortgage of crops.

Article 47.—Policies of Insurance. The drafting of this article has been altered to make its provisions clearer.

Article 48.—Power-of-attorney. It has been found that sales and mortgages are sometimes effected through the medium of powers-of-attorney. Provision has been made that in this case they should pay the same duty as conveyances. A slight extension is also made of clause (a) of the article.

Article 49.—Promissory Notes. A promissory note payable on demand is in the nature of a continuing security and in England pays the same duty as a bill or note not payable on demand. The same rule is now made applicable to India.

Article 57.—The limitation of the duty is made to extend to the case of a surety executing a bond to secure due execution of a contract.

Article 58.—Settlement. The revocation of a settlement is now specially charged with the same duty as the revocation of any other trust. A provision is made which has the effect of exempting from section 27 of the Act a class of documents in which it is contrary to religious duty to express the value of the thing conveyed.

Article 59.—Share Warrants. This article is taken from section 35 of the Indian Companies Act, 1882. It more appropriately comes under this Act. The duty is expressed more simply, and is the same in amount.

Article 62.—Transfer. A special provision has been made in this article for the transfer of debentures which are marketable securities. The article has no application to debentures payable to bearer.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 15th October, 1897:

NO. 17 OF 1897.

A Bill to amend the Indian Penal Code in relation to Extra-territorial Offences.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Indian Penal Code in relation to extra-territorial offences; It is hereby enacted as follows:

,V of 1860.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act, 1898; and

Short title and commencement.

,V of 1860.

2. Section 4 of the Indian Penal Code is hereby repealed, and the following is substituted therefor, namely:

Substitution of new section for section 4, Act XLV, 1860.

'4. The provisions of this Code apply to any offence committed by—

Extension of Code to extra-territorial offences.

(1) any Native Indian subject of Her Majesty in any place without and beyond British India;

3 & 29 ct., c. 17, s.

(2) any other British subject within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India;

(3) any servant of the Queen, whether a British subject or not, within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India. [24 & 25 Vict., c. 67, s. 22 and I. P. C, s. 4.]

Explanation.—In this section the word "offence" includes every act committed outside British India which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under this Code.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a coolie, who is a Native Indian subject, commits a murder in Uganda. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in British India in which he may be found.

(b) B, a European British subject, commits a rape in tribal territory on the British side of the Afghan frontier. He can be tried and convicted of rape in any place in British India in which he may be found.

(c) C, a foreigner who is in the service of the Punjab Government, commits a murder in Jhind. He can be tried and convicted of murder at any place in British India in which he may be found.

(d) D, a British subject living in Indore, instigates E to commit a murder in Bombay. D is guilty of abetting murder.'

XLV of 1860.

3. After section 108 of the Indian Penal Code the following shall be added, namely:

Abetment in British India of offences outside it.

"108A. A person abets an offence within the meaning of this Code who, in British India, abets the commission of any act without and beyond British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India. [24 & 25 Vict., c, 67, s 22.]

Illustration.

A, in British India, instigates B, a foreigner in Goa, to commit a murder in Goa. A is guilty of abetting murder."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Indian Penal Code was enacted in 1860 under the powers conferred by s. 43 of the Government of India Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 85)—see Reg. v. Elmstone (1878), 7 Bom. Cr. Ca. at p. 100.

2. Since that date Parliament has bestowed on the Indian Legislature various powers of legislating for extra-territorial offences, but no corresponding amendment has been made in the Indian Penal Code. To a large, but not to the full, extent those powers have been taken advantage of by s. 8 of the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879 (XXI of 1879). It seems desirable that the Code itself should specify the extent of its extra-territorial operation. At present this is done only in a fragmentary and misleading manner, and, as something more than mere consolidation is required, the present Bill has been prepared. It is proposed eventually to consolidate the various enactments which have from time to time been passed to amend the Code, but it is better to keep amendment distinct from consolidation.

3. The English theory of the territoriality of crime is purely a doctrine of the common law and probably owes its origin to the old rules of criminal pleading. It is not accepted by other nations—see Hall's International Law, Ed. 3, p. 206, and the judgment of West, J., in Reg. v. Moorga Chetty (1881), I. L. R. 5 Bom., at p. 362. Having regard to the circumstances of India, Parliament has departed from the English rule, and has authorised the Indian Legislature to deal in certain cases with extra-territorial offences. It seems right that these powers should be exercised to their full extent, and the present Bill will effect that object. Even then certain anomalies will remain, but they can be removed only by further Parliamentary legislation.

Notes on Clauses.

Clause 2.—This clause proposes to repeal s. 4 of the Code and to substitute a new section therefor.

Clause (1) of the new section follows the words of s. 1 of the Indian Councils Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict., c. 98), and corresponds with s. 8 (1) of the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879 (XXI of 1879).

Clause (2) follows the words of s. 1 of the Government of India Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict., c. 17), by using the term "British subject," and will extend the operation of s. 8 (2) of Act XXI of 1879, which applies only to European British subjects. There are many British subjects who are neither European British subjects as defined by the Act, nor Native Indian subjects, e.g., Cingalese, Tasmanians and inhabitants of the Straits Settlements.

As regards clause (3), by s. 22 of the Indian Councils Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict., c. 67), the Indian Legislature is empowered to legislate for "all servants of the Government of India within the dominions of Princes and States in alliance with Her Majesty." By s. 4 of the Indian Penal Code the provisions of the Code are extended to every servant of the Queen "within the dominions of any Prince or State in alliance with the Queen, by virtue of any treaty or engagement heretofore entered into with the East India Company, or which may have been or may hereafter be made in the name of the Queen by any government of India." Neither the Indian Act nor the English Statute draws any distinction between Government servants who are British subjects and those who are not. The words "whether a British subject or not" have, therefore, been inserted in the Bill to negative the decision in Empress v. Natwarai (1891) I. L. R. 16 Bom. 178, where it was held that a servant of Government who was the subject of a Native State, could not be tried in British India for an offence committed outside. The necessary consequential amendments will be made in the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The expression "India" is defined by s. 3 (27) of the General Clauses Act, 1897 (X of 1897), and coincides with the definition given by the Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict., c. 63).

Clause 3.—This clause is intended to carry out a suggestion of the Bombay Government consequent on a decision of the Bombay High Court to the effect that a person in British India who instigated a Portuguese to commit a murder in Goa, was guilty of no offence—see Queen Empress v. Gunpatrao (1894), I. L. R. 19 Bom. 105. Presumably, if the murderer had been a Native Indian subject, the present law would have reached him; but the point was not discussed. The Indian Legislature has power to legislate for all persons in British India, and there is no reason why British India should be an Alsatia for the instigators of crime.

STAMP BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Stamps. He said:—"During the last forty years there have been three general Stamp Acts; first that of 1862; then that of 1869 which consolidated and amended the Act of 1862; and thereafter the Act of 1879 which consolidated and amended the Act of 1869. The present Act is meant to be a consolidation and amendment of the last of these Acts, that of 1879, which was introduced and passed after elaborate consideration of the subject, and very largely upon the lines of the English Stamp Act. Our hon'ble and temporarily lost colleague, Sir John Woodburn, at the last meeting of the Council, told us that, in the course of time, weaknesses are discovered and brought to light in the case of every Act of every Legislature, and this is the excuse which I make to the Council for bringing now before them for renewed consideration the Act which it is necessary to amend, namely, the existing Stamp Act. It is natural that defects should be found in an Act of the present description, which enters so largely into the business transactions of every day life. It is not intended to make any alterations in the main lines of the existing law applicable generally to stamps. Most of the alterations which it is proposed to make are alterations of a petty character, and there are only two or three which might possibly be considered to be of any importance.

"The main defects in the Act may be described as follows. First there are cases in which the law, for want of clearness, has failed in its intention. The stamp law differs from most other revenue laws in this respect, that it is left very largely to a sort of automatic operation; that is to say, it is applied by persons themselves to their own transactions, and the burden of its interpretation rests, not merely upon the lawyer, but upon the layman. It is all the more necessary, therefore, that in its working and in its explanation it should be as clear as possible, so that people who desire to pay proper duty upon their documents and who have no intention of evading the duty in any way, may thoroughly and clearly understand the obligations which rest upon them. There are also cases in which we find that the provisions of the law as they stand have been evaded, partly from apparent misunderstanding and partly no doubt because a lawyer, when he is acting for his client, is bound to carry out the transaction entrusted to him in such fashion as to burden his client in the least possible measure with duty. There are some cases in which it is found in practice that the duty imposed by law upon a certain class of transactions has been evaded by carrying out the transaction in a manner in which the same result has been obtained by the payment of less duty. In these cases, it is proposed by some of the provisions which are included in the amending Bill, to levy the amount of duty which the Act of 1879 intended to levy. There are again cases which, it has been found in the experience of the last eighteen years, have not been adequately provided for; and I say this both in the interests of the revenue and in the interests of the persons who are chargeable with duty. There are cases in which greater facilities may be given to the public than are afforded by the present law and there are cases in which petty hardships are inflicted which the present law does not enable the local officers to meet.

"In two or three of these cases the defects have been remedied by previous amendments, there having been, since 1879, two or three amending Acts. But by far the larger number of the defects brought to notice from time to time have been merely examined, noted and recorded with a view of their being brought before the Legislature in a general amending Bill. These cases were all gathered together and submitted for the consideration of Local Governments and the officers whom they desired to consult, in a circular which was issued in the beginning of 1895. We have received in reply to that circular a large number of suggestions and criticisms of the law as it at present stands. Some of the suggestions which have been made to us we do not see our way to adopt, but such of them as commend themselves to us are embodied in the Bill which it is now intended to lay before the legislature.

"The main question which will interest the public in connection with the amendment of the Act is the question what alterations are proposed in the duties. For the most part—I should say in all but very exceptional cases—we leave the duties as they at present stand. It is not our intention to ask the legislature to pass a law in aid of the revenue; but in going through the duties as they stand and in collating the opinions regarding them, there are one or two points in which the duties require amendment. I shall, first of all, mention cases in which it is proposed to increase duties. The first of these is the large class of instruments upon which one anna duty is at present levied. The Act as it at present stands necessarily quotes documents by their English names—quotes, for example, a bill of exchange. A bill of exchange is a document which is established in a very well known form by English Mercantile Law. In this country, very naturally, the English forms of these documents are not the same as those adopted by Native Merchants in their transactions; and questions have consequently arisen with reference to mercantile documents which have the same purpose in Indian commerce that bills of exchange have in English commerce, whether they are liable to duty as bills of exchange. Now, I may mention that in the English Stamp Act bills of exchange have got a specially wide definition. A bill of exchange for the purposes of the Negotiable Instruments Act is defined in the English law relating to negotiable instruments. But in the English Stamp Act it is prescribed that for the purposes of that Act a bill of exchange shall mean a very much larger class of documents than is included within the wider definition of the Negotiable Instruments Act. We have now taken that English definition and we have brought it into our Indian Stamp Act. The result will be that we shall include, mostly under the one-anna rate of duty, a number of instruments which at present escape duty because they are drawn in the native character and are not called hundis, the native hundi being the only name that is expressly included in the term bill of exchange.

"The same course we follow with regard to the definition applying to promissory notes. We have introduced into our present Act a definition of promissory note taken from the English Stamp Act.

"We do not, except in one small particular, propose to alter the duty which is levied upon bills of exchange and cheques, cheques being only one of the varieties of bills of exchange. The intended alteration is that we do not propose to carry on the existing exemption in favor of bills of exchange and other such documents for an amount of less than twenty rupees. Receipts for less than twenty rupees are at present exempted from duty; and as it is an obligation by law to give a receipt in certain cases, we do not propose in any way to alter the taxation of receipts or to impose upon receipts not exceeding twenty rupees a tax which they do not at present bear. But in the case of bills of exchange and cheques, we remove the twenty-rupee exemption, and in this respect we copy the English Act. I may mention that there is a history affecting bills of exchange for less than twenty rupees, and that their exemption from duty appears to have arisen by mistake. I quote from a very learned book written by the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers in a former state of existence in which, dealing with bills of exchange, he says:

'By Statute George III, Cap. 88, negotiable bills for less than twenty shillings were made void in England and any person who issued or negotiated them was made liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds.'

"This law has since then been set aside, but it appears to have been the origin of the practice of exempting bills of exchange and cheques under a certain amount, the fact being that in England these were not exempted from taxation, but they were ipso facto illegal and there was a penalty attached to the drawing of them.

"In the case of promissory notes there is another alteration which has been made and in which we have also copied the English Law. As the law at present stands a promissory note bears the same duty as a bill of exchange payable on demand. Demand means a very different thing in the case of a bill of exchange from what it means in the case of a promissory note. When a bill of exchange is payable on demand, it is intended, unless it is of the variety known as kites, to start at once upon its journey; it passes through various hands and towards discharge. Now, when a person makes a promissory note payable on demand nothing would surprise him more than the presentation of the note being immediately made to him. It is not really meant to be payable on demand although it is expressed to be so. A promissory note is therefore treated as a continuing security in England, and it is provided that promissory notes shall bear the duty which is payable on a bill of exchange drawn otherwise than on demand. In this respect, therefore, we have copied the English Act and made a change which increases the duty payable upon these documents.

"Another change in the direction of increase is in the case of what are called in England equitable mortgages, and which in the Indian Stamp law, as it at present stands, are called by a rather lengthy name—instruments evidencing an agreement to secure the repayment of a loan made upon the deposit of title deeds or other valuable security. These equitable mortgages, according to English law, pay two-fifths of the duty payable upon a bond. In India the duty is extremely small; it only comes to one-eighth of the amount payable on bonds. An equitable mortgage is a transaction which frequently covers considerable amounts of money, and it is a cheap way of carrying out ordinary borrowings from banks and the like. We propose to raise the duty payable in these cases to about one-fifth of the amount required in the case of formal borrowing by bond. This rate is, in proportion to the duty upon bonds, half of what is leviable by the English law, and seems to us a moderate demand in respect of the transactions involved.

"There are only two other cases in which we have increased the duty, or levy a duty which is not at present provided for. The first is the case of a deed of adoption. A deed of adoption is defined in the Indian Act as one conferring authority to adopt, and is chargeable with a duty of ten rupees. There is no duty payable upon instruments recording adoptions. We propose to include these in the definition of deed of adoption, and thus to extend the ten-rupee duty to cases of adoption. An adoption very frequently conveys to the person adopted very valuable rights indeed, and it is a document which mostly passes between persons possessing ample estate. There seems to us no reason why these deeds should be exempted from stamp duty.

"The other case to which I wish to refer is that of a perpetual lease. It is provided in the existing law that a perpetual lease is chargeable only as a conveyance for a consideration equal to the amount of one year's rent. One year's rent is a very small standard of duty of what may be really a conveyance by sale of a very valuable property. Under these circumstances we propose to regulate the duty, not upon a consideration equal to one year's rent, but upon a consideration which is equal to ten years' rent.

"It will be observed also under the head of power-of-attorney, that we have provided for one class of evasion which is not unfrequently practised under the law as it stands, namely, the facility given for effecting mortgages and the like by what is in form only a power-of-attorney. A power-of-attorney, when it is drawn for a purpose like this, will pay a duty equal to the duty payable in respect of the conveyance of the property for the assignment for which the power-of-attorney is drawn up.

"There are also one or two cases, such as petty partnerships, and petty sales by order of court, in which we have reduced the duty at present assessed.

"So far as regards increases of duty which we propose to introduce into the present law; it will be seen that they are not very many. We have further taken the opportunity of making special provision in the Act with reference to debentures. There is at present no special provision with reference to debentures. They are dealt with under the general conditions of bonds. But since the law of 1879 was passed, debentures have come very largely into use, and the practice of limited companies issuing debentures has been extended very widely. We have therefore made special provision relating to debentures. We do not alter the tax upon them, they pay the same duty as is payable on bonds under the existing law; but we have incorporated in the existing law one kind of exemption which has been given by notification, namely, we have provided that in cases of debentures issued in pursuance of a mortgage deed, they shall be exempted from further duty; that is, the duty shall be payable once upon the mortgage-deed, and not again upon separate debentures issued in conformity with it. This provision is intended for the benefit of limited companies, and does not apply to private persons or proprietors of estates issuing debentures as is now sometimes done. Such debenture-issuers will be responsible, not only for the payment of the duty on the mortgage, but also for the payment of the additional duty which is required under the existing law for debentures issued under the mortgage.

"We have also for the facility of business connected with debentures provided in the Act itself for the renewal of debentures without the payment of any extra duty. At present, when a company wants to renew debentures, it has to pay the same duty upon them as upon the originally issued debentures. We have provided that when debentures are renewed, they shall not be chargeable with any new duty, and we allow also for certain alterations in the terms of the debentures being effected without new payment of duty.

"I do not propose in any way to go over all the petty alterations in the provisions of the Bill; they will be dealt with in due course by the Select Committee. There are only one or two matters to which I wish to call attention.

"The first is with reference to a new section which was passed as Act VI of 1894 to give facilities to local authorities for issuing debentures upon payment of composition duty. We have by the addition of a word in that section included the exemption of transfers as well the exemption of issues of debentures; but we have also made provision, by adding a sub-section, for levying a penalty upon a local authority which issues debentures without first of all paying duty. This penalty is taken word for word from the similar provision in the English Act.

"The next alteration is the provision of a method of cancellation of adhesive stamps. People are bound to cancel stamps, but no direction is given as to the method of cancellation. We provided in the law one method of cancellation; that method is not made absolutely obligatory, but it is desirable to give people one clear method of complying with the prescription of the law as to effecting cancellation. In section 20 we have provided a rate of exchange for the conversion of amounts expressed in foreign currencies for the purposes of valuation under the Act. The existing law lays down a rate for the conversion of sterling and one or two other currencies into rupees. That provision, I need not say, has become altogether obsolete; and now, instead of fixing a particular rate for the conversion, we have given power to the Governor General in Council by the issue of a notification to prescribe a rate of exchange for the conversion of British or any foreign currency into the currency of British India.

"Another section which is very far from clear is that which is now section 24 and relates to the sale of property which is transferred to any person subject to incumbrance. It is necessary to provide that the consideration for such sale should be reckoned not only upon the money paid but also upon the money due for discharge of the encumbrance. We have explained this by an explanation and illustrations attached to the section.

"Then in section 26 we have made special provision for the case of leases of mines. This section provides for the case of levy of duty ad valorem when the amount on which to reckon the duty is unascertainable. The provision of the present law is that a person may select his own rate of duty, but may not upon the document recover more than that duty covers. In the case of mines of which the rent is a share of the produce it is utterly impossible to tell beforehand what the amount of rent may be. We have therefore provided that any person who chooses to assess the share of the produce at 20,000 rupees a year may recover any amount in excess of that estimate without regarding the limit covered by the duty paid.

"In section 29 we have provided that if a person besides giving an original receipt is called upon to give a copy of it, he will not be responsible for the payment of the duty on that copy, but the person who demands it.

"Chapter IV of the Bill deals with the admissibility of improperly stamped documents in evidence. We have received from some Judicial officers objections to the whole principle of this chapter. They have given us many valuable suggestions and criticisms upon the working of the Stamp law, but we are unable to accept their views in respect to the authority of Civil Courts to admit documents in evidence which are not properly stamped. The whole of this subject was carefully gone into and explained at the time that the Act of 1879 was before the Council; and I refer hon'ble members and the officers in question to those discussions as giving ample reasons why we should maintain the law on the subject, which obliges Civil Courts to refer these matters to the revenue officers and not to dispose of them themselves. In this chapter we have made some provision for the benefit of the public, namely, in giving revenue officers the power to interpose of their own motion in favor of a person subjected to a penalty.

"We have added a section 48 which gives the necessary power to the Collector to recover all sums required to be paid under the Act, there being at present no provision of this kind.

"In the case of Chapter V, which deals with spoiled stamps, we have made the whole subject much more clear than it stands in the present law. There is one change which has been made in this Chapter to which it is necessary to draw attention because I think that the present provisions of the Act are based upon a misunderstanding. The provisions of the English Act, from which the Indian law is taken, are that if a document is found to be void in law from the beginning, the parties who executed it can claim refund of the duty which they have paid upon it, provided no legal proceeding has been commenced in which the document would have been given in evidence. As adopted in the Act of 1879, this section was worded so as to apply to documents which have been found by a Court of law to be void. This the reference to the English Act will show to be a mistake. If a document is found by a Court to be void, it must have been produced in evidence before that Court and must have been made use of by the party producing it. There is no reason why duty should in such a case be refunded. We have therefore amended the existing Indian law in this respect so as to bring it into conformity with the English law.

"In section 51 we have inserted a provision which will give certain facilities to companies which in the course of their business keep a considerable number of stamped forms for use. Cases have occasionally arisen in which these forms have ceased to be useful for the purposes for which they were prepared. There are no provisions in the existing law by which a refund of the duty paid on such forms can be claimed; although claims made in such cases have been considered by Government, and refunds made by executive order. We have thought it better to provide greater facilities in this respect and have empowered the chief Revenue authority to give refunds in these cases.

"In section 64, the general penalty section, an alteration has been made by including as an offence under the Act the doing of an act with intent to defraud. If the English Act be referred to, it will be found that the general penalty clause is much wider than the section proposed.

"In the chapter relating to supplemental provisions (Chapter VIII), there is one new clause, which we have taken from the English Act, and which subjects every public officer, and therefore every Judge of a Court, who is in charge of records of any description, to give access to the revenue authorities for the purpose of making any enquiry to determine whether any document is insufficiently stamped. In transferring that section from the English to the Indian Act we have omitted the penalty clause, because we consider that the Judges and other public officers in this country are likely to conform to their legal obligations without being threatened with a penalty of ten pounds in case of default.

"There is one alteration we have made in a small matter. We have provided that one anna adhesive stamps may be sold without any license being necessary.

"In the schedule to the Act we have made several changes in form which we believe will conduce very largely to public convenience.

"First, we have improved the alphabetical order. For instance, in the case of a divorce or a gift, people would naturally look under the letter D or the letter G, as the case may be. If reference be made to the existing schedule, they will not be found under these letters, but under the letter I, namely, under the head of Instruments. There are other similar cases.

"We have also removed exemptions from their position in a separate schedule of exemptions and placed them in the schedule of duties under the articles to which they refer.

"Another change is that we have made the ascertainment of duty more direct and more easy. For example, the three tables of duty under the heads of bills of exchange, bond and conveyance are at present drawn up in a very curtailed form. It is impossible, when considerable amounts are involved, without the aid of paper and pencil, to make out from the different tables the duty payable on a particular instrument. By extending the table we have made it easy for a person by a reference to the schedule to ascertain directly what the particular duty is. We have altered the schedule in another respect by improving the references; for example, if you want to find the duty on an administration bond, you are referred to security bond; and if you turn to security bond, you are sent to find the proper duty under the head of bond. There are several cases of double reference of this kind, and we have in these cases made the reference direct.

"Besides the exemptions which are mentioned in the Act itself there are a large number which have been effected by notification. These refer chiefly to documents which arise in the course of the business of public departments. If we bring these into the new Act, we will crowd the schedule largely with matters of no general public interest. We therefore propose to continue the present practice and to provide for all these exemptions by notifications and not by bringing them into the Act itself. There are a few documents of this character which are exempted under the provisions of the Act as it stands, but we have cut out these exemptions with the intention of including them in the list of similar instruments which have been from time to time exempted by notifications. This list it is intended to print and make public as soon as possible, so that any person who has any interest in these documents will see that the removal of them from the schedule of exemptions is not to be interpreted as an intention to levy any duty upon them.

"I have thought it necessary to make these remarks, for the length of which I hope to be excused; but the Bill is one which contains a very large number of amendments and affects a very large number of common transactions, so that, it is necessary to enter into explanations in some detail. I have now explained all but the most unimportant matters in which it is proposed to amend the Act of 1879, and I make the motion which stands in my name."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the Gazette of India in English, and in the local official Gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments may think fit. He said that he might mention that in the publications of the Bill it was intended to reprint it in the form in which it was compiled for working purposes in the Legislative Department: namely, that new and altered matter would be shown in italics, and in addition to that would be shown on the margin of each clause the authority, in the Indian or English Acts, from which the clause was taken.

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN PENAL CODE AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Penal Code in relation to Extra-territorial offences. He said:—

"The objects of this Bill are stated in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and I think that I need say a very few words about it. The purport of the Bill is to define on the face of the Code itself the extent of its extra-territorial operation; that is to say, the extent to which the Code applies to offences committed outside British India. As the Council are aware, the powers of the Indian Legislature are wholly derived from Acts of Parliament. At the time the Indian Penal Code was passed, that is to say, in 1860, Parliament had only conferred on the Indian Legislature the power of dealing with extra-territorial offences in one particular case, namely, where the offence was committed by a servant of Government; consequently, the only provision in the Indian Penal Code which deals with extra-territorial offences is a provision contained in section 4, which punishes offences committed outside British India by servants of Government. But since 1860 Parliament has conferred various extra-territorial powers on the Indian Legislature. Those powers have to a large, but not to the full, extent been exercised by the Foreign Jurisdiction Act of 1879. We think it is right and convenient, in the case of a Code like the Indian Penal Code, that the extent of its extra-territorial operation should appear on the face of the Code itself. This Bill is accordingly proposed to be introduced for the purpose. Section 4 of the Indian Penal Code will be repealed and a new section will be substituted which will exercise the powers conferred by the English Statutes on the Indian Legislature, and will provide that the provisions of the Code shall extend first to any native Indian subject of Her Majesty in any place without and beyond British India; secondly, to any other British subject within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India; and thirdly, to any servant of the Queen, whether a British subject or not, within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India; that is to say, we shall exercise to its full extent our Parliamentary authority to deal with offences committed outside India.

"That is the main provision of the Bill; but we have also inserted another clause, namely, clause 3, to carry out a suggestion of the Bombay Government. We have made it an offence for a person in British India to abet any act which would be an offence if committed in British India, but, as a fact, is committed outside. In short, to put it in popular language, we have extended the law of abetment to offences committed outside British India. It has been held by the Bombay High Court that if a person in British India abetted or incited a murder in Goa, he would not be guilty of any offence. We have come to the conclusion that he ought to be deemed guilty of an offence, and that India is not to be made an Alsatia for instigators of crime. I think I need say nothing further in support of this motion."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the Gazette of India in English, and in the local official Gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments may think fit.

The motion was put and agreed to.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure. He said:

"The object of this measure is to consolidate and amend the various enactments now in force relating to Criminal Procedure.

"The Code of 1882 has been amended by 16 different enactments, so that it no longer contains anything like a complete statement of the law relating to Criminal Procedure, and a consolidation of these enactments has become imperative.

"But mere consolidation is not enough. Fifteen years working of the Code have shown it to be defective in many particulars which have not been touched by the amending Acts. It would be outside the scheme of the Government of India to make any organic changes in the Code. But the task of revising in detail 560 sections and five lengthy schedules has not been a light one. Happily, I have had the assistance of my honourable friend Sir H. T. Prinsep, and on him has fallen the brunt of the work. His qualifications for this work are well known. By his successive editions of the Codes of 1861, 1872 and 1882, he has made the subject peculiarly his own, and I am fortunate to have had his collaboration.

"As the Council are aware there are eleven High Courts in India, or rather Courts which have the powers of High Courts. All these Courts are Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction. The decision of any one of these Courts is not binding on any other of them, and, as far as I can judge, there is not the same anxiety in India, as there is in England, to follow, if possible, the ruling of a Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction. As a necessary consequence of this state of things, many provisions of the Code have been differently interpreted in the different provinces. Thus one and the same provision of the Code may have an entirely different operation according to the locality in which it is applied. The inconvenience of such a state of things is obvious, and it emphasizes the necessity pointed out by Sir Fitz James Stephen for the periodical revision of our Codes. My honourable friend Sir Henry Prinsep undertook the labour of going through all the reported decisions of the Courts and collating the results. We have endeavoured, by drafting amendments in the Bill, to remove, as far as practicable, these discordant interpretations, and to restore uniformity to the law.

"But apart from the decisions of the Courts, we have been favoured with large numbers of suggestions for amendment in the Code, which have been furnished by local authorities, judicial authorities and other experts. These suggestions when collected form a pile of papers considerably higher than this table. My honourable friend kindly took upon himself the task of examining these suggestions, and of winnowing the grain from the chaff. We then in consultation settled the amendments to be adopted and inserted them in the draft.

"As I have said organic reform is outside the scope of the Government scheme, and, subject to two exceptions, I do not think I need trouble the Council at this stage with any remarks on the amendments we have introduced. They are essentially matters for a Select Committee. When the Bill reaches that stage, I trust they will be carefully and critically examined.

"The first exception that I refer to owes its initiative to my honourable colleague Sir John Woodburn. In parts of India there appears to be an increasing unwillingness to come forward as sureties for good behaviour. The consequence is that there is an increasing number of persons, who being ordered to find security for good behaviour or to keep the peace, have to go to prison in default of finding sureties. To mitigate this hardship, provision has been made in the draft Code that, when a man, who is ordered to find security, cannot do so, the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, instead of sending him to prison make an order placing him under police superveillance. Police superveillance is not introduced as a substitute for security, but merely as an optional alternative to actual imprisonment.

"The second amendment, which involves a matter of principle, is the introduction of the English rules as to first offenders. Provision has been made that in case of a first conviction for theft, criminal misappropriation or any other offence punishable with not more than two years' imprisonment, the Court may, if there be extenuating circumstances, release the offender upon certain conditions instead of sentencing him. The conditions are that he should execute a bond, with or without sureties, to come up for judgment when called upon, and in the meantime to keep the peace and be of good behaviour. This system has worked well in England. It has also worked well in France and in other continental countries where it has been adopted. I see no reason why it should not also prove successful in India, and I sincerely trust that it will do so. In the class of cases to which these provisions apply, I think that too much stress cannot be laid upon the distinction between first offenders and habitual criminals. In the case of a first offender who perhaps has committed some offence under sudden or grave temptation, the anxiety of the trial and the disgrace of conviction are often sufficient punishment. In the case of an habitual offender, it is obvious that previous punishment has not acted as a deterrent, and it is very rarely that any punishment that can be awarded will have the effect of reforming his ways. The object of the law is confined to inflicting such punishment as may act as a deterrent to others, and keep the habitual offender out of mischief for a considerable time. It is sometimes urged against the English system of dealing with first offenders that a nominal punishment would be a more appropriate remedy. But I would point out that the provisions we propose to adopt are much more effective than any slight or nominal punishment. The offender still has the judgment hanging over him in case of misbehaviour. If he misbehaves, he will be called up for judgment, and then a substantial sentence can be awarded on the original conviction.

"If there are any other amendments to which attention ought to be called at this stage, I have no doubt my honourable friend will deal with them. I will only add this much. Looking at the Code of 1882 as an English lawyer, I cannot say I am much enamoured of it. Many of its provisions appear to me to be cumbersome, complicated and over-minute. But then I am aware that India is not England. There may be good reasons for regulating minutiæ of procedure here which in England are dealt with as matters of discretion or court practice. The Code of 1882 has been in force for 15 years, and Courts, practitioners and the public have become familiar with it. Any attempt to alter it organically would for some time create great confusion, and would probably do much more harm than good. This consideration we have steadily kept in view. We have even, at some sacrifice of form, preserved almost entirely the original numbering of the sections. When a section has been repealed we have split up some neighbouring section so as to fill up the gap. When new matter has had to be inserted, we have, as far as possible, inserted it as sub-sections to the original sections or reserved it to the end. As the result, I think the numbering of only five or six sections has been altered. This no doubt involves some awkwardness of form, but does not, I think, outweigh the practical convenience of retaining the original numbering of the sections."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP said:—"My Hon'ble friend, the Legal Member of the Viceroy's Council, who has moved for leave to introduce this Bill, has invited me to follow him in explanation of its details which are in amendment, and, we hope, in improvement, of the present law.

"I do not propose to refer to each of these in turn. To do so would unnecessarily waste the time of this Council. I shall address myself only to those amendments which affect the law on any important point, for the Statement of Objects and Reasons attached to this Bill refers to all of them, and many are of so simple a character as to call for no other special notice. My object is to draw the attention of this Council, and of those who are likely to offer any further suggestions for our consideration before any alteration of the law takes place, to matters of practice which most materially concern the procedure of the Criminal Courts, and by this means also probably to lighten the labours of the Select Committee to which in due course this Bill will be submitted for examination and report.

"There has been no attempt to introduce any new law, except on the points already mentioned. The objects of the Bill under consideration are in the first place to consolidate the present law now contained in the Code of 1882, and sixteen amending Acts since passed; in the next place to express the law clearly on points on which the Superior Courts have given contradictory interpretations, or have interpreted it in a sense which seems to be opposed to the intention of the Legislature; and lastly to expand it so as to meet difficulties which have arisen in practice. There have been also a few amendments in the drafting. The arrangement in the Code of 1882 has been scrupulously maintained, and it will also be found, as stated by my Hon'ble friend, that the amendments have been introduced so as practically not to alter even the numbering of the sections. The definitions of various expressions have also been arranged alphabetically. The convenience of all this will be readily acknowledged by all whose duties, official or professional, bring them in connection with matters relating to this branch of the law.

"It has been under consideration whether this Code, with certain necessary special provisions, should not be extended to the Police of the Presidency Towns of Calcutta and Bombay. It already applies to the Police of the Town of Madras. The Local Governments of Bengal and Bombay have, however, expressed a wish to deal with this subject by special legislation; but, while deferring to their wishes, it is proposed to give the Local Governments, with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, power to extend such portions of the Code to Presidency Towns as may be found to be necessary. As an instance of this, I would venture to draw attention to section 164 of the Code which enables a Magistrate to record a confession or statement made to him before the commencement of an inquiry or trial. It has been held that the power conferred by this section cannot be exercised in these Presidency Towns. The amendment of section 1 will enable the Government, if it so desires, to extend this and other sections to proceedings in those Towns.

"Chapter XXXIII, relating to criminal proceedings against Europeans and Americans, remains untouched. Some parts of it may be open to improvement; but it has been considered preferable to await the result of further experience of its working, for, although as amended in 1884, it has been in operation for several years, the cases under it have been few, and no serious inconvenience has been felt to call for its further amendment.

"Amongst the definitions, a definition of 'trial' has been introduced, thus re-enacting the definition which appeared in former Codes, and was repealed by the Code of 1882. The definition marks the distinction between an inquiry and a trial before a Magistrate; it has been found in practice that confusion has arisen from the present Code which has omitted it.

"Section 10 will enable a Local Government to appoint temporarily an additional District Magistrate whenever some special work of an urgent character, as, for instance, plague, famine or settlement-work, may prevent the District Magistrate from performing the duties of his office. The duration of such a special appointment has been limited.

"The object of the amendment of section 21 is to give the Chief Presidency Magistrate generally the same control over other Presidency Magistrates as is now exercised by a District Magistrate over other Magistrates in the District.

"The amendments in sections 31—34 will enable an Additional Sessions Judge to deal with a case tried by an Assistant Sessions Judge or a Magistrate exercising special powers under section 30 in certain Provinces which require confirmation of the sentence passed, if it should be beyond the ordinary powers of such officer. An Additional Sessions Judge exercises the same powers as a Sessions Judge in his ordinary jurisdiction, and there is no reason why he should not also have jurisdiction to deal with such cases, which, under the present law, can be tried only by a Sessions Judge.

"Section 35 of the Code enables a Magistrate to pass separate sentences in excess of his ordinary powers on a person convicted at the same trial of two or more distinct offences. The explanation and illustrations which have been introduced are intended to show the difference for purposes of this section between distinct and separable offences as provided by section 71, Indian Penal Code. The reported cases show some confusion in applying the correct rule.

"Section 41 (2) will enable a District Magistrate to withdraw any power conferred by him on a subordinate Magistrate in the same way as the present law enables a Local Government to act in respect of powers conferred by it.

"The addition of sub-section (2) to section 44 has been introduced, so as to apply the law in respect to the giving of information regarding the commission of, or intention to, commit certain specified offences in British India, to offences in Native States. It has been found that preparations to commit such offences in Native States have been made in British India, while the law imposes no obligation to give timely information which, in many instances, might have prevented the commission of those offences. The obligation is also extended to the giving of information of such offences when committed so as to give greater facilities to the detection and arrest of the offenders.

"The object of the amendment of section 54 is to enable a village Policeman or Chowkidar to arrest without warrant as an ordinary Police officer, because it has been held that such powers can be exercised only by an officer of the regular Police force. There is no sufficient reason why such a distinction should exist, while it is obvious that the immediate arrest of persons falling within the section is most necessary to promote the ends of justice.

"Section 57, as amended, is intended to provide for the case of a resident in a Native State, who may have committed a non-cognizable offence in British India and in the presence of a Police officer, but who, under the present law, after his name and residence have been ascertained, must be released from custody on giving a bond for his appearance. If he thereupon returns to his residence in a Native State, no further proceedings can be taken against him, either to enforce the terms of the bond, or to obtain his attendance before a Magistrate. It is proposed therefore, in such cases, to require a bond with surety or sureties resident in British India.

"The object of section 61 is to prevent unnecessary detention by the Police of a person arrested, and the term of such detention, unless extended by a special order of a Magistrate, is limited. The section will apply to an arrest by a village

Policeman or Chowkidar under section 61 as amended by this Bill, or to the case of one arrested by a private person under section 59, and any unavoidable delay in taking him to be placed in the custody of a Police officer, who is competent to hold an investigation, may result in the expiry of the limit of detention in police custody before he can be so made over, or before an investigation could have commenced. It is therefore proposed to limit the operation of section 61 to detentions by Police officers of the regular force.

"Section 106 (3) is intended to settle the law in consequence of contradictory judgments of the High Courts of Calcutta and Allahabad. There is no sufficient reason for limiting to a Court of first instance the power to add to a sentence an order for security to keep the peace, where the recorded evidence satisfies a Court of Appeal or Revision that such an order is proper. Section 423 (d) will give an Appellate Court power to make such an order, and this power will also be conferred on a Court of Revision by section 439.

"Section 110 has been re-cast, and it has been extended so as to enable security for good behaviour to be taken from the protectors and harbourers of thieves and disposers of stolen property; (f) is a re-enactment of a part of the Code of 1872, the repeal of which by the Code of 1882 has been found to be inconvenient in practice.

"Section 144 has been extended to Presidency Towns, as there is apparently no reason why a Presidency Magistrate should not have the same summary powers as other Magistrates to pass an order, with temporary effect only, when the interests of the public require him to take immediate action to prevent serious consequences to human life, health or public tranquillity.

"The amendments of sections 145—147 are generally the restoration of the law which was for very many years in force before the Code of 1882. The modifications then made have resulted in some confusion in regard to the matters which can be dealt with by a Magistrate within the terms 'disputes relating to any tangible immoveable property or the boundaries thereof,' and it has also been found that these terms, which are less wide than those in the previous law, have unduly restricted the action of a Magistrate in many kindred matters likely to cause a breach of the peace. The time of the possession which the Magistrate has to find has also been expressly declared to be that of the date of the order passed by him taking cognizance of the matter in dispute.

"The amendments of sections 156—159 will enable certain specially empowered Magistrates to order an investigation into certain cases in which the police may have abstained from holding an investigation.

"Conflicting judgments of the High Court in regard to the right of an accused to see statements made by persons examined by a police officer in the course of an investigation have made it necessary to settle the law in this respect. It is proposed by an amendment of section 161 to make such statements privileged in the same manner as police diaries are protected by section 172. This view of the law and the reasons for it have been exhaustively discussed and explained in a recent case by Edge, C. J., and it is proposed to accept his judgment.

"Under section 191 the accused is entitled to claim the transfer of a case to another Magistrate, or its commitment to the Court of Session, if proceedings have been taken by him otherwise than on a complaint, or on a police report of the facts constituting an offence. The amendment requires that such right shall be claimed only before any evidence has been taken, and not at any stage of the trial as, for instance, after the evidence taken has gone against the accused. An application for a transfer of a case at such a stage of the trial could not be regarded as bonâ fide.

"The present Code, section 7, declares that a Sessions Division shall be a District or consist of Districts; but it does not contemplate, as sometimes happens, that a District may fall within two Sessions Divisions, and it has been found impossible to make them conterminous in regard to other departments of the administration. It is therefore proposed to remedy this difficulty by enabling a Local Government to appoint the Sessions Judge of the adjoining jurisdiction an Additional Sessions Judge, so as to make him competent to try cases relating to such localities, which otherwise would have to be tried at a greater distance and with much inconvenience to the parties and witnesses.

"Section 194, as amended, embodies Act X of 1875, section 144. The only other unrepealed section of that Act is sufficiently enacted in section 333, so that the entire Act may now be repealed.

"The object of section 195 (2), which defines a Court for purposes of that section, is to exclude proceedings under the Registration Act. In respect to the application of the section of the present Code to such proceedings, the judgments of the High Courts have been contradictory. Such matters are sufficiently provided for by the Registration Act. The addition to sub-section 6 will enable the High Court to extend the term of a sanction to prosecute given under this section, which, in many cases, may be desirable in the ends of justice. It has been held by the Calcutta High Court, under the present Code, that the term for which sanction to prosecute is in force cannot be extended.

"It has been found that some Magistrates refuse to allow the cross-examination of witnesses for the prosecution before commitment. It is now proposed to give an accused option to cross-examine so as to enable him, if he is so advised, to show that the evidence for the prosecution does not warrant his commitment to the Sessions Court.

"Section 213, as amended, will enable a Magistrate after commitment made, and after further proceedings taken under that section, to cancel a commitment, if, on the evidence so taken, he finds that the charge is unsustainable.

"Section 225 (2) requires that any objection to the form of a charge shall be made at the earliest opportunity; and that if not so made, it shall not be sustainable, so as to prevent miscarriage of justice on such technical matters. Several reported cases show the necessity for such a rule.

"The amendments of sections 227—231 will settle the law in regard to the powers of a Court to add to the charges before it. Some reported cases show that the law has been differently interpreted in this respect, and it is proposed now to make it clear.

"The illustration to section 236 will serve to show that statements made by a witness, which are both contradictory and irreconcilable, constitute the offence of intentionally giving false evidence, and may form the subject of a charge in the alternative, the judgments of the High Court having differed in this respect.

"Several attempts have already been made to prevent abuse from the exercise of the right of re-calling the witnesses for the prosecution for purposes of cross-examination, but the intention of the Legislature is still evaded. It has been found that, even after a full cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution, the right is successfully claimed for the purpose of going over the same ground as that followed in the previous cross-examination; and that witnesses are re-summoned for that purpose. A second cross-examination, under such circumstances, is unnecessary for the purposes of a fair trial. It causes only a mischievous waste of time, and is certainly harassing to persons obliged to appear as witnesses a second time before a Magistrate. The amendment of this section is intended to prevent such a practice, and the amendment of section 257 has the same object in view.

"The present law does not declare at what place a Court of Session shall sit. Section 269 (2), while declaring that such Courts shall sit as at present, will enable a Local Government, by general or special order, to fix another place, either for the ordinary sitting of such a Court, or for any particular trial.

"Section 388 enables a Court to suspend execution of a sentence of imprisonment passed in default of payment of a fine while a warrant for distress for levy of the fine is being executed, and it provides that a bond, with or without sureties, may be taken. But it does not provide for a case in which a sentence of imprisonment can only be passed if the fine cannot be realised. It is proposed to include such a case within this section.

"The modification of section 391 has been suggested to prevent a short sentence of imprisonment being passed with an additional sentence of whipping. Such a sentence is inappropriate for one who has been previously convicted; and the practice has, moreover, sometimes caused a serious embarassment when a short sentence of imprisonment may have been served before the term of appeal has expired, or an appeal has been heard, for then the sentence of whipping which has been suspended to allow an appeal cannot be executed, and the person so sentenced is entitled to release, and cannot be re-arrested, should his appeal be dismissed, so that the whipping may be inflicted. The sentence of whipping, therefore, becomes inoperative. The proposed amendment will, it is expected, prevent the occurrence of such cases, and will also require a Court to pass an appropriate sentence of imprisonment if an additional sentence of whipping is considered to be necessary.

"Concurrent jurisdiction is conferred by section 435 on Sessions Judges and certain Magistrates in regard to revision. Sub-section 4 will prevent an application for the exercise of such powers to be made to a second of such officers if it has been unsuccessful in the first instance. It should be made only direct to the High Court.

"Section 439 (5) will prevent a person who has the right of appeal from applying to a Court of Revision without having recourse to the Appellate Court; and if he does not appeal, he will not be able to apply for an order in revision.

"Section 465 (3) will enable a Court to record the evidence of witnesses relating to the trial of a person which cannot be held because he is found to be incapable of making his defence by reason of unsoundness of mind in the same way as section 522 provides in the case of an accused person who may have absconded. Unless this can be done, it may happen that, when the trial is held, such evidence may be lost.

"After proceedings have been taken by a Court for certain offences such as voluntarily giving false evidence or forgery specified in section 195, and the case has been referred to a Magistrate to proceed as on a complaint made by such Court, it has been considered undesirable that a Court of Revision should interfere with the powers of a Magistrate to act, any more than it can do so in proceedings on a complaint in other cases. Hence the proposed amendment to section 476 to prevent the intervention of a Court of Revision.

"The amendment of section 514 will enable proceedings to be taken against the estate of a deceased surety, but only if the bond has been forfeited during his life-time.

"Section 517, as amended, will enable a Court to pass orders in respect of any document or other property before it. The present law seems unduly to limit the exercise of such a power, and it seems necessary to give a Court discretion to act generally in such matters.

"The interpretation of section 520 by the High Courts has been that, while it gives a Superior Court power on appeal or revision to set aside or modify an order by a Subordinate Court in regard to the disposal of a document or other property produced before it in an inquiry or trial, it does not enable such Court to enforce its order by directing restoration of such document or property if the order so set aside or modified has been carried out. The amendment of section 520 proposes to remedy this.

"The present practice of requiring an application to the High Court for the transfer of a case to be made only by motion supported by affidavit or affirmation, except when made by the Advocate-General, has been found to be inconvenient. Such applications are sometimes made direct by the Judicial Officers concerned and with the consent of the parties. Sub-section (3) proposes to give the High Court discretion to act on such references.

"The power of requiring a Court to stay proceedings on notice given that it is intended to make an application to the High Court for the transfer of the case or appeal is often abused for the purpose only of delay and otherwise prejudicing the course of justice. It is proposed by section 526 (8) to give the Court discretion in such matters, when it has reason to believe that this is the object.

"These are the principal amendments which the Bill before the Council proposes to make. I have abstained from referring to other matters for reasons already stated, but they will all be considered in due course before any alteration in the present Code becomes law, and possibly some of them may form the subject of debate on the report of the Select Committee. In the end we hope that a substantial and lasting improvement in the present law may result. I have no hesitation in expressing my entire concurrence in the remarks which have fallen from the Hon'ble Member who is in charge of the Bill regarding the over-minute character of our Codes of Procedure which has unfortunately too often tended to embarass the prompt action of our Courts. It is, however, too late to regard this as an open question, even if it were possible to remedy this defect with due regard to the conditions of this country and the capacity of our Courts. What the object of the Legislature has always been is to lay down an intelligible procedure so as to ensure a fair trial; and though it has thought proper to be somewhat over-precise in regard to details which, to a professional lawyer, may appear to be unnecessary and cumbersome, it should be borne in mind that those who are called upon to preside in our Magistrates' Courts are often with little experience of such matters. In undertaking this task it is impossible entirely to provide against obscurity in expressing the law or for cases in which, from a variety of circumstances or conditions, different interpretations of the law may be suggested and adopted. It is therefore incumbent on those on whom the responsibilities of legislation have devolved from time to time to solve the difficulties which have occurred in practice by settling the law and expressing it in clearer terms. It is with this object that nearly all the amendments contained in this Bill have been proposed. But with all these minutiæ of detail it should be recollected that the Legislature contemplates and expects that substantial justice shall be done, for it has declared in the Code of Criminal Procedure that no error, omission or irregularity in any technical matter shall be proper ground for setting aside or modifying a finding, sentence or order of a Court of competent jurisdiction, unless it has occasioned a failure of justice."

No. 1141.—The Right Hon'ble the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council directs the publication of the subjoined letter from the Adjutant-General in India, submitting under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief a despatch from Major-General A. G. Yeatman-Biggs, C.B., commanding Kohat and Kurram Valley, of the action at the Ublan Pass on 27th August 1897.

2. The Governor-General in Council entirely concurs with His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in his approbation of the conduct of the troops during the operation.

No. 845-F, "Disturbances," dated Simla, the 20th September 1897.

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department.

I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to forward herewith a report* from Major-General A. G. Yeatman-Biggs, commanding Kohat and Kurram Valley, giving details of the action of the Ublan Pass on the 27th August 1897, and to request that Government may be pleased to treat the same as a despatch.

* Forwarded with letter No. 362-K, dated 1st September 1897, from the Lieutenant-General Commanding the Forces, Punjab.

2. In submitting this report, His Excellency wishes to express his approbation of the manner in which Major-General Yeatman-Biggs conducted the operations, and of the gallant behaviour and endurance of the troops under his command.

No. 362-K, "Field Operations—Kohat," dated Murree, the 1st September 1897.

From—LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR G. B. WOLSELEY, K.C.B., Commanding the Forces, Punjab,

To—The Adjutant-General in India.

I have the honour to forward, for the information of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, the accompanying report by Major-General Yeatman-Biggs, C.B., on the operations at the Ublan Pass on the 27th August 1897.

2. These operations seem to have been skilfully conducted, and reflect credit on the General Officer Commanding and the troops under his orders.

3. The gallant behaviour of Subadar Akbar Khan, 2nd Punjab Infantry, is specially noticeable, and I recommend that he be admitted to the 3rd class of the Order of Merit.

4. With reference to Private No. 4196, Philip Crain, 1st Battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers, reported missing, the recovery of his body has since been reported in telegram No. 96-A, Daily, of 30th August 1897, from General Officer Commanding, Kohat, to Deputy Adjutant-General, Punjab Command, which was repeated to you.

No. "Operations—Ublan Pass," dated Kohat, the 28th August 1897.

From—MAJOR-GENERAL A. G. YEATMAN-BIGGS, C.B., Commanding Kohat and Kurram Valley,

To—The Deputy Adjutant-General, Punjab Command.

I have the honour to submit the following report of yesterday's operations at the Ublan Pass, a brief report of which was wired to you.

2. At 7 P.M. on the 26th August, I received warning that the Firoz Khels, Utman Khels and Bizotis intended to attack in the Kohat direction.

3. At 8 P.M. I reinforced the Muhammadzai Fort with one company, 2nd Punjab Infantry, under Captain L. E. Cooper.

4. The enemy attacked about 9 o'clock, capturing the Police Post and killing one man, Border Police, and wounding one Jemadar and two others.

5. On receiving this information, I determined to follow up and, if possible, to punish the raiders. I therefore ordered No. 9 Field Battery, Royal Artillery, 2 Companies Royal Scots Fusiliers, 2nd Punjab Infantry and one squadron, 3rd Punjab Cavalry, to march off at 4 o'clock on the morning of the 27th instant, so as to be at the entrance to the pass at dawn.

6. Soon after daylight I followed up the enemy and found they were occupying the Kotal of the Ublan Pass about three miles from the Muhammadzai Post.

7. I brought up the Battery at about 7 A.M. It came into action at 2,100 yards and opened a slow and careful fire with shrapnel, searching the Kotal from end to end, and especially shelling the main Sangar.

8. When the enemy appeared to be driven off the Kotal, the 2nd Punjab Infantry were sent forward to attack at about 7-30 A.M.

9. Two companies of the 2nd Punjab Infantry moved along the heights on the right of the valley. The hills on the left were inaccessible to our troops.

10. Two companies, Royal Scots Fusiliers, followed in support of the 2nd Punjab Infantry.

11. The advance was comparatively unopposed from the front, as the Artillery had cleared the Kotal, and from the right, as the flanking party drove the enemy off the hill. From the left flank, however, there was a certain amount of fire from sharp shooters, well posted among inaccessible crags.

12. Volleys were fired at them and occasional shrapnel without much effect. The fire of these sharp shooters was exceedingly accurate, and to it may be attributed nearly the whole of the casualties. The enemy retreated north across the Bara river. I did not think it wise to follow them further, as the men were very much exhausted by the very severe climb and the heat of the sun.

13. I gave the order to retire at 10-30 A.M. This was well and carefully carried out, the Royal Scots Fusiliers covering the first portion of the retirement.

14. The advanced companies of the 2nd Punjab Infantry in the main attack were led by Captain L. E. Cooper and Lieutenant Elsmie, the flanking companies being commanded by Captain Eales and the regiment itself by Colonel Sturt, who brings to my special notice the gallant and efficient leading of Captain Cooper and Lieutenant Elsmie. Colonel Sturt led his regiment to the attack in a very effective manner.

15. The fire of the battery under Major Wedderburn was kept up on the crest line of the Kotal and on the Sangar over the heads of the advancing Infantry as long as possible without danger to them. The fire was very accurate and the result good.

16. I attach Army Form B-103, and regret that amongst the small list of casualties, so large a proportion of officers should have been included. I especially wish to bring to notice the admirable manner in which Surgeon-Captains W. G. Beyts, Army Medical Service, and H. Bamfield, Indian Medical Service, attended to the wounded under fire during both the advance and retirement.

17. The path down being too precipitous for any dhoolie, Surgeon-Captain Beyts carried Lieutenant North of the Scots Fusiliers for a considerable distance down the hill on his back. Subadar Akbar Khan of the 2nd Punjab Infantry was severely wounded in the arm on the way up, yet notwithstanding this, he continued to lead his company to the crest of the Kotal, and remained with them until the end of the retirement. Such fine soldier-like conduct is, in my opinion, deserving of some special recognition.

The private traffic continues to exhibit rapid progress. In the year under review, there was a rise of 342,589 in the number of private messages and of Rs. 91,872 in their value.

The State inland telegrams exhibit a decrease of 3,476 or 0·58 per cent. in number and of Rs. 1,38,158 or 10·95 per cent. in value.

The number of private inland telegrams increased by 295,367 and their value by Rs. 2,63,105, equivalent to 8·46 and 7·57 per cent., respectively.

In foreign private telegrams there was an increase of 47,222 over the figures for the previous year in number and a decrease of Rs. 1,71,233 in value.

The revenue from trans-Indian traffic rose to Rs. 9,98,197 in the year under review, thus exceeding by Rs. 2,66,644 the figure of Rs. 7,31,553, at which the revenue stood in 1890-91 prior to the reduction in the transit rates.

9. The following table gives the percentages of traffic in number and value due to each class of message:

13. The strength of the signalling establishment at the close of the year was 3,704, of whom 1,703 were departmental officers, 324 British military signallers and 1,655 postal clerks.

14. The following table shows the average time intervals taken in the transmission of telegrams (excluding deferred) over some of the principal main routes during the last five years. The average of the average time intervals was the same as in the preceding year :

Calcutta to Rangoon ...			40	0	32		26	0	28	0	22
Average of averages ...		0	30	0	27	0	23

The marked improvement in speed between Calcutta and Rangoon is attributed partly to fairly favourable weather and to the consequent absence of any very serious interruptions.

The high time intervals between Bombay and Calcutta, Bombay and Madras, and Calcutta and Madras are attributed to severe storms and heavy floods during the months of July and August which did much damage to the telegraph lines. To the same causes is mainly attributable the falling off in speed between Bombay and Karachi, and Calcutta and Karachi.

15. The number of complaints received relating to the Indian Telegraph Department was 1,774 equivalent to 0·032 per cent. of the total number of paid messages ; 968 of these were admitted. Of those admitted, 190 applied to non-delivery, 261 to delay, and 283 to mistakes. The number of messages that for various causes could not be delivered, amounted to 17,102 equivalent to 0·275 per cent. of the total number received for transmission.

16. The total number of interruptions to communications amounted to 2,295, which shows a slight increase over the previous year, there being an increase also in the total duration of the interruptions.

17. The number of telegraphic money orders rose to 145,833 from 129,912 in the previous year.

In addition to the figures given above the total number of orders sent to and received from Ceylon during the year under review amounted to 12,112 as compared with 8,183 during 1895-96 and 4,546 during 1894-95.

18. The Inland Press telegrams sent numbered 26,462, of the value of Rs. 1,00,939, against 24,892 valued at Rs. 96,168 in the previous year.

The Foreign Press messages numbered 3,601 and the Indian share of the charges thereon amounted to Rs. 20,330.

19. As regards electrical improvements, experiments in simultaneous Morse and vibrator working over a single wire were still being carried on.

The arrangement devised by Mr. Melhuish, referred to in the review of the report for 1895-96, by means of which intermediate offices can be worked without alteration of connections on long duplex lines proved of great assistance during the monsoons when the cables across the Ganges near Patna failed, and all Tirhut traffic had to pass vid Bankipore, the Mokameh cable, Mozufferpore and Chupra.

20. On the 31st December 1896 there were 1,676 subscribers and 1,655 exchange connections to the Telephone Companies at Bombay, Calcutta, Kurrachee, Madras, Moulmein and Rangoon. There were also 36 exchanges and 296 exchange connections under the control of the Telegraph Department.

21. The telegraph line from Taungyi to Kengtung, 235 miles, of which 123 miles were erected during 1895-96, was completed during the year under review.

The gutta-percha Indo-Ceylon cable across Palk Straits was entirely replaced by a brass taped cable which was brought into use on 15th March 1897.

22. The telegraph lines in Kashmir which were being managed and worked by the Indian Telegraph Department have been finally and completely taken over as part of the Imperial system.

23. Mr. S. P. W. V. Luke, C.I.E., late Deputy Director General of Telegraphs, and Mr. B. T. Ffinch, C.I.E., Director-in-Chief, Indo-European Telegraph Department, were deputed to represent the Government of India at the International Telegraph Conference held at Buda-Pesth during June and July 1896.

The principal changes affecting India adopted by the Conference are summarised below. The changes took effect from 1st July 1897:

(i) An increase in the length of a permissible word in telegrams wholly in plain language, as distinguished from telegrams wholly in code, or partly in code and partly in plain language, 15 letters being allowed as the maximum, instead of 10 as heretofore.

(ii) An increase in the number of figures and signs permissible as one word when written in series, as regards every class of telegram, five characters being counted as a word, in place of three as heretofore.

(iii) The counting as one word of the Sender's Special Instructions, if written in the authorised abridged form.

(iv) The exclusion of Sundays in the limit of 72 hours allowed for obtaining or giving corrections to telegrams by means of Paid Service Advices.

(v) Substantial reductions in the rates between India and East and South Africa, including Mauritius, as also between India and the Straits, China and Japan.

The obligatory use of the Berne Official Vocabulary was also indefinitely postponed.

24. In paragraph 84 of the Director General's report reference is made to the difficulties experienced during the prevalence of the bubonic plague and the Government of India have pleasure in acknowledging the efforts of the Staff of the Department in carrying on their duties under exceptionally trying circumstances, and especially the services of Mr. Nigel Jones, Superintendent in charge of the Central Telegraph Office, Bombay, which have been very favourably noticed by the Director General.

The Government of India also desire to record their appreciation of the services rendered by Mr. P. V. Luke, C.I.E., Deputy Director General, who retired from the Department a few days before the close of the year, during which he represented the Government of India on the International Telegraph Conference at Buda-Pesth and officiated for three months as Director General. The services of other officers of the Department which have been mentioned in paragraph 85 of the Director General's report have also been noted with satisfaction.

25. The Administration Report was received from the Director General of Telegraphs on 25th August, about the same date as last year. It has been carefully prepared, and presents results which the Governor General in Council considers highly satisfactory and creditable to the administration of the Director General, as well as to the working of the staff of the Department.

ORDER.—Ordered, that a copy of this Review and of the Report be forwarded to the Secretary of State and to the Local Governments and Administrations noted on the margin, and to the Government of Ceylon for information. Also that a copy of the Review be forwarded to the Director General of Telegraphs for information.

The Governments of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the Punjab and Burma.
The Chief Commissioners of the Central Provinces, Assam and Coorg.
The Residents at Hyderabad and in Mysore.
The Agents to the Governor General in Central India, Rajputana, and Baluchistan.

Ordered also that a copy of the Review and of the Report and Appendices A, B and F be forwarded to the Home Department of the Government of India for information, and that the Review be published in Part I of the Gazette of India.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the Week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, October 9th, 1897.

During the week under review the weather has been quiet and settled over North-West India, it was showery during the first-half of the week over the west of the Peninsula and fine during the second-half, it was stormy and very rough and rainy over the Bay and North-East India and Burma during the first-half and quiet and fine during the second-half of the week. The principal feature in the weather has been the cyclonic storm which, at the close of the previous week, had developed to a considerable disturbance and lay off the Ganjam coast between Vizagapatam and Gopalpur. On the first day of the week the storm was close to Gopalpur, thence it advanced to the neighbourhood of Chaibassa by the morning of the 4th October, reached Patna by the morning of the 5th and there filled up during the day. It occasioned heavy rain over the region immediately affected by it and moderate rain over Burma. When the storm disappeared the weather cleared, and fine weather prevailed throughout the whole country during the latter half of the week. The rainfall accompanying the storm occasioned a reduction of temperature below the normal in Bengal, Assam and part of the North-West Provinces and of Madras during the beginning or middle of the week, but in general the heat over India was excessive, and for the whole country for the whole week there was an average abnormal excess of 1°·0.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, October 3rd.—Pressure had decreased over the greater part of the country, and the storm which was shown off the Ganjam coast at the close of the previous week had grown deeper. At Gopalpur, near which station the centre lay, the barometer marked 29·389 inches and was about 0·3 inch below the average. The winds over all parts of the country, except the north-west, were influenced by the storm and circulated cyclonically around it. Over the northern half of the Bay the wind was blowing with the force of a gale. Rain had been general and in places heavy over Burma, Bengal, the north Madras districts and the west of the Peninsula. Cocanada, Vizagapatam, Saugor Island, Barisal and Akyab reported between 3 inches and 5 inches. The mean temperature had been generally above the normal, but around the northern coasts of the Bay, as well as over the south of the Peninsula, the heat had been less than usual.

Monday, October 4th.—The barometer had risen fast over Ganjam and fallen fast over west Bengal, and the cyclonic storm had moved northward and lay between Sambalpur and Chaibassa. The surrounding gradients were steep, and strong cyclonic winds and gales prevailed, except in the extreme north-west of India. Rain had fallen over the same districts as on the 3rd and in addition had extended to the east of the North-Western and Central Provinces and North Bombay. Heavyish rain had been received all over North-East India and Arakan, and the fall had likewise been heavy along the west coast of the Peninsula. The mean temperature had been lower than usual over Assam, Bengal, Arakan and Madras, but elsewhere the excess of heat was unchanged.

Tuesday, October 5th.—The barometer had fallen over Burma and Northern India—rapidly in Bihar—and risen over Southern and Central India—rapidly in Orissa and the east of the Central Provinces. The cyclonic storm had reached the neighbourhood of Patna and the cyclonic circulation of the winds was central around that station. The barometric gradients were still rather steep, but the storm was apparently beginning to fill up. Rain had fallen over the same area as on the preceding day, but the amounts had been larger—more particularly in Bihar. The weather was hotter than usual over North-West and Central India, Burma and Madras and cooler than usual elsewhere. At Benares the abnormal deficiency was as much as 8°.

Wednesday, October 6th.—The barometer had risen in all parts of India, though it had fallen in Burma. The rise had been rapid to very rapid over Bengal and the Gangetic Plain, and the cyclonic storm had filled up. Pressure was now highest in Malabar and lowest in the Indus Valley. The winds were south-easterly over Bengal and generally between west and north-west elsewhere. The force had decreased and was light or moderate. General rain had fallen over North-East India and Burma and showers over the Peninsula and some central districts. The amounts had again been heavy in Bengal and Bihar. The mean temperature was largely below the normal over Bengal and Bihar and slightly below over north Bombay, but elsewhere the heat was greater than usual. At Benares, Patna and Darbhanga the abnormal defect of temperature was 6½°.

Thursday, October 7th.—Pressure had changed only slightly in most parts of the country. Pressure was highest over the west of the Peninsula and lowest at the head of the Bay, but barometric readings were becoming very uniform. The wind was south-easterly on the Bombay coast and generally between west and north-west elsewhere, but in Lower Bengal calms were reported. There had been no general rain. The mean temperature had been low over the Bombay Presidency as well as over Bengal and the east of the North-West Provinces. Elsewhere the heat had been greater than usual—more particularly over the Punjab and Central Burma.

Friday, October 8th.—The barometric changes had again been slight. Pressure was high over the west of the Peninsula, low over the west of the Punjab and relatively low over the Bay. The pressure differences were small and the winds rather variable. Scattered showers had been received, except over the North-West Provinces, the Punjab and Sind. The mean temperature had been low over the Bombay Presidency and the west of Bengal.

Saturday, October 9th.—Pressure had increased almost everywhere, the changes in parts of North-West and of North-East India having been brisk. Pressure was even more uniform than on the preceding day. The winds were variable or light from between north-west and west. Calms were reported over Bengal. Showers had been received fairly generally over Burma and a few scattered showers in Rajputana and the Peninsula. The mean temperature had been low over north Bombay and Rajputana.

Temperature.—The distribution of temperature relatively to the normal had agreed closely with the distribution of rainfall. Thus the heavy rain which accompanied the storm in its passage northward from Ganjam to North Bihar was followed by a reduction of temperature below the normal average over north Madras, Bengal, Assam and the east of the North-West Provinces, while, on the contrary, the other provinces which were beyond the influence of the storm experienced a normal or excessive temperature. Similarly in north Bombay and Rajputana the occurrence of showers over that area towards the close of the week was promptly followed by a fall of temperature to below the average.

The following table gives the temperature data for the week:

The average temperature of the whole country was about 1° above the normal average on all days of the week. The provincial variations show that in Bengal, Bombay, Central India, Gujarat and Madras the mean temperature of the week was about normal, but that in all other provinces it was excessive, the excess being greatest and nearly 3° in the Punjab.

The following are the highest maximum temperatures recorded on each day :

Rain.—The rainfall during the week under review has differed in some important respects from the rainfall of the past few weeks. For some time past general showery conditions have occasioned general and widespread rainfall moderately uniform in amount, but in the present week the fall of rain has been largely connected with a cyclonic storm and has hence been to a great extent concentrated over the area affected by the storm, leaving other parts of the country comparatively rainless. The storm crossed the Ganjam coast during the third and thence passed northward or north-north-eastward into north Bihar where it filled up. The rainfall returns show that rain fell in Lower Burma and Arakan on each day of the week, and in Central and Upper Burma mainly on the two first and two last days of the week ; in Assam, Bengal, Bihar and the east of the North-West Provinces the rainfall all occurred during the first four days of the week (due to the advance of the storm mentioned above), the last three days being fine ; in the centre and west of the North-West Provinces and the whole of the Punjab the weather was fine throughout ; in the west and south of the Peninsula the first four days were showery and the remainder of the week fine ; in the west and centre of the Central Provinces there were only a few scattered showers during the week, but in the east of these provinces there was moderate rain from the storm which caused the rainfall in Bengal, etc. In Ganjam the rainfall occurred on the first three days, while in other parts of Madras only a few scattered showers were reported. The rainfall table at the close of the summary shows that during the week under review there has been actually or practically no rain over the following thirteen divisions : the North-West Provinces (West), all the Punjab divisions, Berar, the Central Provinces (West), Sind, Baluchistan and perhaps the East Coast [North (a)]. In all the remaining divisions effective rain has been received which varied in amount from 8·11 inches in the Bengal Hills, 5·46 inches in the North-West Provinces (East Submontane), 5·25 inches in North Bihar, 5·01 inches in North Bengal and 5·37 inches in the Assam Hills to 0·12 inch in the North-West Provinces (Hills), 0·14 inch in West Rajputana and 0·18 inch in Hyderabad (South). The actual rainfall of the week differed considerably from the normal rainfall, the principal difference consisting of a large excess over part of North-East India due to the rainfall accompanying the cyclonic storm and of a moderate excess in North Bombay due to local causes. The third column of the table shows that the average actual rainfall of the week was in excess of the normal in twenty-six of the rainfall divisions, the most marked cases of excess being 5·65 inches in the Bengal Hills, 4·47 inches in the east submontane division of the North-West Provinces, 3·69 inches in North Bihar, 3·00 inches in North Bengal, 3·01 inches in the Assam Hills, 2·87 inches in the east of the North-West Provinces and 2·73 inches in the East Coast (North). The rainfall of the week was less than usual in thirty of the rainfall divisions, but the amount of the deficiency was small compared with the amount of the excess and exceeded one inch, only in Tenasserim, Central Burma, the East Coast [North (a)], Central Madras and the south of the East Coast.

The three concluding columns of the table exhibiting the state of the seasonal rainfall show that the monsoon rainfall up to date has been excessive

(by 20 per cent. or more of the normal) in sixteen of the rainfall divisions, it has been deficient (by 20 per cent. or more of the normal) in four of the divisions and has been approximately normal in the remaining thirty-seven divisions. The numbers last week were fifteen divisions in excess, six in defect and thirty-five with the normal rainfall. The four divisions exhibiting a deficiency this week are—Upper Burma, the Assam Hills, the Submontane Punjab and Baluchistan.

The following are the principal large totals recorded during the week under review:

Madras.—For week ending 9th October.—Rainfall during the week very heavy in Ganjam, Vizagapatam, and Godavari; elsewhere light and considerably below the average expected in the period. Water-supply for drinking purposes is ample; for irrigation it is generally sufficient, except in the extreme south. Agricultural operations are general; harvests are extending; outturn generally middling to average, but ragi (Eleusine coracana) in Northern Circars bad to middling. Pasture is generally available and sufficient to supplement the supply of fodder which is still short. Condition of cattle is improving in the Deccan; elsewhere generally normal. Prices are generally slightly easier. Prospects are generally encouraging. The numbers on relief were:—relief workers—14,949 men, 32,121 women, 9,517 children; total 56,587 in the Deccan and Ganjam. Bombay.—For week ending 11th October.—Rain slight in Gujarat; good in the Deccan, Karnatak, and Konkan, except in parts of Kanara and Ratnagiri, where it was heavy; more rain wanted in parts of Belgaum and Kanara. Standing crops are thriving generally, except in parts of Thar and Parkar, Poona, and Ahmednagar where they are damaged by rain. Locusts caused damage in seven talukas of Shikarpur and Hyderabad; three of Thar and Parkar, two of Upper Sind frontier; slight in three of Karachi. Reaping of early crops commenced in Gujarat, Konkan and parts of Sind, the Deccan, Rajkot, and Baroda. Preparations for late crops commenced in Karachi, Shikarpur, Hyderabad, Khandesh, and Baroda, and sowings in Upper Sind frontier, Panch Mahals, Broach, the Deccan, Karnatak, and Rajkot. Condition of agricultural stock is improving in Khandesh, Ahmednagar, Sholapur, Bijapur, and Belgaum; healthy elsewhere, except in one taluka of Thana. Prices continue high in Karachi, Surat, and Nasik; rising in Upper Sind frontier; falling in Khandesh; stationary in Panch Mahals. Prices in affected districts are:—Belgaum 12$\frac{1}{16}$, Bijapur 11$\frac{1}{16}$, Sholapur 9, Ahmednagar 8$\frac{5}{8}$, Poona 9¼, Nasik 9$\frac{15}{16}$, Satara 9¼, Khandesh 9½, and Dharwar 12$\frac{3}{4}$ seers per rupee. Total number on relief 277,965.

Bengal.—For week ending 11th October.—There was general rain at the beginning of the week; the fall being very heavy in many parts of the Province, especially in the extreme north. The winter rice crop has everywhere been benefited by the rain and is doing well. The rain has also facilitated the preparation of land for the spring crops which is in active progress. The harvesting of the early autumn crops including jute is being rapidly completed. Sugarcane generally promises to be a good crop. The price of common rice is reported to have fallen in several districts. Relief works remain open in Manbhum only, where the average price of common rice upon which the famine wage is calculated is 8½ seers per rupee. Gratuitous relief is still being given in Manbhum and Khulna and to a small extent in Patna and Hazaribagh. The numbers on Government relief on Saturday, the 9th October, were—Khulna 3,082, Patna 88, Hazaribagh 148, Manbhum 11,863; total 15,181 against 18,018 in the preceding week. The numbers relieved from the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund were—Khulna 990, Champaran 711, Bhagalpur 972, Sonthal Parganas 1,306; total 3,979 against 7,658 in the preceding week. The above totals are distributed as follows:—relief workers—men 4,662, women 2,469, children 216; total 7,347. In poor-houses and kitchens—men 519, women 840, children 2,539; total 3,898. North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 13th October.—Rain fell in most districts during the week. Gorakhpur recorded over 9 inches; Jaunpore over 7 inches; Azamgarh and Fyzabad over 5 inches; and Basti over 4 inches. In most of the remaining districts the showers were light. The standing crops are doing well. Harvesting of autumn crops continues. Preparation of land for spring sowings in active progress. Sowings commenced in some districts. Locusts appeared in a few districts and caused slight damage. The numbers in receipt of relief on Saturday, the 9th October, in fifteen districts officially recognised as distressed were as follows:—Etawah 2,331, Cawnpore 3,113, Fatehpur 120, Banda 20,527, Hamirpur 12,586, Allahabad 34,247, Jhansi 6,624, Jalaun 5,565, Mirzapur 287, Family Domains of Maharaja of Benares 1,277, Jaunpur 50, Azamgarh 88, Lucknow 18,067, Unao 4,710, Rai Bareli 108, Hardoi 7,240; total 116,940. This total is distributed as follows among the various methods of relief prescribed by the Famine Code which are in operation:—employed on relief works—nil; relieved as dependants—nil; relieved in poor-houses—3,200; relieved under other provisions of the Famine Code, including 44,047 from the Charitable Relief Fund, 113,740; total 116,940. The numbers relieved in two districts which are under observation and not officially recognised as distressed were on the same date as follows:—relieved on test works—nil; relieved in poor-houses—604; relieved under other provisions of the Famine Code, including 1,333 from the Charitable Relief Fund, 9,987; total 10,591. The grand total in receipt of relief on the last day of the week was therefore 127,531. Supplies and fodder are sufficient. Prices are falling. The price of the staple grain on which the famine wage was based varied from 9⅞ to 15½ seers per rupee in the districts officially recognised as distressed. The district of Agra has been removed from the list of distressed districts, and Muttra and Kheri have been removed from the list of districts under observation. or where such document or other thing is not known to the Court to be in the possession of any person,

106. (1) Whenever any person accused of rioting, assault or other breach of the peace, or of abetting the same, or of assembling armed men or taking other unlawful measures with the evident intention of committing the same, or any person accused of committing criminal intimidation is convicted of such offence before a High Court, a Court of Session or the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class, and such Court is of opinion that it is necessary to require such person to execute a bond for keeping the peace, such Court may, at the time of passing sentence on such person, order him to execute a bond for a sum proportionate to his means, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace during such period, not exceeding three years, as it thinks fit to fix.

(2) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, the bond so executed shall become void.

(3) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision.

B.—Security for keeping the Peace in other cases and Security for Good Behaviour.

Security for keeping the peace in other cases.

107. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class receives information that any person within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction is likely to commit a breach of the peace, or that is likely to disturb the public tranquillity, or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace, the Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace for such period not exceeding one year as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Procedure of Magistrate, etc., not empowered to act under section 107.

108. (1) When any Magistrate not empowered to proceed under section 107, or a Court of Session or High Court, has reason to believe that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by detaining such person in custody, such Magistrate or Court may issue a warrant for his arrest (if he is not already in custody or before the Court), and may send him before a Magistrate empowered to deal with the case under section 107.

(2) A Magistrate before whom a person is sent under this section may in his discretion detain such person in custody until the completion of the inquiry hereinafter prescribed.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences.—Chapter VIII.—Of Security for keeping the Peace and for Good Behaviour.—Sections 110-117.)

with a view to committing any cognizable offence, or (b) that there is within such limits a person who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself, such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period not exceeding twelve months as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Security for good behaviour from habitual offenders.

110. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, or Subdivisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government receives information that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction—

(b) is by habit a receiver of stolen property knowing the same to have been stolen, or

(c) habitually protects or harbours thieves or aids in the concealment or disposal of stolen property, or

(d) habitually commits mischief or extortion or attempts so to do, or

(e) in order to the committing of extortion habitually puts or attempts to put persons in fear of injury, or

such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period not exceeding three years as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

Proviso as to European vagrants.

111. The provisions of sections 109 and 110 do not apply to European British subjects in cases where they may be dealt with under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874.

112. When a Magistrate acting under section 107, section 109 or section 110 deems it necessary to require any person to show cause under such section, he shall make an order in writing, setting forth the substance of the information received, the amount of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be in force, and the number, character and class of sureties (if any) required.

113. If the person, in respect of whom such order is made is present in Court, it shall be read over to him, or, if he so desires, the substance thereof shall be explained to him.

114. If such person is not present in Court, the Magistrate shall issue a summons requiring him to appear, or, when such person is in custody, a warrant directing the officer in whose custody he is to bring him before the Court:

Provided that whenever it appears to such Magistrate, upon the report of a police-officer or upon other information (the substance of which report or information shall be recorded by the Magistrate), that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person, the Magistrate may at any time issue a warrant for his arrest.

Copy of order under section 112 to accompany summons or warrant.

115. Every summons or warrant issued under section 114 shall be accompanied by a copy of the order made under section 112, and such copy shall be delivered by the officer serving or executing such summons or warrant to the person served with, or arrested under, the same.

116. The Magistrate may, if he sees sufficient cause, dispense with the personal attendance of any person called upon to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond for keeping the peace, and may permit him to appear by a pleader.

Inquiry as to truth of information.

117. (1) When an order under section 112 has been read or explained under section 113 to a person present in Court, or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with, or in execution of, a summons or warrant issued under section 114, the Magistrate shall proceed to inquire into the truth of the information upon which he has acted, and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary.

(2) Such inquiry shall be made, as nearly as may be practicable where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons-cases; and, where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant cases, except that no charge need be framed.

(3) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person is an habitual offender may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences.—Chapter VIII.—Of Security for keeping the Peace and for Good Behaviour.—Sections 118-123.)

118. (1) If, upon such inquiry, it is proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, with or without sureties, the Magistrate shall subject to the provisions of sub-section (2) make an order accordingly :

Provided—

first—that no person shall be ordered to give security of a nature different from, or of an amount larger than, or for a period longer than that specified in the order made under section 112 secondly—that the amount of every bond shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and shall not be excessive :

thirdly—that, when the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made is a minor, the bond shall be executed only by his sureties :

(2) (a) The Magistrate may, if he shall think fit, instead of making such order, order that such person shall be placed under police supervision for a term not exceeding three years :

(b) Any person who has been placed under police supervision by such order may at any time apply to a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate to have an order for security for his good behaviour taken in lieu of police supervision.

(c) If such Magistrate is of opinion that the order for police supervision is necessary, he may reject the application, but he shall record his reasons for so doing.

(d) If such Magistrate is of opinion that security may, without hazard to the community or any other person, be taken in lieu of the order for police supervision, he shall make an order for security as herein provided.

Discharge of person informed against.

119. If, on an enquiry under section 117, it is not proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, the Magistrate shall make an entry on the record to that effect, and, if such person is in custody only for the purposes of the inquiry, shall release him, or, if such person is not in custody, shall discharge him.

C.—Proceedings in all cases subsequent to Order to furnish Security.

121. The bond to be executed by any such person shall bind him to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, as the case may be, and in the latter case the commission or attempt to commit, or the abetment of, any offence punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond.

122. A Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered under this chapter, on the ground that for reasons to be recorded by the Magistrate, such surety is an unfit person.

Imprisonment in default of security.

123. (1) If any person ordered to give security under section 106 or section 118 does not give such security on or before the date on which the period for which such security is to be given commences, he shall, except in the case next hereinafter mentioned, be committed to prison, or, if he is already in prison, be detained in prison until such period expires or until within such period he gives the security to the Court or Magistrate who made the order requiring it or to the officer in charge of the jail in which the person so ordered is detained.

(2) If the security be tendered to the officer in charge of the jail, he shall forthwith refer the matter to the Court or Magistrate who made the order and shall await the orders of such Court or Magistrate.

Proceedings when to be laid before High Court or Court of Session.

(3) When such person has been ordered by a Magistrate to give security for a period exceeding one year, such Magistrate shall if such person does not give such security as aforesaid, issue a warrant directing him to be detained in prison pending the orders of the Court of Session, or, if such Magistrate be a Presidency Magistrate, pending the orders of the High Court ; and the proceedings shall be laid, as soon as conveniently may be, before such Court.

(4) Such Court, after examining such proceedings and requiring any further information or evidence which it thinks necessary, may pass such order on the case as it thinks fit :

(6) Imprisonment for failure to give security for good behaviour may be rigorous or simple as the Court or Magistrate in each case directs.

124. (1) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this chapter, whether by the order of such Magistrate or that of his predecessor in office, or of some subordinate Magistrate, may be released without hazard to the community or to any other person, he may order such person to be discharged or he may make an order reducing the amount of the security or the number of sureties or the time for which security has been required.

128. Duty of officer commanding troops required by Magistrate to disperse assembly.

(2) Every such officer shall obey such requisition in such manner as he thinks fit; but in so doing he shall use as little force, and do as little injury to person and property, as may be consistent with dispersing the assembly and arresting and detaining such persons.

(2) The Magistrate to whom an accused person is forwarded under this section may, whether he has or has not jurisdiction to try the case, from time to time, authorise the detention of the accused in such custody as such Magistrate thinks fit, for a term not exceeding fifteen days. Release of accused when evidence deficient.

169. (1) If, upon an investigation under this chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station that there is not sufficient evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion to justify the forwarding of the accused to a Magistrate, such officer shall, if such person is in custody, release him on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, as such officer may direct, to appear, if and when so required, before a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police report and to try the accused or commit him for trial.

(2) When the officer in charge of a police-station forwards an accused person to a Magistrate or takes security for his appearance before such Magistrate under this section, he shall send to such Magistrate any weapon or other article which it may be necessary to produce before him, and shall require the complainant (if any) and so many of the persons who appear to such officer to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case as he may think necessary, to execute a bond to appear before the Magistrate in time and manner thereby directed and prosecute or give evidence (as the case may be) in the matter of the charge against the accused.

(3) If the Court of the District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate be mentioned in the bond, such Court shall be held to include any Court to which such Magistrate may refer the case for inquiry or trial, provided reasonable notice of such reference be given to such complainant or persons.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions.—Chapter XVIII.—Of Inquiry into Cases triable by the Court of Session or High Court.—Sections 213-219.)

213. (1) When the accused, on being required to give in a list under section 211, has declined to do so, or when he has given in such list and the witnesses (if any) included therein whom the Magistrate desires to examine have been summoned and examined under section 212, the Magistrate may make an order committing the accused for trial by the High Court or the Court of Session (as the case may be), and (unless the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate) shall also record briefly the reasons for such commitment.

Order of commitment.

(2) If the Magistrate, after hearing the witnesses for the defence, is satisfied that there is no sufficient cause to justify the commitment of the accused, he may cancel the charge and discharge the accused.

214. If any person (not being an European British subject) is accused before a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate of having committed an offence conjointly with an European British subject who is about to be committed for trial, or to be tried, before the High Court on a similar charge arising out of the same transaction, and the Magistrate finds that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, he shall commit him for trial before the High Court, and not before the Court of Session.

Person charged outside presidency-towns jointly with European British subject.

215. A commitment once made under section 213 or section 214 by a competent Magistrate or by a Court of Session under section 477, or by a Civil or Revenue Court under section 478, can be quashed by the High Court only, and only on a point of law.

Quashing commitments under section 213 or 214.

216. When the accused has given in any list of witnesses under section 211 and has been committed for trial, the Magistrate shall summon such of the witnesses included in the list, as have not appeared before himself, to appear before the Court to which the accused has been committed:

Summons to witnesses for defence when accused is committed.

Provided that, where the accused has been committed to the High Court, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, leave such witnesses to be summoned by the Clerk of the Crown, and such witnesses may be summoned accordingly:

Provided also that if the Magistrate thinks that any witness is included in the list for the purpose of vexation or delay, or of defeating the ends of justice, the Magistrate may require the accused to satisfy him that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the evidence of such witness is material, and, if he is not so satisfied, may refuse to summon the witness (recording his reasons for such refusal), or may before summoning him require such sum to be deposited as such Magistrate thinks necessary to defray the expense of obtaining the attendance of the witness and all other proper expenses.

Refusal to summon unnecessary witness unless deposit made.

217. (1) Complainants and witnesses for the prosecution and defence, whose attendance before the Court of Session or High Court is necessary and who appear before the Magistrate, shall execute before him bonds binding themselves to be in attendance when called upon at the Court of Session or High Court, to prosecute or to give evidence, as the case may be.

Bond of complainants and witnesses.

(2) If any complainant or witness refuses to attend before the Court of Session or High Court, or execute the bond above directed, the Magistrate may detain him in custody until he executes such bond, or until his attendance at the Court of Session or High Court is required, when the Magistrate shall send him in custody to the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

Detention in custody in case of refusal to attend or to execute bond.

218. (1) When the accused is committed for trial, the Magistrate shall issue an order to such person as may be appointed by the Local Government in this behalf, notifying the commitment, and stating the offence in the same form as the charge, unless the Magistrate is satisfied that such person is already aware of the commitment and the form of the charge.

Commitment when to be notified.

and shall send the charge, the record of the inquiry and any weapon or other thing which is to be produced in evidence, to the Court of Session or (where the commitment is made to the High Court) to the Clerk of the Crown or other officer appointed in this behalf by the High Court.

Charge, etc., to be forwarded to High Court or Court of Session.

(2) When the commitment is made to the High Court and any part of the record is not in English, an English translation of such part shall be forwarded with the record.

English translation to be forwarded to High Court.

219 (1) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, summon and examine supplementary witnesses after the commitment and before the commencement of the trial, and bind them over in manner hereinbefore provided to appear and give evidence.

Power to summon supplementary witnesses.

(2) Such examination shall, if possible, be taken in the presence of the accused, and, where the Magistrate is not a Presidency Magistrate, a copy of the evidence of such witnesses shall, if the accused so require, be given to him free of cost.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceeding in Prosecutions.—Chapter XVIII.—Of Inquiry into Cases triable by the Court of Session or High Court.—Section 220.—Chapter XIX.—Of the Charge.—Section 221-224.)

220. Until and during the trial, the Magistrate shall, subject to the provisions of this Code regarding the taking of bail commit the accused, by warrant, to custody.

Custody of accused pending trial.

CHAPTER XIX.

OF THE CHARGE.

Form of Charges.

221. (1) Every charge under this Code shall state the offence with which the accused is charged.

Charge to state offence.

(2) If the law which creates the offence gives it any specific name, the offence may be described in the charge by that name only.

Specific name of offence sufficient description.

(3) If the law which creates the offence does not give it any specific name, so much of the definition of the offence must be stated as to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

How stated where offence has no specific name.

(4) The law and section of the law against which the offence is said to have been committed shall be mentioned in the charge.

(5) The fact that the charge is made is equivalent to a statement that every legal condition required by law to constitute the offence charged was fulfilled in the particular case.

What implied in charge.

(6) In the presidency-towns the charge shall be written in English; else where it shall be written either in English or in the language of the Court.

Language of charge.

(7) If the accused has been previously convicted of any offence, and it is intended to prove such previous conviction for the purpose of effecting the punishment which the Court is competent to award, the fact, date and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge. If such statement is omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed.

Previous conviction when to be set out.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged with the murder of B. This is equivalent to a statement that A's act fell within the definition of murder given in sections 209 and 300 of the Indian Penal Code; that it did not fall within any of the general exceptions of the same Code; and that it did not fall within any of the five exceptions to section 300, or that, if it did fall within Exception 1, one or other of the three provisoes to that exception applied to it. 1860.

(b) A is charged, under section 326 of the Indian Penal Code, with voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B by means of an instrument for shooting. This is equivalent to a statement that the case was not provided for by section 335 of the Indian Penal Code, and that the general exceptions did not apply to it. XLV of 1860.

(c) A is accused of murder, cheating, theft, extortion, adultery or criminal intimidation, or using a false property-mark. The charge may state that A committed murder, or cheating, or theft, or extortion, or adultery, or criminal intimidation, or that he used a false property-mark, without reference to the definitions of those crimes contained in the Indian Penal Code; but the sections under which the offence is punishable must, in each instance, be referred to in the charge. XLV of 1860.

(d) A is charged, under section 184 of the Indian Penal Code, with intentionally obstructing a sale of property offered for sale by the lawful authority of a public servant. The charge should be in those words.

222. The charge shall contain such particulars as to the time and place of the alleged offence, and the person (if any) against whom, or the thing (if any) in respect of which, it was committed, as are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

Particulars as to time, place and person.

223. When the nature of the case is such that the particulars mentioned in sections 221 and 222 do not give the accused sufficient notice of the matter with which he is charged, the charge shall also contain such particulars of the manner in which the alleged offence was committed as will be sufficient for that purpose.

When manner of committing offence must be stated.

Illustrations.

(a) A is accused of the theft of a certain article at a certain time and place. The charge need not set out the manner in which the theft was effected.

(b) A is accused of cheating B at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A cheated B.

(c) A is accused of giving false evidence at a given time and place. The charge must set out that portion of the evidence given by A which is alleged to be false.

(d) A is accused of obstructing B, a public servant, in the discharge of his public functions at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A obstructed B in the discharge of his functions.

(e) A is accused of the murder of B at a given time and place. The charge need not state the manner in which A murdered B.

(f) A is accused of disobeying a direction of the law with intent to save B from punishment. The charge must set out the disobedience charged and the law infringed.

224. In every charge words used in describing an offence shall be deemed to have been used in the sense attached to them respectively by the law under which such offence is punishable.

Words in charge taken in sense of law under which offence is punishable.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions.—Chapter XIX.—Of the Charge.—Sections 225-232.)

225. (1) No error in stating either the offence or the particulars required to be stated in the charge, and no omission to state the offence or those particulars, shall be regarded at any stage of the case as material, unless the accused was in fact misled by such error or omission, and it has occasioned a failure of justice.

Effect of errors.

(2) Any objection to a charge for want of particularity or for otherwise not conforming to the requirements of this Chapter shall be taken at the earliest opportunity, and, if not so taken, no finding, sentence or order shall be reversed or altered on appeal or revision by any superior Court on the ground of the informality or insufficiency of the charge.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged, under section 242 of the Indian Penal Code, with "having been in possession of counterfeit coin, having known at the time when he became possessed thereof that such coin was counterfeit," the word "fraudulently" being omitted in the charge. Unless it appears that A was in fact misled by this omission, the error shall not be regarded as material.

(b) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge, or is set out incorrectly. A defends himself, calls witnesses, and gives his own account of the transaction. The Court may infer from this that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating is not material.

(c) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge. There were many transactions between A and B, and A had no means of knowing to which of them the charge referred, and offered no defence. The Court may infer from such facts that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating was, in this case, a material error.

(d) A is charged with the murder of Khoda Baksh on the 21st January, 1882. In fact, the murdered person's name was Haidar Baksh, and the date of the murder was the 20th January, 1882. A was never charged with any murder but one, and had heard the inquiry before the Magistrate, which referred exclusively to the case of Haidar Baksh. The Court may infer from these facts that A was not misled, and that the error in the charge was immaterial.

(e) A was charged with murdering Haidar Baksh on the 20th January, 1882, and Khoda Baksh (who tried to arrest him for that murder) on the 21st January, 1882. When charged for the murder of Haidar Baksh, he was tried for the murder of Khoda Baksh. The witnesses present in his defence were witnesses in the case of Haidar Baksh. The Court may infer from this that A was misled and that the error was material.

226. When any person is committed for trial without a charge, or with an imperfect or erroneous charge, the Court, or, in the case of a High Court, the Clerk of the Crown, may frame a charge, or add to or otherwise alter the charge, as the case may be, having regard to the rules contained in this Code as to the form of charges.

Procedure on commitment without charge or with imperfect charge.

227. (1) Any Court may alter or add to any charge at any time before judgment is pronounced, or, in the case of trials before the Court of Session or High Court, before the verdict of the jury is returned or the opinions of the assessors are expressed.

Court may alter charge.

228. If the charge framed or alteration made under section 226 or section 227 is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is not likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused in his defence or the prosecutor in the conduct of the case, the Court may, in its discretion, after such charge or alteration has been framed or made, proceed with the trial as if the new or altered charge had been the original charge.

When trial may proceed immediately after alteration.

229. If the new or altered charge is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused or the prosecutor as aforesaid, the Court may either direct a new trial or adjourn the trial for such period as may be necessary.

When new trial may be directed, or trial suspended.

230. If the offence stated in the new or altered charge is one for the prosecution of which previous sanction is necessary, the case shall not be proceeded with until such sanction is obtained, unless sanction has been already obtained for a prosecution on the same facts as those on which the new or altered charge is founded.

Stay of proceedings if prosecution of offence in altered charge requires previous sanction.

231. Whenever a charge is altered or added by the Court after the commencement of the trial the prosecutor and the accused shall be allowed to recall or re-summon, and examine with reference to such alteration, any witness who may have been examined, and also to call any further witness whom the Court may think to be material.

Recall of witnesses when charge altered.

232. (1) If any Appellate Court, or the High Court in the exercise of its powers of revision or of its powers under Chapter XXVII, is of opinion that any person convicted of an offence was misled in his defence by the absence of a charge or by an error in the charge, it shall direct a new trial to be had upon a charge framed in whatever manner it thinks fit.

Effect of material error.

(2) If the Court is of opinion that the facts of the case are such that no valid charge could be preferred against the accused in respect of the facts proved, it shall quash the conviction.

Illustration.

A is convicted of an offence under section 196 of the Indian Penal Code, upon a charge which omits to state that he knew the evidence which he corruptly used or attempted to use as true or genuine, was false or fabricated. If the Court thinks it probable that A had such knowledge, and that he was misled in his defence by the omission from the charge of the statement that he had it, it shall direct a new trial upon an amended charge; but if it appears probable from the proceedings that A had no such knowledge, it shall quash the conviction.

Joinder of Charges.

Separate charges for distinct offences.

233. For every distinct offence of which any person is accused there shall be a separate charge, and every such charge shall be tried separately, except in the cases mentioned in sections 234, 235, 236 and 239.

Illustration.

A is accused of a theft on one occasion, and of causing grievous hurt on another occasion. A must be separately charged and separately tried for the theft and causing grievous hurt.

Three offences of same kind within year may be charged together.

234. (1) When a person is accused of more offences than one of the same kind committed within the space of twelve months from the first to the last of such offences, he may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, any number of them not exceeding three.

(2) Offences are of the same kind when they are punishable with the same amount of punishment under the same section of the Indian 1860. Penal Code or of any special or local law.

(3) When the accused is charged with criminal breach of trust or criminal misappropriation of money, it shall not be necessary to specify the particular items misappropriated or the exact dates of misappropriation.

Trial for more than one offence.

235. (1) If, in one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction, more offences than one are committed by the same person, he may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, every such offence.

Offence falling within two definitions.

(2) If the acts alleged constitute an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, the person accused of them may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, each of such offences.

Acts constituting one offence, but constituting when combined a different offence.

(3) If several acts, of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence, constitute when combined a different offence, the person accused of them may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, the offence constituted by such acts when combined, or for any offence constituted by any one, or more, of such acts.

(4) Nothing contained in this section shall

(a) A rescues B, a person in lawful custody, and in so doing causes grievous hurt to C, a constable in whose custody B was. A may be charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 225 and 333 of the Indian Penal XLV of 1860.
Code.

(b) A commits house-breaking by day with intent to commit adultery, and commits, in the house so entered, adultery with B's wife. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 454 and 497 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(c) A entices B, the wife of C, away from C, with intent to commit adultery with B, and then commits adultery with her. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 498 and 497 of the Indian Penal Code.

(d) A has in his possession several seals, knowing them to be counterfeit and intending to use them for the purpose of committing several forgeries punishable under section 466 of the Indian Penal Code. A may be XLV of 1860.
separately charged with, and convicted of, the possession of each seal under section 473 of the Indian Penal Code.

(e) With intent to cause injury to B, A institutes a criminal proceeding against him, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such proceeding; and also falsely accuses B of having committed an offence, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such charges. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, two offences under section 211 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(f) A, with intent to cause injury to B, falsely accuses him of having committed an offence, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such charge. On the trial, A gives false evidence against B, intending thereby to cause B to be convicted of a capital offence. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 211 and 194 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(g) A, with six others, commits the offences of rioting, grievous hurt and assaulting a public servant endeavouring in the discharge of his duty as such to suppress the riot. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 147, 325 and 152 of the Indian XLV of 1860.
Penal Code.

(h) A threatens B, C and D at the same time with injury to their persons with intent to cause alarm to them. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, each of the three offences under section 506 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

The separate charges referred to in Illustrations (a) to (h) respectively may be tried at the same time.

(j) Several stolen sacks of corn are made over to A and B, who know they are stolen property, for the purpose of concealing them. A and B thereupon voluntarily assist each other to conceal the sacks at the bottom of a grain-pit. A and B may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 411 and XLV of 1860
414 of the Indian Penal Code.

(k) A exposes her child with the knowledge that she is thereby likely to cause its death. The child dies in consequence of such exposure. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 317 XLV of 1860.

(m) A commits robbery on B, and in doing so voluntarily causes hurt to him. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 323, 392 and 394 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

236. If a single act or series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, the accused may be charged with having committed all or any of such offences, and any number of such charges may be tried at once; or he may be charged in the alternative with having committed some one of the said offences.

Where it is doubtful what offence has been committed.

Illustrations.

(a) A is accused of an act which may amount to theft, or receiving stolen property, or criminal breach of trust or cheating. He may be charged with theft, receiving stolen property, criminal breach of trust and cheating, or he may be charged with having committed theft, or receiving stolen property, or criminal breach of trust or cheating.

(b) A states on oath before the Magistrate that he saw B hit C with a club. Before the Sessions Court A states on oath that B never hit C. A may be convicted of intentionally giving false evidence, although it cannot be proved which of these contradictory statements was false.

237. (1) If, in the case mentioned in section 236, the accused is charged with one offence, and it appears in evidence that he committed a different offence for which he might have been charged under the provisions of that section, he may be convicted of the offence which he is shown to have committed, although he was not charged with it.

When a person is charged with one offence, he can be convicted of another.

(2) When the accused is charged with an offence, he may be convicted of having attempted to commit that offence, although the attempt is not separately charged.

Illustration.

A is charged with theft. It appears that he committed the offence of criminal breach of trust, or that of receiving stolen goods. He may be convicted of criminal breach of trust, or of receiving stolen goods (as the case may be), though he was not charged with such offence.

238. (1) When a person is charged with an offence consisting of several particulars, a combination of some only of which constitutes a complete minor offence, and such combination is proved, but the remaining particulars are not proved, he may be convicted of the minor offence, though he was not charged with it.

When offence proved included in offence charged.

(2) When a person is charged with an offence and facts are proved which reduce it to a minor offence, he may be convicted of the minor offence, although he is not charged with it.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise a conviction of any offence referred to in section 198 or section 199 when no complaint has been made as required by that section.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged, under section 407 of the Indian Penal Code, with criminal breach of trust in respect of property entrusted to him as a carrier. It appears that he did commit criminal breach of trust under section 406 in respect of the property, but that it was not entrusted to him as a carrier. He may be convicted of criminal breach of trust under section 406. XLV of 1860.

(b) A is charged, under section 325 of the Indian Penal Code, with causing grievous hurt. He proves that he acted on grave and sudden provocation. He may be convicted under section 335 of that Code. XLV of 1860.

239. When more persons than one are accused of the same offence or of different offences commited in the same transaction, or when one person is accused of committing any offence, and another of abetment of, or attempt to commit, such offence, they may be charged and tried together or separately, as the Court thinks fit; and the provisions contained in the former part of this chapter shall apply to all such charges.

What persons may be charged jointly.

Illustrations.

(a) A and B are accused of the same murder. A and B may be charged and tried together for the murder.

(b) A and B are accused of a robbery, in the course of which A commits a murder with which B has nothing to do. A and B may be tried together on a charge, charging both of them with the robbery, and A alone with the murder.

(c) A and B are both charged with a theft, and B is charged with two other thefts committed by him in the course of the same transaction. A and B may be both tried together on a charge, charging both with the one theft, and B alone with the two other thefts.

240. When a charge containing more heads than one is made against the same person, and when a conviction has been had on one or more of them, the complainant, or the officer conducting the prosecution, may, with the consent of the Court, withdraw the remaining charge or charges, or the Court of its own accord may stay the inquiry into, or trial of, such charge or charges. Such withdrawal shall have the effect of an acquittal on such charge or charges, unless the conviction be set aside, in which case the said Court (subject to the order of the Court setting aside the conviction) may proceed with the inquiry into or trial of the charge or charges so withdrawn.

Withdrawal of remaining charges on conviction on one of several charges

CHAPTER XX.

OF THE TRIAL OF SUMMONS-CASES BY MAGISTRATES.

241. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of summons-cases.

Procedure in summons-cases.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions.—Chapter XX.—Of the Trial of Summons-cases by Magistrates.—Sections 242-250.)

Substance of accusation to be stated.

242. When the accused appears or is brought before the Magistrate, the particulars of the offence of which he is accused shall be stated to him, and he shall be asked if he has any cause to show why he should not be convicted; but it shall not be necessary to frame a formal charge.

Conviction on admission of truth of accusation.

243. If the accused admits that he has committed the offence or offences of which he is accused or any of them, his admission shall be recorded as nearly as possible in the words used by him; and, if he shows no sufficient cause why he should not be convicted, the Magistrate may convict him accordingly.

Procedure when no such admission is made.

244. (1) If the accused does not make such admission, the Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution, and also to hear the accused and take all such evidence as he produces in his defence.

(2) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, on the application of the complainant or accused, issue process to compel the attendance of any witness or the production of any document or other thing.

(3) The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application, require that his reasonable expenses, incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial, be deposited in Court.

Acquittal.

245. (1) If the Magistrate upon taking the evidence referred to in section 244 and such further evidence (if any) as he may, of his own motion, cause to be produced and (if he thinks fit) examining the accused, finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal.

Sentence.

(2) If he finds the accused guilty, he shall pass sentence upon him according to law.

Finding not limited by complaint or summons.

246. A Magistrate may, under section 243 or section 245, convict the accused of any offence triable under this chapter which from the facts admitted or proved he appears to have committed, whatever may be the nature of the complaint or summons.

Non-appearance of complainant.

247. If the summons has been issued on complaint, and upon the day appointed for the appearance of the accused, or any day subsequent thereto to which the hearing may be adjourned, the complainant does not appear, the Magistrate shall, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained acquit the accused, unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing of the case to some other day.

Withdrawal of complaint.

248. If a complainant, at any time before a final order is passed in any case under this chapter, satisfies the Magistrate that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw his complaint, the Magistrate may permit him to withdraw the same, and shall thereupon acquit the accused.

Power to stop proceedings when no complainant.

249. In any case instituted otherwise than upon complaint, a Presidency Magistrate, a Magistrate of the first class, or, with the previous sanction of the District Magistrate, any other Magistrate, may, for reasons to be recorded by him, stop the proceedings at any stage without pronouncing any judgment either of acquittal or conviction, and may thereupon release the accused.

Frivolous or vexatious accusations.

250. (1) If, in any case instituted by complaint as defined in this Code, or upon information given to a police-officer or to a Magistrate, a person is accused before a Magistrate of any offence triable by a Magistrate, and the Magistrate by whom the case is instituted discharges or acquits the accused and is satisfied that the accusation against him was frivolous or vexatious, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, by his order of discharge or acquittal, direct the person upon whose complaint or information the accusation was made to pay to the accused, or to each of the accused where there are more than one, such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, as the Magistrate thinks fit:

[Act X of 1882 s. 5

Provided that, before making any such direction, the Magistrate shall—

(a) record and consider any objection which the complainant or informant may urge against the making of the direction, and,

(b) if the Magistrate directs any compensation to be paid, state in writing, in his order of discharge or acquittal, his reasons for awarding the compensation.

(2) Compensation of which a Magistrate has ordered payment under sub-section (1) shall be recoverable as if it were a fine:

Provided that, if it cannot be recovered, the imprisonment to be awarded shall be simple, and for such term not exceeding thirty days, as the Magistrate directs.

(3) A complainant or informant who has been ordered under sub-section (1) by a Magistrate of the second or third class to pay compensation to an accused person may appeal from the order, in so far as the order relates to the payment of the compensation, as if such complainant or informant had been convicted on a trial held by such Magistrate.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions.—Chapter XXI.—Of the Trial of Warrant-cases by Magistrates.—Sections 251-259.)

(4) Where an order for payment of compensation to an accused person is made in a case which is subject to appeal under sub-section (3), the compensation shall not be paid to him before the period allowed for the presentation of the appeal has elapsed, or, if an appeal is presented, before the appeal has been decided.

(5) At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any compensation paid or recovered under this section.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF THE TRIAL OF WARRANT-CASES BY MAGISTRATES.

Procedure in warrant-cases.

251. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of warrant-cases.

Evidence for prosecution.

252. (1) When the accused appears or is brought before a Magistrate, such Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any) and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution.

(2) The Magistrate shall ascertain, from the complainant or otherwise, the names of any persons likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case and to be able to give evidence for the prosecution, and shall summon to give evidence before himself such of them as he thinks necessary.

Discharge of accused.

253. (1) If, upon taking all the evidence referred to in section 252, and making such examination (if any) of the accused as the Magistrate thinks necessary, he finds that no case against the accused has been made out which, if unrebutted, would warrant his conviction, the Magistrate shall discharge him.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a Magistrate from discharging the accused at any previous stage of the case if, for reasons to be recorded by such Magistrate, he considers the charge to be groundless.

Charge to be framed when offence appears proved.

254. If, when such evidence and examination have been taken and made, the Magistrate is of opinion that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence triable under this chapter, which such Magistrate is competent to try, and which, in his opinion, could be adequately punished by him, he shall frame in writing a charge against the accused.

Plea.

255. (1) The charge shall then be read and explained to the accused, and he shall be asked whether he is guilty or has any defence to make.

(2) If the accused pleads guilty, the Magistrate shall record the plea, and may in his discretion convict him thereon.

Defence.

256. (1) If the accused refuses to plead or does not plead, or claims to be tried, he shall be called upon to enter upon his defence and to produce his evidence, and shall, at any time while he is making his defence, be allowed to recall and cross-examine any witness for the prosecution present in the Court or its precincts who has not previously been cross-examined as to the facts constituting the charge.

(2) If the accused puts in any written statement, the Magistrate shall file it with the record.

Process for compelling production of evidence at instance of accused.

257. (1) If the accused applies to the Magistrate to issue any process for compelling the attendance of any witness (whether he has or has not been previously examined in the case) for the purposes of examination or cross-examination, or the production of any document or other thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless he considers that such application should be refused on the ground that it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay, or for defeating the ends of justice. Such ground shall be recorded by him in writing.

(2) When the accused has cross-examined or had the opportunity of cross-examining any witness, the attendance of such witness shall not be compelled under this section unless the Magistrate is satisfied that it is necessary for the purposes of justice.

(3) The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application, require that his reasonable expenses incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial be deposited in Court.

Acquittal.

258. (1) If in any case under this chapter in which a charge has been framed the Magistrate finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal.

Conviction.

(2) If in any such case the Magistrate finds the accused guilty, he shall pass sentence upon him according to law.

Absence of complainant.

259. When the proceedings have been instituted upon complaint, and upon any day fixed for the hearing of the case the complainant is absent, and the offence may be lawfully compounded, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, at any time before the charge has been framed, discharge the accused.
